Great corporation head is amazed at the skill & devotion of Davey Tree Surgeons

Correspondence between W. W. Salmon, President of the General Railway Signal Company, and M. L. Davey, General Manager of the Davey Organization—a message of vital importance to every owner of trees.

GENERAL RAILWAY SIGNAL COMPANY
Principal Offices:
Rochester, N. Y., U. S. A.
W. W. Salmon, President.

New York City, Sept. 29, 1916.

Mr. M. L. Davey, Davey Tree Expert Co., Kent, Ohio.
Dear Mr. Davey:

Enclosed herewith please find my check to your order for $1,081.33 in full for tree surgery on my property at Beechmont, New Rochelle.

Yours very truly, W. W. Salmon.

Kent, Ohio, Oct. 3, 1916.

W. W. Salmon, Esq., "Beechmont," New Rochelle, N. Y.
Dear Mr. Salmon:

Acknowledging your esteemed favor of Sept. 29th, I want to assure you that such a voluntary expression of satisfaction is more than a pleasure—it is an inspiration. The public as a whole has been very gracious to us in return for our conscientious efforts to give Quality First Tree Surgery and honest service.

I believe that most worthy things, especially along the line of organization, are the result of evolution based upon a fundamental policy. Our purpose from the beginning has been to give maximum service, which means perfected methods, high type men and an organization ideal.

Perhaps the thing of first importance is the men—the men who actually do the work. The people whom we serve are not particularly interested in my theories or my knowledge or my ability. They measure the Davey organization by the men whom they see, and rightly so. Consequently, we have endeavored to get the right kind of men.

We go on the theory that "A leopard cannot change his spots." If a man is dishonest, if he is lazy, if he is careless and indifferent, if he lacks intelligence, if he lacks the spirit of co-operation and devotion to his work and his employers—if he lacks these fundamental things, no argument and no appeal and no inducement will make him a good man. We, therefore, eliminate the poor ones as fast as we find them, keeping only those who have in them the qualities which have impressed you. The good ones we boost and encourage and try to inspire as soon as we find that they are good. We pay these good men well and pay them more as soon as they prove they are worth more. The foreman who had charge of your work will be given a raise immediately on the strength of your letter. Is it not reasonable to suppose that he will strive still harder to please every other client? Every man in the Davey organization knows that his advancement depends upon his service and upon no other thing.

While we pay well we demand much in return. If a man fails to live up to our high standard, we do not want him and will not have him. If our service at any time falls below this high standard, we let the offender go and make good to the client. Thus the process of elimination leaves us the good men, those who are intelligent, industrious, honest and devoted to their work.

Our men are all trained in the Davey organization. We take no man's recommendation of himself. He must go through the mill and show us. Every man is responsible to us for his work and his conduct, which is the measure of his service. Thus the client gets through us, the highest possible service—guaranteed service. We, who know values in Tree Surgery, select the man who is to handle your priceless trees and we stand back of it with the whole strength of our organization and reputation.

We have devoted ourselves unceasingly to the perfection of our methods, with the result that our work is in reality practically perfect, both mechanically and scientifically. We maintain our own school at a considerable annual expense for the specific purpose of training our men according to the Davey methods and Davey standard.

Every year we have a Convention, when we bring all of our responsible men together, including foremen, special representatives, officers, students and school faculty. We had our usual Convention last March. We had more than sixty foremen in attendance. The average length of their experience was about five years, with the result that more than three hundred years of actual experience was concentrated, massed, on the problems of Tree Surgery. We had a week's demonstration work, during which time we discussed everything from the most important down to the seemingly trivial things. Everything was put to the test of experience. We wanted no theories. We demanded only the definite results of ripe experience. The result is not only a constantly rising standard, but a very gratifying and valuable uniformity of methods and policy.

We had with us during our last annual Convention, Dr. H. D. House, New York State Botanist, who was formerly Professor in the Biltmore Forestry School. We wanted him here so that he could look us over. He expressed himself as amazed at the character of our organization and said that he could now understand why we had made a success of our work. Among other things he said, "These men would do honor to any institution of learning in America." A thing which greatly impressed him was the fact that our men, these fellows of broad, practical experience, were absolutely unanimous on every vital point.

Then there is the question of organization spirit. Our men have been made to feel that they are engaged in a great work—a work which is altogether worthy of them and the best that is in them. They have been made to realize that their future success is inseparably interwoven with the future and the success of the Davey organization. We have appealed to their self-interest, their desire for success and for financial return. We have shown them that there is only one way for them to advance self-interest, and that is to give devoted service to their Company and its clients. Without the right kind of men such an appeal would be as wasted as a single rain on a desert. With the right kind of men as we have, such an appeal finds ready response, which grows and grows in beauty and in practical utility.

You as a business man know the inspiration which comes from definite achievement, from approaching a fixed goal. I find more satisfaction in this achievement than in the profit which comes from it. I believe that a business ideal is a source of power and serves to draw success as a magnet.

Ten years ago the Davey organization was only a mere handful, doing a business of about ten or twelve thousand dollars per year. Today we have an organization of about three hundred built along the lines which I have indicated. Our business this year will exceed three hundred thousand dollars and I am very glad to say it leaves in its wake an almost general feeling of satisfaction such as you have expressed.

Let me assure you that we very deeply appreciate the opportunity of serving you and the honor of your full confidence and esteem.

Sincerely yours, THE DAVEY TREE EXPERT CO.
M. L. Davey, General Manager.

From Mr. Wm. M. Wood, Pres.
American Woolen Co., Boston, Mass.

"Your work upon my trees bears the mark of expert knowledge, and I am looking forward confidently to the best possible results from your intelligent treatment. Your success in tree preservation makes you a real public benefactor."

From Mr. G. M. Palmer, Pres.
Hubbard Milling Co., Mankato, Minn.

"I was very much pleased with the work of your men on my trees. They seem to understand thoroughly their business and I am sure they have put my trees in first class condition."

From Mr. W. H. Mullins, Pres.
The W. H. Mullins Co., Salem, O.

"The work done by your men on my trees has been very satisfactory and I hope will be the means of prolonging their life for many years."

"It is a pleasure to me, and I feel it a duty, to recommend any work that is done as intelligently as you handled my work here."

Davey Tree

FOR SAFE TREE SURGERY

Rochester, N. Y.,
Nov. 17, 1916.

Mr. M. L. Davey,
General Manager,
The Davey Tree
Expert Co.,
Kent, Ohio.

Dear Mr. Davey:

Please accept my sincere thanks for your most illuminating letter of October 3rd.

Your story, interesting in itself, is most admirably told, though in its telling it appears to me that you have failed to mention the one element without which the "perfected methods, high type men and organization ideal" would not have come into being. That unnamed element I suspect to have been Davey, who first conceived the idea, then determined the methods and later found and inspired with some part of his own enthusiasm the men who are actually carrying out the work.

Shortly after receiving your letter I read it to the department heads of the General Railway Signal Company, while at luncheon, and the interesting discussion that followed led me to show the letter to some of my business friends, who are at the head of companies employing a great many men. In each such instance I have been asked for a copy of the letter — in order that they may have their men read and profit by it.

Will you have the goodness to write me at my home address whether I have your consent to make and send out to my business friends such copies?

Sincerely yours,
W. W. Salmon.

Fig. 1.—See the iron band around the trunk. The tree was splitting apart and a "tree patcher" tried to save it. Temporarily it prevented a catastrophe, but the band was strangling the bark. And the real trouble, which was the decay on the inside, had received no attention whatever and the condition was growing rapidly worse.

Fig. 2.—Davey Tree Surgeons got at the real trouble. They first tied the branches together with ropes to prevent accident while operating. The decay was removed to the last particle, the inside of the cavity was thoroughly sterilized and waterproofed. The mechanical bracing employed demonstrates the finished skill and complete mastery of Davey Tree Surgeons.

Fig. 3.—The filling of a crotch cavity is probably the most trying task confronted by a Tree Surgeon. The filling is subjected to tremendous twisting and strain; it must not only be held firmly in place by the most expert mechanical bracing, but it must also allow for the normal sway of the tree. The sectional filling method aids wonderfully in this accomplishment, but correct mechanical bracing is ultra-important.

Mr. M. L. Davey, Davey Tree Expert Co., Kent, Ohio.
Dear Mr. Davey:

Enclosed herewith please find my check to your order for $1,081.33 in full for tree surgery on my property at Beechmont, New Rochelle.

Yours very truly, W. W. Salmon.

W. W. Salmon, Esq., "Beechmont," New Rochelle, N. Y.
Dear Mr. Salmon:

Acknowledging your esteemed favor of Sept. 29th, I want to assure you that such a voluntary expression of satisfaction is more than a pleasure—it is an inspiration. The public as a whole has been very gracious to us in return for our conscientious efforts to give Quality First Tree Surgery and honest service.

I believe that most worthy things, especially along the line of organization, are the result of evolution based upon a fundamental policy. Our purpose from the beginning has been to give maximum service, which means perfected methods, high type men and an organization ideal.

Perhaps the thing of first importance is the men—the men who actually do the work. The people whom we serve are not particularly interested in my theories or my knowledge or my ability. They measure the Davey organization by the men whom they see, and rightly so. Consequently, we have endeavored to get the right kind of men.

We go on the theory that "A leopard cannot change his spots." If a man is dishonest, if he is lazy, if he is careless and indifferent, if he lacks intelligence, if he lacks the spirit of co-operation and devotion to his work and his employers—if he lacks these fundamental things, no argument and no appeal and no inducement will make him a good man. We, therefore, eliminate the poor ones as fast as we find them, keeping only those who have in them the qualities which have impressed you. The good ones we boost and encourage and try to inspire as soon as we find that they are good. We pay these good men well and pay them more as soon as they prove they are worth more. The foreman who had charge of your work will be given a raise immediately on the strength of your letter. Is it not reasonable to suppose that he will strive still harder to please every other client? Every man in the Davey organization knows that his advancement depends upon his service and upon no other thing.

While we pay well we demand much in return. If a man fails to live up to our high standard, we do not want him and will not have him. If our service at any time falls below this high standard, we let the offender go and make good to the client. Thus the process of elimination leaves us the good men, those who are intelligent, industrious, honest and devoted to their work.

Our men are all trained in the Davey organization. We take no man's recommendation of himself. He must go through the mill and show us. Every man is responsible to us for his work and his conduct, which is the measure of his service. Thus the client gets through us, the highest possible service—guaranteed service. We, who know values in Tree Surgery, select the man who is to handle your priceless trees and we stand back of it with the whole strength of our organization and reputation.

We have devoted ourselves unceasingly to the perfection of our methods, with the result that our work is in reality practically perfect, both mechanically and scientifically. We maintain our own school at a considerable annual expense for the specific purpose of training our men according to the Davey methods and Davey standard.

Every year we have a Convention, when we bring all of our responsible men together, including foremen, special representatives, officers, students and school faculty. We had our usual Convention last March. We had more than sixty foremen in attendance. The average length of their experience was about five years, with the result that more than three hundred years of actual experience was concentrated, massed, on the problems of Tree Surgery. We had a week's demonstration work, during which time we discussed everything from the most important down to the seemingly trivial things. Everything was put to the test of experience. We wanted no theories. We demanded only the definite results of ripe experience. The result is not only a constantly rising standard, but a very gratifying and valuable uniformity of methods and policy.

We had with us during our last annual Convention, Dr. H. D. House, New York State Botanist, who was formerly Professor in the Biltmore Forestry School. We wanted him here so that he could look us over. He expressed himself as amazed at the character of our organization and said that he could now understand why we had made a success of our work. Among other things he said, "These men would do honor to any institution of learning in America." A thing which greatly impressed him was the fact that our men, these fellows of broad, practical experience, were absolutely unanimous on every vital point.

Then there is the question of organization spirit. Our men have been made to feel that they are engaged in a great work—a work which is altogether worthy of them and the best that is in them. They have been made to realize that their future success is inseparably interwoven with the future and the success of the Davey organization. We have appealed to their self-interest, their desire for success and for financial return. We have shown them that there is only one way for them to advance self-interest, and that is to give devoted service to their Company and its clients. Without the right kind of men such an appeal would be as wasted as a single rain on a desert. With the right kind of men as we have, such an appeal finds ready response, which grows and grows in beauty and in practical utility.

You as a business man know the inspiration which comes from definite achievement, from approaching a fixed goal. I find more satisfaction in this achievement than in the profit which comes from it. I believe that a business ideal is a source of power and serves to draw success as a magnet.

Ten years ago the Davey organization was only a mere handful, doing a business of about ten or twelve thousand dollars per year. Today we have an organization of about three hundred built along the lines which I have indicated. Our business this year will exceed three hundred thousand dollars and I am very glad to say it leaves in its wake an almost general feeling of satisfaction such as you have expressed.

Let me assure you that we very deeply appreciate the opportunity of serving you and the honor of your full confidence and esteem.

Sincerely yours, THE DAVEY TREE EXPERT CO.

Dear Mr. Davey:

Please accept my sincere thanks for your most illuminating letter of October 3rd.

Your story, interesting in itself, is most admirably told, though in its telling it appears to me that you have failed to mention the one element without which the "perfected methods, high type men and organization ideal" would not have come into being. That unnamed element I suspect to have been Davey, who first conceived the idea, then determined the methods and later found and inspired with some part of his own enthusiasm the men who are actually carrying out the work.

Shortly after receiving your letter I read it to the department heads of the General Railway Signal Company, while at luncheon, and the interesting discussion that followed led me to show the letter to some of my business friends, who are at the head of companies employing a great many men. In each such instance I have been asked for a copy of the letter — in order that they may have their men read and profit by it.

Will you have the goodness to write me at my home address whether I have your consent to make and send out to my business friends such copies?

Sincerely yours,
W. W. Salmon.

And the real trouble, which was the decay on the inside, had received no attention whatever and the condition was growing rapidly worse.

Fig. 2.—Davey Tree Surgeons got at the real trouble. They first tied the branches together with ropes to prevent accident while operating. The decay was removed to the last particle, the inside of the cavity was thoroughly sterilized and waterproofed. The mechanical bracing employed demonstrates the finished skill and complete mastery of Davey Tree Surgeons.

Fig. 3.—The filling of a crotch cavity is probably the most trying task confronted by a Tree Surgeon. The filling is subjected to tremendous twisting and strain; it must not only be held firmly in place by the most expert mechanical bracing, but it must also allow for the normal sway of the tree. The sectional filling method aids wonderfully in this accomplishment, but correct mechanical bracing is ultra-important.

COAL PRICES FIXED BUT NOT REDUCED

Last week's widely advertised fixing of coal prices, by mine operators in conference with the government, sets figures at exactly what responsible florists have been paying on contracts made since April 1. But it may mean a saving to many small buyers by informing them as to coal dealers' costs.

OPERATORS of bituminous coal mines, in conference with Secretary of the Interior Lane, the Federal Trade Commission and the committee on coal production of the Council of National Defense, June 28 tentatively agreed upon maximum prices to be charged for the output of the mines. The price scale became effective July 1 and will continue until such time as the government commissions have investigated conditions with a view to fixing the maximum charge during the period of the war. Anthracite coal mine operators made a similar agreement.

The result of the conference, in which representatives of practically every mine operator east of the Mississippi river took part, was hailed by the daily newspapers as meaning a reduction of from $1 to $5 per ton in the price of coal to the consumer.

What It Means to Growers.

This may be true in regard to the domestic consumer, but what effect will the action have upon the price to florists?

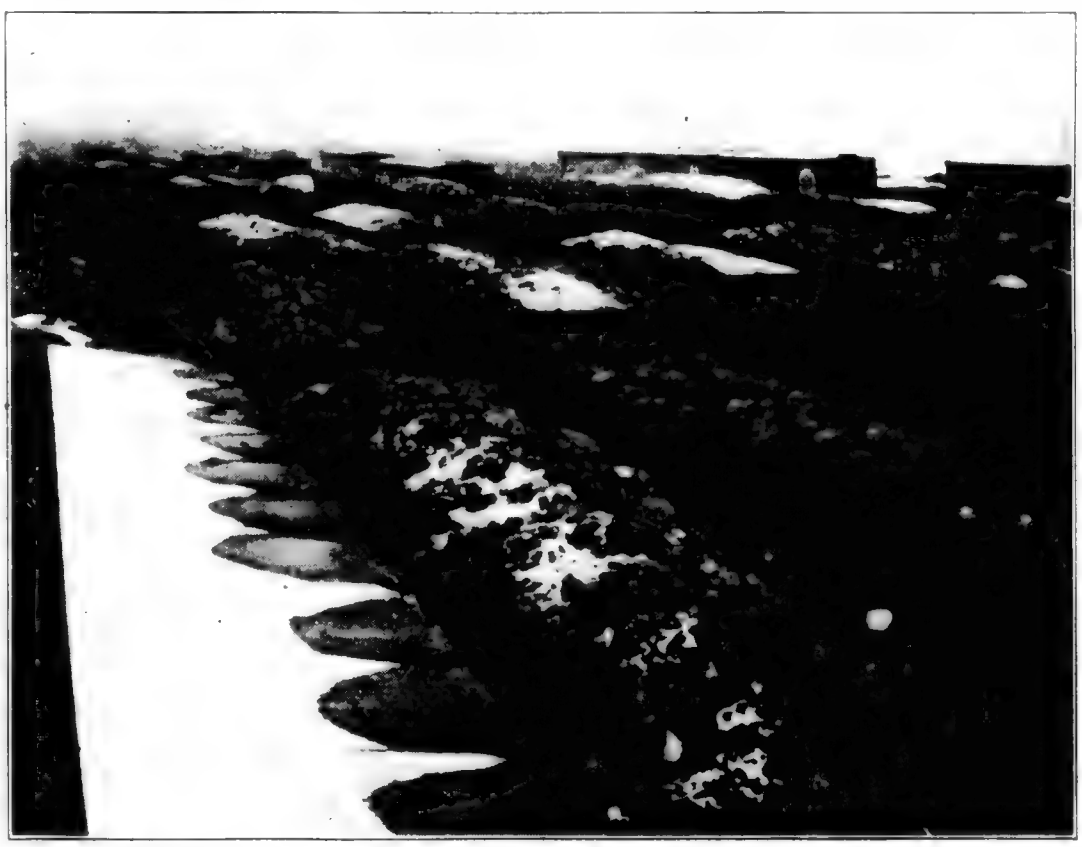
For the large grower, who contracts for his fuel supply, the agreement will have practically no effect.

For the small grower, who buys in the open market as his needs require, the agreement will probably mean lower prices than would otherwise have been demanded but for the fixing of maximum prices.

Growers who use large quantities of fuel already have contracted for their next season's supply; and, it develops, the contract price is the same as the maximum price now agreed on by the operators and the government—it is no reduction at all. However, the fixing of maximum prices will remove the temptation larger prices would have had upon some dealers to default upon their contracts and sell their supply in the open market.

Maximum prices are expected to do away with "premiums." That is, the bonuses that some mine operators have been receiving for their output when the demand was greater than the supply. "Premiums" in some cases have boosted the price to almost double the recognized mine mouth price. And the extra cost has, of course, been paid by the consumer who had not contracted for his supply and who bought in the open market.

There also was an attempt made by the operators to fix the middlemen's profit at 25 cents per ton, no matter how many hands the coal passed through before it reached the consumer. How great effect their action will have upon the wholesalers and retailers is a question. But it will serve to put the onus of high prices upon someone other than the mine operator, who heretofore has been generally blamed.



Maximum mine mouth prices on coal produced in the various bituminous fields are as follows:

Illinois and Indiana, $2.75; Clearfield, Pa., $3; Tennessee, $3; Virginia, $3; West Virginia, $3; Alabama, $3 to $4; Maryland, $3 to $3.50. Added to these prices the consumer will be required to pay transportation charges, the freight from the mines and the hauling cost, plus the middlemen's profit.

Prices Double in a Year

These prices are at least double what was asked one year ago; but they are lower than has been obtained in many instances since January 1. There is the consolation, however, that the grower will know exactly what he will be required to pay for his fuel supply so long as the war lasts.

Mine operators in the West Virginia fields, from which come Pocahontas and New River semi-bituminous, or "smokeless," coal, had already fixed the price of their output at $3 per ton between April 1 and August 1, with an advance of 25 cents per ton on contracts made after the latter date. Many growers who habitually contract for their fuel supplies made contracts at the lower figure. Others believed that the price was exorbitant and that by waiting a lower figure could be obtained. The latter now will have the satisfaction of knowing that they will be required to pay no more than the price fixed, but at the same time will suffer the disappointment of not being able to buy for less.

Now that the price has been fixed and the question of cost settled, the grower is interested in knowing whether or not he will be able to get an adequate supply.

While coal producers and dealers have asserted that the extraordinary demand was the reason for the high price of fuel and that the inability of the railroads and other carriers to transport it from the mines to the points of consumption was the reason for a shortage, many of those who have paid the bills and have had trouble getting coal have been skeptical.

On this point the government officials at Washington were told by one of the coal men at the conference that if there were ample car facilities, "we could cover this country with coal, and that would fix the price."

Mine operators have had and are having considerable difficulty with the labor problem. Men willing to work in coal mines have been and are scarce. Before the war the ranks of the miners were recruited from immigrants. The beginning of hostilities shut off immigration. Those already at work in the mines were attracted from this employment by the better wages paid for unskilled labor in other occupations.

Labor Mine Owners' Problem.

Mine operators have tried to meet the situation by increasing wages. Three times in nine months there have been voluntary increases granted to the miners. Apparently they have not been great enough to hold the men, as there is a shortage of labor in nearly every field. In others there are strikes threatened.

Wages in the West Virginia field have been raised by the action of the United States Steel Co., which owns twelve mines there. The company, fat with war profits, has been giving its employees some of the surplus by increasing wages from time to time. Other coal operators in the same field were forced to do the same or lose their miners.

But, with all these increases, there have been continual desertions of the mines by the men. It is expected, however, that the government will adopt some method by which the mines will be adequately supplied with labor. If the mines are, the estimated possible annual production of 600,000,000 tons of bituminous coal will take care of the needs of the country, and there will be no shortage.

Following the announcement of the action of the mine operators, coal dealers declare that there were numerous cancellations of orders that had been placed by consumers. The attitude of the latter is supposed to be that there is no reason to buy coal in advance of the time of need, as there will be no difference between the price in July and in October.

This action is liable to bring about a fuel famine in the fall, the coal dealers assert. They say that the maximum mine production every week of every month is necessary to produce the coal the country needs. Cessation of demand during the summer is going to make the demand in the fall and winter months just so much greater.

"Consumers expect that the coal mines can produce in the first three or four weeks of the fall their winter's coal supply," said one man in close touch with the mining industry. "They will be disappointed. Unless the consumers keep on buying and storing coal there will be a famine worse than last winter. The demand during the summer has been equal to the supply and there has been accumulated no reserve stocks of coal. Consequently when the increased demand comes there will be no supply to meet it, except what is daily produced by the mines.

Famine in Fall Predicted.

"There is every reason to believe that should the mines be able to satisfy the demand in the fall, there will not be cars enough to transport the coal. When the railroads begin to move the crops, expected to be greater than ever before, and the government requires thousands of cars to transport troops and war supplies to the Atlantic seaboard, the mines are sure to be left without an adequate number of cars. Then the consumer who has waited until the fall months to get his coal supply will be disappointed."

Apparently there is nothing to be gained by waiting to get the fuel supply. And should this analysis of the coal situation now and in the immediate future be near the truth, there appears to be much that can be lost.

Chicago coal dealers, representatives of mines, agree that the maximum price fixing will have a beneficial effect upon the coal situation. They declare that it will be a protection to the legitimate coal man and have a deterrent effect upon the other type of dealer, the latter being blamed in many quarters as the person responsible for the attacks that have been made upon the business as a whole. All retailers under the new agreement will have paid the same price for coal. Consequently they can sell at the same price.

Freight Rate Increase Allowed.

In The Review of April 19, the fuel situation at that time was discussed. It was then predicted that the Interstate Commerce Commission would grant the increase in freight rates asked by the railroads. Since that time the commission had the subject under consideration and June 25 decided to allow the railroads to charge 15 cents per ton more in the district north of the Ohio river and east of the Mississippi river. The increase became effective July 1. This automatically increases the cost of coal to the consumer that much.

The representative of one of the largest mines in the Pocahontas field of West Virginia was asked what he considered a legitimate charge for Pocahontas coal delivered to the consumer by a coal retailer. He asserted that the cost at the mine, plus all transportation charges and $1.20 per ton for wastage, handling and hauling and the retailer's profit, is the basis upon which the retail price is fixed.

Therefore the grower, now that the price of coal at the mines has been fixed, when he goes into the open market for fuel can easily learn whether or not the price the retailer asks him is fair.

COAL PRICES EXORBITANT.

U. S. Will Not Accept Maximum.

When it was announced that maximum prices to be charged for coal at the mines until such a time as the Federal Trade Commission had investigated the cost of coal production had been fixed, there was a belief prevalent that the prices of coal had been reduced. An analysis of the action of the coal operators, however, disclosed that instead of reducing the prices of various kinds of coal, it had merely confirmed the prices already in effect and which florists theretofore had been required to pay. In a few cases the belief that the government had fixed the price stiffened the backbones of some coal dealers, who had been willing up to that time to sell coal at prices less than the maximum fixed.

Members of President Wilson's cabinet quickly issued statements disclaiming that the government had anything to do with fixing the prices announced. Secretary of War Baker, who by virtue of his office is president of the Council of National Defense, characterized the action as a purely voluntary one on the part of the coal operators. He said that the government had made no attempt and had no power to fix the price of coal. In concluding his statement, Secretary Baker said:

Baker Calls Prices Unjust.

"The Federal Trade Commission has been directed by the President to ascertain for his information the costs involved in coal production. The information which I have from that and other sources, I think, justifies me in believing that the price of $3 suggested, or agreed on, as a maximum, is an exorbitant, unjust and oppressive price."

Secretary of the Navy Daniels took a similar view of the situation. He said:

"I am from Missouri; I must be shown. I am not going to pay any price until we know what it costs to produce. We are now making an investigation to see what it costs to produce a ton of coal. Were we to pay $4 at the mine, it probably would cost $5 at the ships. I have ordered them to furnish the coal at a price to be fixed in the future.''

Representing the Council of National Defense in the conference with the coal operators was the coal production committee of the council, of which Francis S. Peabody, a Chicago coal dealer, is chairman. It is now suggested, without any attempt to impugn Mr. Peabody's motives, that a committee composed of coal producers and dealers is naturally in sympathy with the coal trade and its members unconsciously take the coal operators' viewpoint of the situation. It would appear that it would be fairer to the public if disinterested men were on the committee.

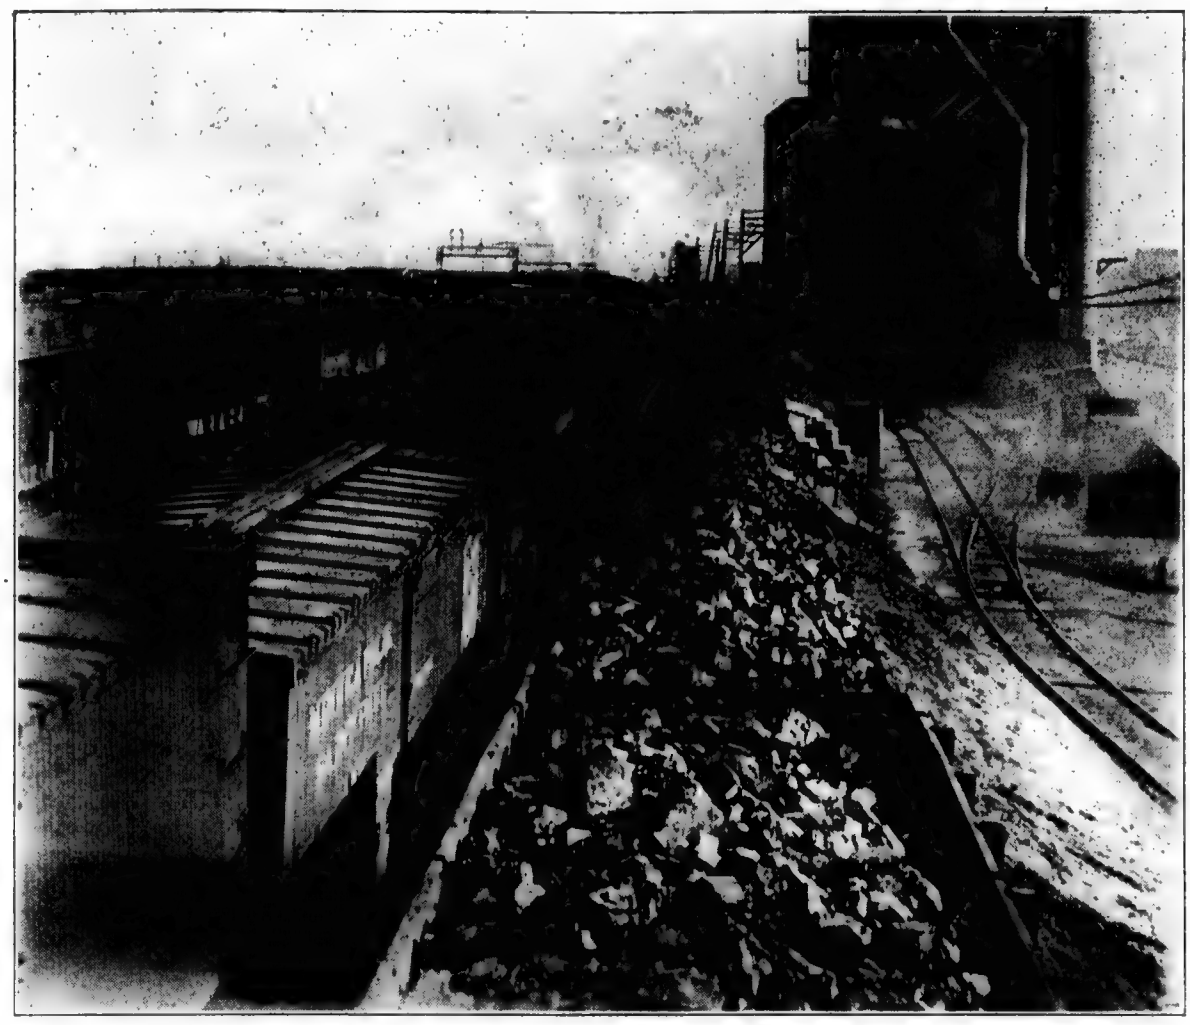
Until the Federal Trade Commission has made its report there appears no possibility of the government interfering with the prices fixed by the coal operators. If the report comes as quickly as most reports of such investigations do, there will be no change in the coal prices for several months, at least.

In the meantime, growers will be required to pay the announced prices if they want to buy coal.

COAL FREIGHT RATES GO UP.

The Interstate Commerce Commission made a ruling June 25 whereby the application for a suspension of the increase in freight rates on coal was refused. This action put into effect July 1 an increase of 15 cents per ton on coal shipped from the bituminous fields of West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kentucky to points north of the Ohio river and east of the Mississippi river.

The decision will increase the price of Pocahontas and New River semi-bituminous, or so-called smokeless coal, 15 cents per ton to the grower. However, the all but prohibitive price the producers are now charging for this class of fuel has turned many consumers in the trade to other fields for their supplies.



The permission for an advance in rates is based upon the showing made before the commission by the railroads that the increased cost of labor and supplies makes the raise necessary.

HAIL AT OTTUMWA.

The heaviest hail ever known at Ottumwa, Ia., fell June 27. It was not thick, but it fell intermittently for a quarter of an hour and in many places pellets went through any glass it struck. C. Kranz, who has 65,000 feet of greenhouse exposure, suffered the breakage of two-thirds of it, and in the houses the plants which were struck by the ice and glass were badly broken down. Mr. Kranz says it was much the worst hail he ever has seen and that it was a venture of great danger to go outdoors at his place, while utterly impossible to stay in the greenhouses. He is reglazing.

HAIL AT CANTON, O.

Canton's heaviest hail storm in recent years, accompanied by a miniature cloudburst, June 24, did serious damage to glass of greenhouses in the west and northwest sections of the city. About two-thirds of the 7,000 square feet of glass operated by O. M. Vail are said to have been demolished, and many panes in the house of C. W. Vail nearby also were broken. About 125 lights were broken in the house of Charles Lindacher, on Tuscarawas street, the storm in that vicinity not being severe. Other losses were suffered by the Brown Floral Co. and Charles F. Blane.

PLENTY OF SURPLUS STOCK.

In response to an appeal inserted in The Review by our secretary, Mr. Ammann, of Edwardsville, I wish to say I could have had ten times the stock I generally use of mums and everything. This to me shows that we florists are close together and are willing to help each other in a time of trouble. It also shows that The Review is read by the trade and is an excellent medium to get in touch with each other.

''PLEASE OMIT FLOWERS.''

I have scrutinized the columns of The Review to find out what florists think of the request frequently seen in published death notices that flowers be omitted at the funeral. I always have wondered what are the actual reasons for such requests, and of late I have taken the pains to inquire. One woman said she did not like the practice because it invariably obligated the family to return favors to people whom they did not care about. Another said she did not favor the custom because it was too expensive; also because it frequently made the bereaved, in cases where the decedent had not been well known, feel badly when there were not so many tributes to their dead as at the burial of another. A woman who had a ''please omit flowers'' notice said that, despite the published reminder, she had received many flowers. She informed me that she placed the flowers in the cellar at the time of her husband's funeral, and that as the flowers wilted upstairs she replaced them with others from downstairs, the source of supply not becoming exhausted until two weeks after the burial. In this case, and probably in many others, the ''please omit flowers'' did a right-about, and from all appearances ''omit'' may as well have read ''send.''

In many cases the replies to my inquiries along these lines have been weak, evasive, with nothing to stand on; but perhaps others in the trade who have sounded the matter have other views.

On several occasions I have heard clergymen in their sermons over the dead say something like this: ''The departed was a stranger to me, but from the many beautiful floral tributes before me he must have been esteemed and loved by many.'' Why should a relative seek to prevent other relatives or friends from paying their last respects to the dead, by means of flowers?

ships. I have ordered them to furnish the coal at a price to be fixed in the future.''

Representing the Council of National Defense in the conference with the coal operators was the coal production committee of the council, of which Francis S. Peabody, a Chicago coal dealer, is chairman. It is now suggested, without any attempt to impugn Mr. Peabody's motives, that a committee composed of coal producers and dealers is naturally in sympathy with the coal trade and its members unconsciously take the coal operators' viewpoint of the situation. It would appear that it would be fairer to the public if disinterested men were on the committee.

Until the Federal Trade Commission has made its report there appears no possibility of the government interfering with the prices fixed by the coal operators. If the report comes as quickly as most reports of such investigations do, there will be no change in the coal prices for several months, at least.

In the meantime, growers will be required to pay the announced prices if they want to buy coal.

COAL FREIGHT RATES GO UP.

The Interstate Commerce Commission made a ruling June 25 whereby the application for a suspension of the increase in freight rates on coal was refused. This action put into effect July 1 an increase of 15 cents per ton on coal shipped from the bituminous fields of West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kentucky to points north of the Ohio river and east of the Mississippi river.

The decision will increase the price of Pocahontas and New River semi-bituminous, or so-called smokeless coal, 15 cents per ton to the grower. However, the all but prohibitive price the producers are now charging for this class of fuel has turned many consumers in the trade to other fields for their supplies.

THE ROCHESTER EXHIBITION.

Much Larger Than National Show.

The largest and most comprehensive display of peonies in the United States this year was held at Rochester, N. Y., June 29 and 30. A large number of single and semi-double varieties were shown, as well as the doubles. Considering the intense heat, the blooms held up well and even those which had been shipped from a distance and kept in cold storage for ten days were good.

Convention Hall annex was elaborately decorated with fireproofed white cheesecloth and greens. Indirect lighting was a great help in distinguishing colors. Many exhibits also were placed on the flag-decorated stage, in the main auditorium. There was dancing and a tea garden was under the direction of the Lady Florists' Society. The show was not so largely attended as it should have been, but undoubtedly was educational to those who saw it.

The committees are to be highly congratulated for the excellent arrangement and display of the show. Edwin P. Wilson was chairman of decorations and staging and was ably helped by many workers.

Out-of-Town Exhibits.

The Babcock Peony Gardens, of Sugar Grove, Pa., had forty varieties of named peonies, three to six in a vase. Mme. Dusel and Gen. Custer were perhaps the most conspicuous varieties.

B. H. Farr, of Wyomissing, Pa., had an exhibit of fifty named varieties, six to eight flowers in each vase. Mme. Boulanger and La Perle were conspicuous.

The Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, L. I., showed forty-two varieties of named peonies, eight to twelve in each vase. These peonies were shipped to Rochester about ten days ahead of the show and put in cold storage. They kept remarkably well at the show. Baroness Schroeder and Dorchester showed up particularly well.

N. A. Hallauer, of Fruitland, N. Y., exhibited a choice selection of fifteen named varieties, with from six to eight to a vase.

T. C. Thurlow & Sons Co., of Westbury, Mass., sent a wonderfully fine exhibit of 100 named varieties, fifteen to a vase. Those worthy of special mention were Simone Chevelier, Thurlow's Double Red and La Rosiere.

L. J. Bryant, of Newark, N. Y., showed sixty-two named varieties of peonies, six to eight in each vase. His collection was a remarkably fine one and among them Enchantress and Midnight found special favor.

Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., exhibited forty named standard varieties of peonies, six to eight in a vase.

S. G. Harris, of Tarrytown, N. Y., staged a collection of eight varieties, including some of the choicest sorts.

The Park Display.

The Rochester Park Department was responsible for 200 named varieties, six to eight in a vase, and about twenty-five large groups, also a symbol of the Red Cross. Included in the collection was a new single yellow peony grown from seed sent from Japan by E. H. Wilson. It is rather small, with a curly chrysanthemum center. The single Japanese varieties are wonderful and are of many colors. The display of double flowers included Therese, considered by many experts to be the most beautiful peony in existence. The parks also furnished the greater number of palms, shrubs and bay trees used for the decorations.

The Local Trade Displays.

Jacob Thomann & Sons had two mammoth pedestal vases artistically filled with La France.

James Vick's Sons put up a handsome collection of thirty named varieties, six to eight in a vase. The flowers were in fine shape.

George B. Hart had a good exhibit, a garden effect, with peonies with quantities of natural foliage. Natural oak sprays made a good background.

Salter Bros. showed a group of peonies, nicely arranged in vases, including many varieties.

J. B. Keller Sons' exhibit covered a large area and was arranged chiefly for effect. Large gilt columns on which were placed large bunches of peonies were effective. On a large table were three beautiful baskets of Edulis Superba. Other vases and baskets contained Crousse varieties. A bird bath in which pansies were placed was excellent. The background was filled in with palms and trellises.

Ellwanger & Barry were responsible for sixty-five named varieties of peonies, mostly six to eight flowers to a vase, but several large vases. Boadicea, Marquis De Lory and M. Jules Elie showed up specially well.

H. E. Wilson had a large display of peonies arranged chiefly in white and green baskets. Palms and trellis work made an ideal background.

George T. Boucher used much taste in grouping his exhibit, which was composed of peonies in large wicker vases.

John Charlton & Sons showed fifty named varieties of peonies and ten large vases. Couronne d'Or and Duc de Wellington were noteworthy. This was one of the most beautiful collections in the show.

The only other flower in the hall was several branches of Styrax japonica. It is the only tree of the variety in bloom in Rochester and is growing on the lawn of John House, florist.

R. H. Langhborough was the only amateur exhibitor.

To swell the funds of the Red Cross hundreds of peonies were sold at the end of the exhibition at 5 cents each.

AT BOSTON.

Peony, Rose and Strawberry Show.

The dates for the show at Boston, June 30 and July 1, suited double peonies, but roses and strawberries would have been better a week later. It is difficult to fix correct dates in advance for these summer shows, owing to our erratic seasons.

T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co. made a large display of peonies, staging over 5,000 blooms, including big vases of such good varieties as Boule de Neige, Duchesse de Nemours, Avalanche, M. M. Cahuzac, Baroness Schroeder, Marguerite Gerard, Mme. Crousse, festiva maxima, Jules Calot, Armand Rousseau, La Tulipe and Eugene Verdier. George N. Smith, of the Wellesley Nurseries, had an excellent collection of high grade flowers.

E. J. Shaylor, of Auburndale, showed a remarkable collection of his seedlings, which attracted great attention. Prominent among these were Wilton Lockwood, a large, symmetrical, flesh pink flower with splashes of crimson; William F. Turner, red; Frances Shaylor, white; Jessie Shaylor, beautiful French white; No. 65, pale pink, of great depth; Secretary Fewkes, a beautiful white suffused with pink. All the foregoing were awarded certificates of merit. In addition, No. 35, double white; Alma, white Japanese, and Shaylor's Dream, a beautiful semi-double white, were awarded honorable mention.

The Competitive Classes.

In the competitive classes A. H. Fewkes won for twelve varieties double, with grand flowers of Mme. Geissler, Avalanche, Rosa Bonheur, M. Martin Cahuzac, Walter Faxon, Milton Hill, Lady Alexandra Duff, La Lorraine, L'Independence and Kelway's Glorious. Mrs. Charles S. Minot was second.

For six blooms of pink in six varieties Mr. Fewkes led, with Claire Dubois, Livingstone, Modele de Perfection, Empress, M. Boucharlataine and Mme. Camille Bancel. Mrs. C. S. Minot was second.

For six varieties of double white, A. H. Fewkes was first, with Mont Blanc, Mme. Crousse, Mireille, Marie, Albatre and Baroness Schroeder. John Morris, gardener to Robert C. Morse, was second.

For eighteen vases of sweet williams, first prize went to Henry Stewart, gardener to Miss Cornelia Warren; Miss Hattie B. Winter, second. For twenty-five varieties of hardy herbaceous plants Faulkner Farm was first. F. W. Fletcher was first for twelve vases of larkspurs.

The Roses.

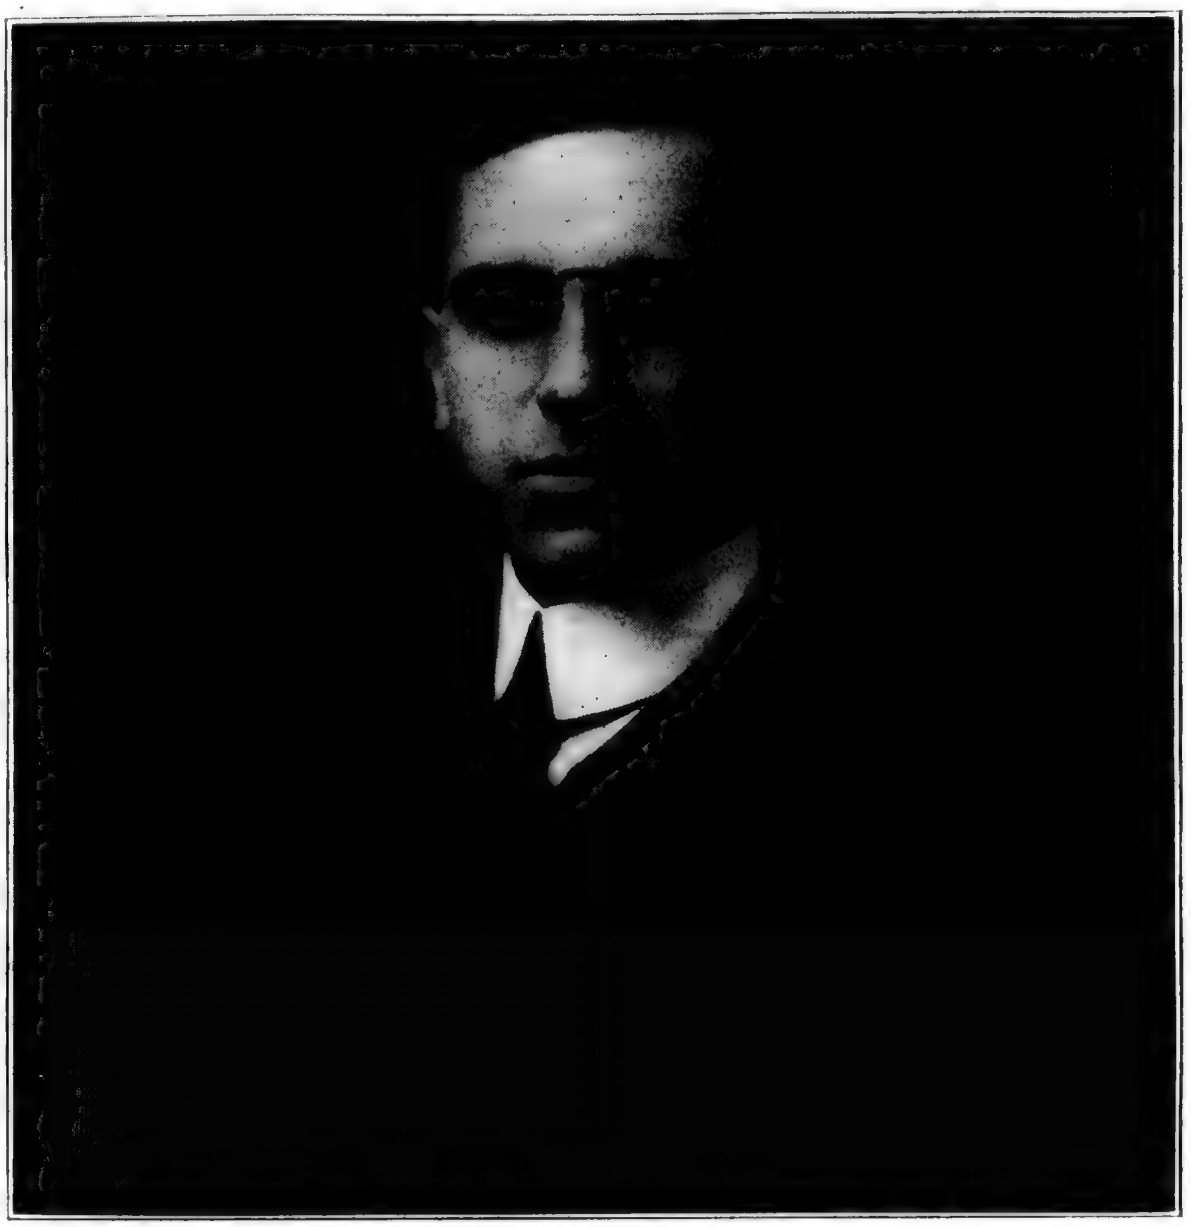
For twenty-five varieties of hybrid tea roses, Thomas N. Cook took first, with good flowers that included Maman Cochet, a pure-blooded tea. J. B. Wills was second.

For twelve varieties of hybrid teas, J. B. Wills was first; T. N. Cook, second. For six blooms of a white hybrid tea William Gray, Newport, R. I., won with splendid blooms of Kaiserin Augusta Victoria; T. N. Cook, second, with White Killarney. On six any yellow variety, William Gray was first, with Mrs. Aaron Ward; T. N. Cook, second. For six blooms pink, J. B. Wills was first, with Lady Ashtown; William Gray, second, with Mme. Segond Weber. For six blooms red, J. B. Wills was first, with George Dickson; David Tyndall, second, with George Dickson.

For twenty-four varieties of hybrid perpetuals, J. O. Christensen, gardener to W. J. Clemsen, led. Some of his best flowers were Margaret Dickson, Fisher Holmes, Clio, Frau Karl Druschki, Baron de Bonstetten, Ulrich Brunner, Susanne Marie Rodocanachi, Reynolds Hall, Captain Hayward, Paul Neyron, Mrs. Sharman-Crawford, Mrs. John Laing and John Hopper; Thomas N. Cook, second. For twelve varieties, J. O. Christensen was first. For six varieties, J. B. Wills was first; J. O. Christensen, second. For six varieties, six blooms in each, not less than 12-inch stems, J. O. Christensen was first, with Captain Hayward, Frau Karl Druschki, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, John Hopper, Baron de Bonstetten and Margaret Dickson. Thomas N. Cook was second.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

In the amateur classes some excellent flowers were shown. Prizes went to David Tyndall, J. B. Wills, Mrs. Bradford, D. Harris and A. L. Stephens.



N. F. Comley showed a large vase of American Beauty roses of excellent quality, grown under glass. Displays of roses were made by William Gray, J. O. Christensen, Henry Stewart, Thomas N. Cook and William Almy. Mr. Stewart showed some good seedling ramblers and was awarded a certificate of merit for Bonnie Prince.

J. B. Wills won the special prize offered for the largest bloom of a hybrid tea rose, with Florence Pemberton.

T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co. and George N. Smith each received silver medals for their fine peony displays.

The best new strawberry shown was Judith, from Dr. F. S. De Lue, a dark crimson, early and of good flavor. Marshall and Barrymore were the best of the older sorts. The finest flavored strawberry was an English sort from T. D. Hatfield. W. N. C.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

WINTHROP H. THURLOW.

THAT the virtues as well as the proverbial sins of a father may be visited upon his sons "even unto the third generation" is not disputed when the name of Winthrop H. Thurlow is mentioned. For Mr. Thurlow's grandfather, who established the Thurlow nurseries at Cherry Hill, West Newbury, Mass., in 1832, was an expert grower; his son, T. C. Thurlow, was the same, and now Winthrop and his brother George, grandsons of the founder, show what inheritance will do. Mr. Thurlow's name is known to the trade in all parts of the country, because of the Thurlow peonies, irises and phloxes. He is prominent in the affairs of the American Peony Society and is recognized as an authority on the peony.

WINTER FLOWERS FROM SEED.

Will you please give me the names of plants the seeds of which, if started now, will flower by September or Christmas, or even later? I want them for pot plants and would like bright colors. S. L. L.—Ia.

There are no annuals that would be of any value as early as September, but some may be had for Christmas and later. Among these are cinerarias, seeds of which should be sown now. They need a cool house. Antirrhinums make nice pot plants. Sow them now for blooms at Thanksgiving or Christmas, using the intermediate rather than the dwarf and tall types. Primula malacoides, if sown now, will flower from Christmas to March. It is a good seller, but it does not have a brilliant color. There are other primulas, seedlings of which you could buy now, obconica being the best, also young plants of cyclamens. Ten weeks' stocks, schizanthus and some other annuals may also be sown in August to flower early in the new year. C. W.

Nampa, Idaho.—Christ K. Jensen, formerly interested in the Boise Floral Co., and George Rinaldo have purchased the greenhouses established by Sherman Ludlow. The new owners plan to enlarge their equipment at once.

CARRYING CARNATIONS OVER.

It will be greatly appreciated if you will answer a question on carnation culture for me, as I am green in this business. Last year I planted a house of carnations, about 800 plants. They grew fairly well till the 40-below-zero weather came. Then they did not bloom well, but as soon as the weather became mild they began to bloom freely and they now are bearing a profuse crop of flowers. Please tell me whether it would pay to carry them over. In that case, how shall I treat them? Shall I cut them down, and how closely? What would be the best feed for them? When I planted them last year I put in entirely new soil. E. W.—Can.

If, as you state, you are "green" at the business, I would hesitate to advise you to try to carry your carnations over for a second season. Many a veteran grower has tried and failed. While I feel confident that these failures have, in most cases at least, occurred because of failure to heed a few facts which are patent to anyone who will take a second thought, yet a little more skill and judgment are required in this operation than in replanting from the field. One of the most important factors is that you cannot cut back hard, in the heat of summer, a plant which has worked hard all winter and is pretty well exhausted, and expect it to break from the hard wood and thrive. This is the most common cause of failure. The old maxim, "You cannot eat your cake and have it," applies in this case. In order to run carnation plants over the second season you must sacrifice a portion of the first season's crop by cutting the plants back while the weather is yet comparatively cool, thus allowing the plants to recover and make a new start under favorable weather conditions. That means to sacrifice at least the June crop and part of the May crop.

Now for your case. You are up in Canada, where the temperature probably does not rise high enough to be oppressive to the carnation. Assuming that to be true, if your plants have not made a normal season's growth, so that they are in good condition as regards the supporting, you might be able to run them right through without much difficulty. Make sure that the supports you are using will hold the plants erect during the next season, as on that will largely depend your success during the second season. Give the beds a mulch of half rotted stable manure, to prevent too rapid evaporation, after first sprinkling on a light application of ground bone. This will carry them through the summer, until about September, when you can begin feeding a little with ground sheep manure, dried blood, acid phosphate, tankage or any other food you may wish to use. Keep the plants upright in the supports, keep them disbudded and keep them clear of aphis, thrips and red spider. A failure to heed any one of these principles would diminish, if not ruin, your chance of success.

A. F. J. B.

USING SOIL A SECOND SEASON.

Please tell us whether it would be profitable to use carnation soil for two years. As it is almost impossible to get the necessary help, we thought we might use the soil that is at present in the benches for another season. What kind of fertilizer should we use?

C. W. E. & S.—Pa.

It would have to be a case of rather stern necessity before I would give up changing the soil in my carnation benches every year. Occasionally we run across a grower who claims to grow high-grade carnations on the same soil for several seasons in succession. "Just as fine as anyone could grow them on new soil," is the way they usually put it. Further inquiry, however, generally discloses the fact that these claims need more or less modification. I know of only one instance where a grower produced really high-grade carnations on what he called second-year soil, and he admitted that the plants were slow in starting and were not really in first-class condition until well along in the season. The blooms I saw were staged late in March. I know of no method of handling this kind of soil to restore it to its original fertility. Should such a method ever be discovered, it would indeed be a boon to the growers, especially the carnation growers.

If you really find it necessary to use some of this soil, I suggest that you take out the plants and allow the soil to dry out somewhat. Do not allow it to become powder-dry and do not allow it to dry out too rapidly, but touch up the dry spots with the hose every day or two until you have the whole bed just a little drier than you would have it at the time of planting. If you have some well decayed cattle manure on the place, spread a layer about an inch thick over the entire bench, preferably after you have got the soil into the state described. Then grind the whole mass through a soil grinder, of which there may be many styles, but perhaps none that is handier and more practical than the one made at North Tonawanda, N. Y. I think the W. F. Kasting Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., sells it. I refer to the one which is operated by hand.

In the absence of cattle manure, you might substitute well rotted horse manure, to which you would add pulverized sheep manure to the amount of 200 pounds to 1,000 square feet of bench space. Level this off and plant a few days later, after adding moisture gradually to the soil until it is in proper condition for planting. Bone meal, acid phosphate and other fertilizers may be added later, as they are needed. Running the soil through the grinder is for the purpose of breaking it up and also thoroughly mixing it with the manure. Both of these results are essential, in my estimation. A. F. J. B.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A CHAIR OF FLOWERS.

The "chair" shown in the accompanying illustration was made by the Art Floral Co., of San Francisco, for the funeral of Alexander Davidson, the superintendent of Cypress Lawn cemetery, San Francisco, for twenty-five years, who was struck and killed recently by an automobile as he was coming out of the gate of the cemetery. The "chair" represented an expenditure of $100 and was the tribute of the cemetery employees. Russell roses were used, except on the arm rests, which were covered with Ophelia roses, and the legs, which were made of sweet peas.

S. H. G.

$2 PER POUND.

A florist in a small city recently had a wedding order on which the cost was not limited quite so closely as is customary in his community. Not only was he called on to decorate the church, but he was asked to do his best on the bouquets for the bride and her maid. He received $30 for one and $25 for the other, so he spared nothing. "They weighed twelve pounds apiece," he proudly declares.

Lightness and grace often are characteristics of wedding bouquets for the attainment of which the florist feels himself entitled to charge, but the comparison of weight with price is something distinctly novel. Let us hope weight will not become the standard of value in cut flower arrangement.

PARCEL POST C. O. D. FEES.

Growers, and those of the retailers in the trade who take advantage of the c. o. d. service of the parcel post, will be interested in the changes that became effective July 1. The fee for returning money now is 10 cents for amounts of $50 and less and 25 cents for amounts of $100 and less. The payment of such fees automatically insures the shipments for their actual value up to the maximum amounts named. Shippers now will not be allowed to pay a 10-cent insurance fee on parcels for which more than $50 is to be returned, even though they would be willing to insure the package for that amount. On the other hand, when the value of the parcel is more than $50 and there is less than that amount to be returned to the shipper, he may pay the 25-cent fee and be entitled to collect for loss up to $100.

MONEY FOR RETAILERS.

The lower the prices, the more expensive it is to sell cheap or poor flowers, but the higher the prices, the more profitable it is to sell the best qualities of flowers.

It will do lots of florists great good if they will allow the above brief sentence to sink into their minds and become the basis of their retail business.

Sam.

CUTTING OUT THE LUXURY.

Driving home the idea by means of a slogan, "Carry your own," the Commercial Economy Board of the Council of National Defense is working up a strong sentiment among both retail merchants and the buying public in favor of the "toting" of small parcels by the purchasers. Figures from every part of the country, assembled and digested by the board's workers, indicate the vast expenditure of man power and money represented in the modern delivery system and show that the American public has grown out of its one-time habit of carrying its own bundles.

By the use of its slogan, flashed upon the screens in thousands of motion picture houses, and widely published in the periodical press, the board aims to overcome the prejudice of the American man and woman against being seen in company with a parcel of any kind. The board would make it a point of patriotism with the purchaser not to demand that his or her dozen carnations or corsage bouquet be rushed home in a truck manned by two men who might be serving Uncle Sam in a military or other capacity. The truck itself, says the board, is needed for more vital service than speeding home small packages for able-bodied persons who insist on appearing empty-handed in public.

If the plans of the board are successful it is certain that the net savings from a corrected and amended delivery system will run far into the millions of dollars, and that "carrying your own" will not only be respectable, but actually become a point of honor.

CULTURE OF GODFREY CALLAS.

I have been growing the Godfrey calla for the last two years and have found it to be the best calla that grows. It gives me two or three times as many flowers as the old kind. My callas are in a bed and are treated like carnations. They are fine and are still giving good flowers. I planted the bulbs last September, but they did not start off as well as I thought they should. I allowed them to dry up in June, and in September I shook out the old soil and replanted them, but when I started them the crowns of some of them rotted.

The Vacant Chair as Made by the Art Floral Co., San Francisco.

I have been reading an article which appeared in The Review about two years ago, and which I have in my scrapbook. I notice that you say to let the old flowering bulbs rest from June until September, and put the little ones out in the open until September and then bring them into the house. I have a good many of the small ones that I should like to put in 4-inch pots and let them grow all summer, so that they will be large enough to flower next December. Can I remove them and put them in pots without hurting the large bulbs? Any information on the growing or handling of the Godfrey calla in the summer in the south will be appreciated. I shall never grow any other kind again, for it has proved to be the best for the country florist and I can recommend it to any florist who is looking for a free-blooming calla. However, most of my friends in the trade do not like it, for they can not get it started as easily as the old kind.

W. E. P.—Okla.

If you would secure the maximum number of flowers from your Godfreys, I would strongly advise against bench culture and would suggest that you grow three strong flowering tubers to a 7-inch or four to an 8-inch pot, placing these in single lines along the sides of a house kept at a temperature of about 55 degrees at night. Feed with fine bone in the form of top-dressings. Plants thus grown yield a wonderful crop of flowers. In benches they make a ranker growth, but where they have a

It will be greatly appreciated if you will answer a question on carnation culture for me, as I am green in this business. Last year I planted a house of carnations, about 800 plants. They grew fairly well till the 40-below-zero weather came. Then they did not bloom well, but as soon as the weather became mild they began to bloom freely and they now are bearing a profuse crop of flowers. Please tell me whether it would pay to carry them over. In that case, how shall I treat them? Shall I cut them down, and how closely? What would be the best feed for them? When I planted them last year I put in entirely new soil. E. W.—Can.

If, as you state, you are "green" at the business, I would hesitate to advise you to try to carry your carnations over for a second season. Many a veteran grower has tried and failed. While I feel confident that these failures have, in most cases at least, occurred because of failure to heed a few facts which are patent to anyone who will take a second thought, yet a little more skill and judgment are required in this operation than in replanting from the field. One of the most important factors is that you cannot cut back hard, in the heat of summer, a plant which has worked hard all winter and is pretty well exhausted, and expect it to break from the hard wood and thrive. This is the most common cause of failure. The old maxim, "You cannot eat your cake and have it," applies in this case. In order to run carnation plants over the second season you must sacrifice a portion of the first season's crop by cutting the plants back while the weather is yet comparatively cool, thus allowing the plants to recover and make a new start under favorable weather conditions. That means to sacrifice at least the June crop and part of the May crop.

Now for your case. You are up in Canada, where the temperature probably does not rise high enough to be oppressive to the carnation. Assuming that to be true, if your plants have not made a normal season's growth, so that they are in good condition as regards the supporting, you might be able to run them right through without much difficulty. Make sure that the supports you are using will hold the plants erect during the next season, as on that will largely depend your success during the second season. Give the beds a mulch of half rotted stable manure, to prevent too rapid evaporation, after first sprinkling on a light application of ground bone. This will carry them through the summer, until about September, when you can begin feeding a little with ground sheep manure, dried blood, acid phosphate, tankage or any other food you may wish to use. Keep the plants upright in the supports, keep them disbudded and keep them clear of aphis, thrips and red spider. A failure to heed any one of these principles would diminish, if not ruin, your chance of success.

USING SOIL A SECOND SEASON.

Please tell us whether it would be profitable to use carnation soil for two years. As it is almost impossible to get the necessary help, we thought we might use the soil that is at present in the benches for another season. What kind of fertilizer should we use?

C. W. E. & S.—Pa.

It would have to be a case of rather stern necessity before I would give up changing the soil in my carnation benches every year. Occasionally we run across a grower who claims to grow high-grade carnations on the same soil for several seasons in succession. "Just as fine as anyone could grow them on new soil," is the way they usually put it. Further inquiry, however, generally discloses the fact that these claims need more or less modification. I know of only one instance where a grower produced really high-grade carnations on what he called second-year soil, and he admitted that the plants were slow in starting and were not really in first-class condition until well along in the season. The blooms I saw were staged late in March. I know of no method of handling this kind of soil to restore it to its original fertility. Should such a method ever be discovered, it would indeed be a boon to the growers, especially the carnation growers.

If you really find it necessary to use some of this soil, I suggest that you take out the plants and allow the soil to dry out somewhat. Do not allow it to become powder-dry and do not allow it to dry out too rapidly, but touch up the dry spots with the hose every day or two until you have the whole bed just a little drier than you would have it at the time of planting. If you have some well decayed cattle manure on the place, spread a layer about an inch thick over the entire bench, preferably after you have got the soil into the state described. Then grind the whole mass through a soil grinder, of which there may be many styles, but perhaps none that is handier and more practical than the one made at North Tonawanda, N. Y. I think the W. F. Kasting Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., sells it. I refer to the one which is operated by hand.

In the absence of cattle manure, you might substitute well rotted horse manure, to which you would add pulverized sheep manure to the amount of 200 pounds to 1,000 square feet of bench space. Level this off and plant a few days later, after adding moisture gradually to the soil until it is in proper condition for planting. Bone meal, acid phosphate and other fertilizers may be added later, as they are needed. Running the soil through the grinder is for the purpose of breaking it up and also thoroughly mixing it with the manure. Both of these results are essential, in my estimation. A. F. J. B.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A CHAIR OF FLOWERS.

The "chair" shown in the accompanying illustration was made by the Art Floral Co., of San Francisco, for the funeral of Alexander Davidson, the superintendent of Cypress Lawn cemetery, San Francisco, for twenty-five years, who was struck and killed recently by an automobile as he was coming out of the gate of the cemetery. The "chair" represented an expenditure of $100 and was the tribute of the cemetery employees. Russell roses were used, except on the arm rests, which were covered with Ophelia roses, and the legs, which were made of sweet peas.

S. H. G.

$2 PER POUND.

A florist in a small city recently had a wedding order on which the cost was not limited quite so closely as is customary in his community. Not only was he called on to decorate the church, but he was asked to do his best on the bouquets for the bride and her maid. He received $30 for one and $25 for the other, so he spared nothing. "They weighed twelve pounds apiece," he proudly declares.

Lightness and grace often are characteristics of wedding bouquets for the attainment of which the florist feels himself entitled to charge, but the comparison of weight with price is something distinctly novel. Let us hope weight will not become the standard of value in cut flower arrangement.

PARCEL POST C. O. D. FEES.

Growers, and those of the retailers in the trade who take advantage of the c. o. d. service of the parcel post, will be interested in the changes that became effective July 1. The fee for returning money now is 10 cents for amounts of $50 and less and 25 cents for amounts of $100 and less. The payment of such fees automatically insures the shipments for their actual value up to the maximum amounts named. Shippers now will not be allowed to pay a 10-cent insurance fee on parcels for which more than $50 is to be returned, even though they would be willing to insure the package for that amount. On the other hand, when the value of the parcel is more than $50 and there is less than that amount to be returned to the shipper, he may pay the 25-cent fee and be entitled to collect for loss up to $100.

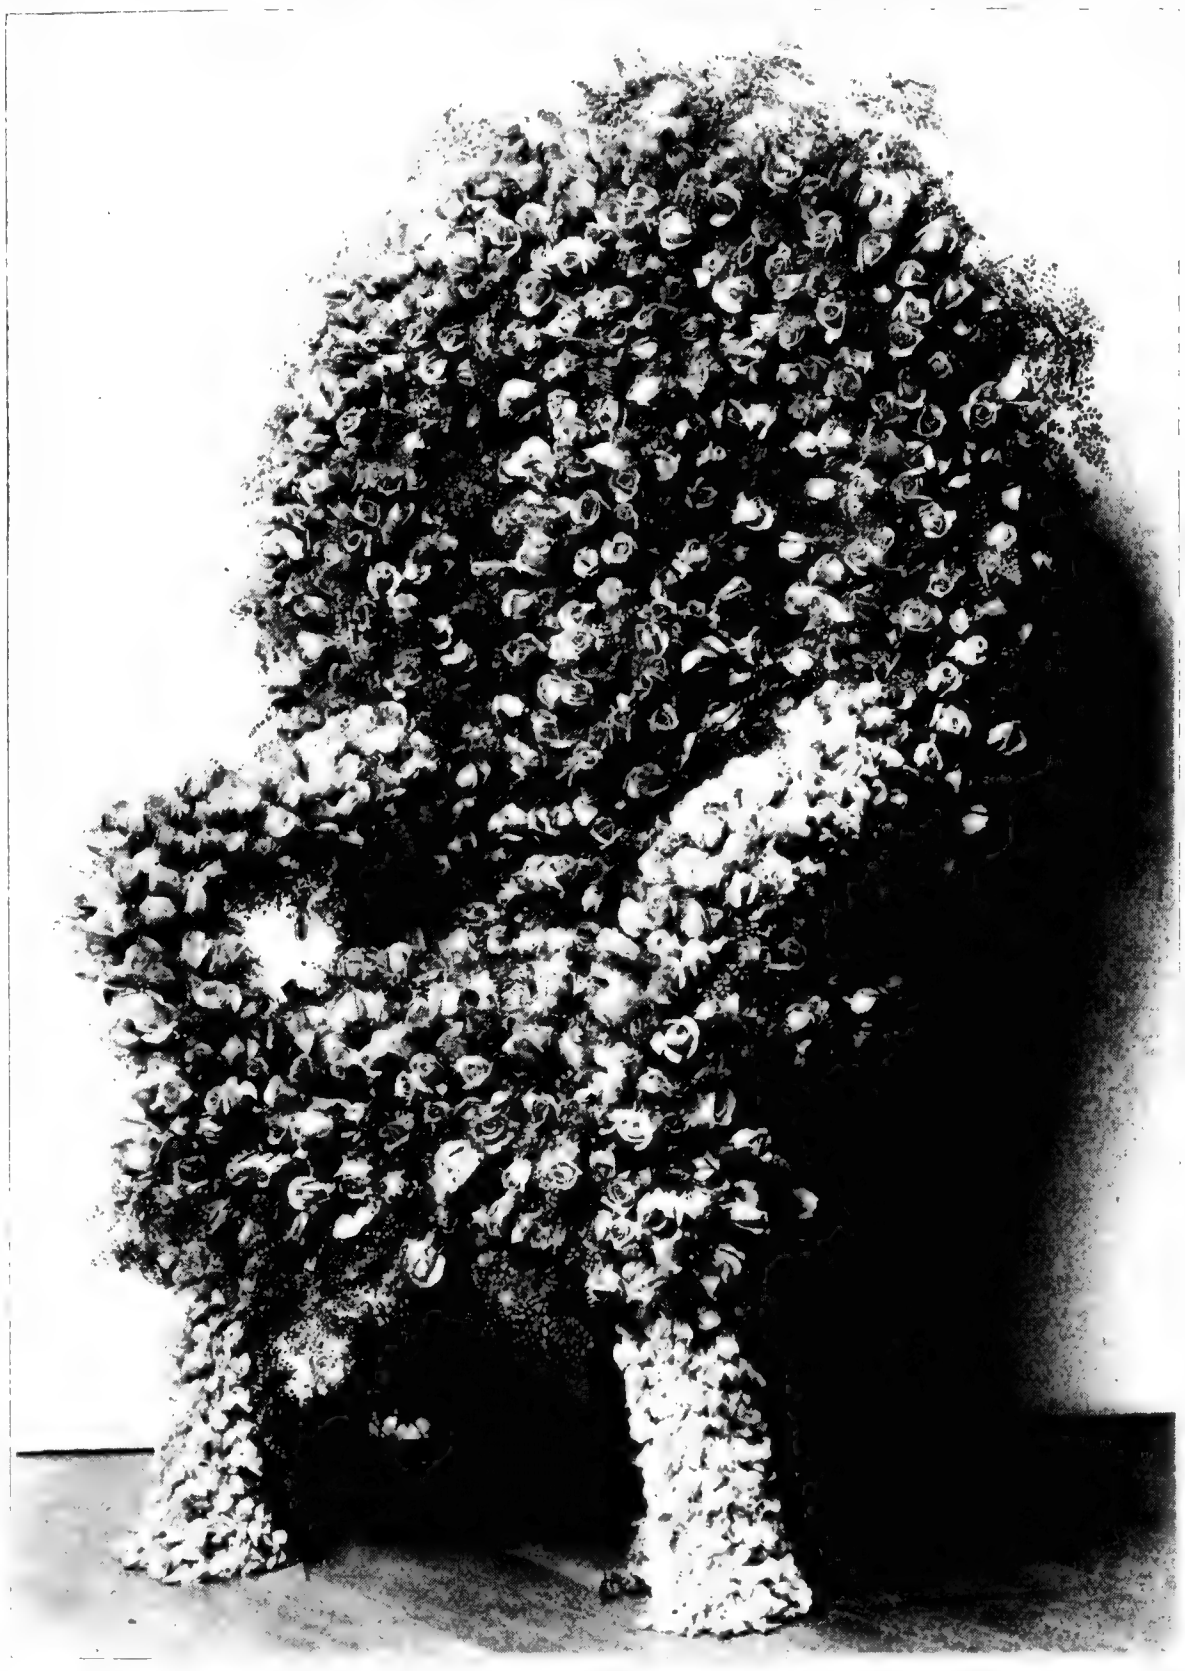
MONEY FOR RETAILERS.

The lower the prices, the more expensive it is to sell cheap or poor flowers, but the higher the prices, the more profitable it is to sell the best qualities of flowers.

It will do lots of florists great good if they will allow the above brief sentence to sink into their minds and become the basis of their retail business.



Sam.

CUTTING OUT THE LUXURY.

Driving home the idea by means of a slogan, "Carry your own," the Commercial Economy Board of the Council of National Defense is working up a strong sentiment among both retail merchants and the buying public in favor of the "toting" of small parcels by the purchasers. Figures from every part of the country, assembled and digested by the board's workers, indicate the vast expenditure of man power and money represented in the modern delivery system and show that the American public has grown out of its one-time habit of carrying its own bundles.

By the use of its slogan, flashed upon the screens in thousands of motion picture houses, and widely published in the periodical press, the board aims to overcome the prejudice of the American man and woman against being seen in company with a parcel of any kind. The board would make it a point of patriotism with the purchaser not to demand that his or her dozen carnations or corsage bouquet be rushed home in a truck manned by two men who might be serving Uncle Sam in a military or other capacity. The truck itself, says the board, is needed for more vital service than speeding home small packages for able-bodied persons who insist on appearing empty-handed in public.

If the plans of the board are successful it is certain that the net savings from a corrected and amended delivery system will run far into the millions of dollars, and that "carrying your own" will not only be respectable, but actually become a point of honor.

CULTURE OF GODFREY CALLAS

I have been growing the Godfrey calla for the last two years and have found it to be the best calla that grows. It gives me two or three times as many flowers as the old kind. My callas are in a bed and are treated like carnations. They are fine and are still giving good flowers. I planted the bulbs last September, but they did not start off as well as I thought they should. I allowed them to dry up in June, and in September I shook out the old soil and replanted them, but when I started them the crowns of some of them rotted. I have been reading an article which appeared in The Review about two years ago, and which I have in my scrapbook. I notice that you say to let the old flowering bulbs rest from June until September, and put the little ones out in the open until September and then bring them into the house. I have a good many of the small ones that I should like to put in 4-inch pots and let them grow all summer, so that they will be large enough to flower next December. Can I remove them and put them in pots without hurting the large bulbs? Any information on the growing or handling of the Godfrey calla in the summer in the south will be appreciated. I shall never grow any other kind again, for it has proved to be the best for the country florist and I can recommend it to any florist who is looking for a free-blooming calla. However, most of my friends in the trade do not like it, for they can not get it started as easily as the old kind.

W. E. P.—Okla.

If you would secure the maximum number of flowers from your Godfreys, I would strongly advise against bench culture and would suggest that you grow three strong flowering tubers to a 7-inch or four to an 8-inch pot, placing these in single lines along the sides of a house kept at a temperature of about 55 degrees at night. Feed with fine bone in the form of top-dressings. Plants thus grown yield a wonderful crop of flowers. In benches they make a ranker growth, but where they have a large root run the number of flowers is nothing compared with what you could secure from pot plants. I would pot the dry callas and start them into growth before benching them, if you plan to continue this method of culture. You are less likely to lose any plants if you start them in pots. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

CARNATIONS IN THE SOUTH.

Preparing to House the Plants.

When the blooming season is over nearly all growers throw out their old carnation plants and prepare the houses for the new ones. Careful preparation is required, whether the old soil is to be used again or whether the beds are filled with new soil. In adopting the first plan, after the old plants have been thoroughly cleaned out, the beds should be left alone for a week, with the ventilators closed, in order that the soil may get a good drying. The soil then may be spaded and left in a rough state for another week or ten days, to complete the drying out process. This drying out of the soil is only another way of giving it a mild sterilization.

When the house is wanted for planting, an inch of the top soil may be removed and replaced with good cow manure, and the whole spaded over or chopped in with a hoe. Smooth the surface with a rake, and two days before planting water the soil thoroughly, and the beds will be in good condition.

The preparation of the new soil should begin in the fall. The ground from which the soil is to be taken should have a 2-inch coating of manure applied and then plowed under. Or the ground may be plowed first and then top-dressed with the manure. I believe the government experts claim that the last-named method gets the best results from the manure. Early in the spring the ground should be broken again and gone over with a disk harrow. This treatment may be repeated as often as necessary to get the soil well pulverized. Carnations do not like a lumpy soil; neither is it necessary that the soil contain fiber. To minimize the ravages of stem-rot, I have let the soil remain for two weeks before planting, but I must confess that the results obtained were hardly commensurate with the time lost.

Stem-Rot.

After years of experimenting it seems that we are as far from a remedy for stem-rot as ever. Last spring one writer gave his experience that by shallow planting he had entirely escaped this disease, losing not a single plant. I envy the writer his good fortune, but such has never been my experience, nor have I ever seen it work out successfully with any of my neighboring growers. I practice shallow planting because it seems to be the universal idea that such planting has a tendency to check the inroads of the disease, but I never hesitate to plant deep enough to make the plants stand straight in the beds. Between the two methods I have never been able to see if one had any superiority over the other. I believe I have tried all the remedies offered, yet I am forced to admit that we still need a Moses to lead us out of Egypt.

It is well to take all the precautions and endeavor to keep the loss down to a minimum. Whenever a plant shows signs of the disease, remove it from the house at once. Remove also the soil in which it grew and replace with fresh soil before replanting. I always feel like congratulating myself when I can keep the loss under ten per cent. The plants in the field, thanks to the Skinner system of irrigation, I believe, this year are looking exceptionally healthy and growing finely, and so far not a plant has died from stem-rot. L.

PITY THE POOR CEMETERIES.

Florists will view with equanimity the plight of the cemeteries, especially those which maintain greenhouse departments and bar outside competition, but it is apparent some of these find themselves closer pressed than does the average florist. A cemetery's opportunity for meeting increased costs by creating a larger volume of business is not of the best and the methods taken to pass on to patrons the increased costs are as interesting as they are unusual. Having sold its lots on the argument of the superior care given the grounds and the specially handsome appearance of the place, one cemetery now sends lot owners who have not ordered anything a bill for "general care," accompanied by this letter:

> The price of labor has doubled in the past five years.
> Materials which we are compelled to buy have increased in cost from fifty per cent to 200 per cent or more.
> Under these conditions we can no longer care for your lot and give general service unless you are willing to pay part of the expense.
> Care of your lot will be discontinued unless the enclosed bill is paid promptly and other expensive service will not be rendered.

In the last few years cemetery managers have come to realize that the older sections of their grounds are a liability rather than an asset; barring florists out does not give enough income from lot planting to pay the cost of maintenance. To avoid the steady aggravation of this condition, the plan was devised of getting lot buyers to create a special fund for the endowment of the cemetery and a percentage of the receipts from the sale of lots now is set aside, the interest on which is paid over to the management for the perpetual care of the lots, the owners of which created the fund.

GREENHOUSE INSURANCE.

Please tell us to whom to apply for insurance on our greenhouses, against cyclones and hail. M. F. C.—Minn.

If your risk is of the right character your local fire insurance agents will be able to get you a wind storm policy. If the risk is not in line with the requirements of the companies, you cannot get the insurance, but no doubt your regular agent can tell you what it is necessary for you to do to bring your risk up to the standard.

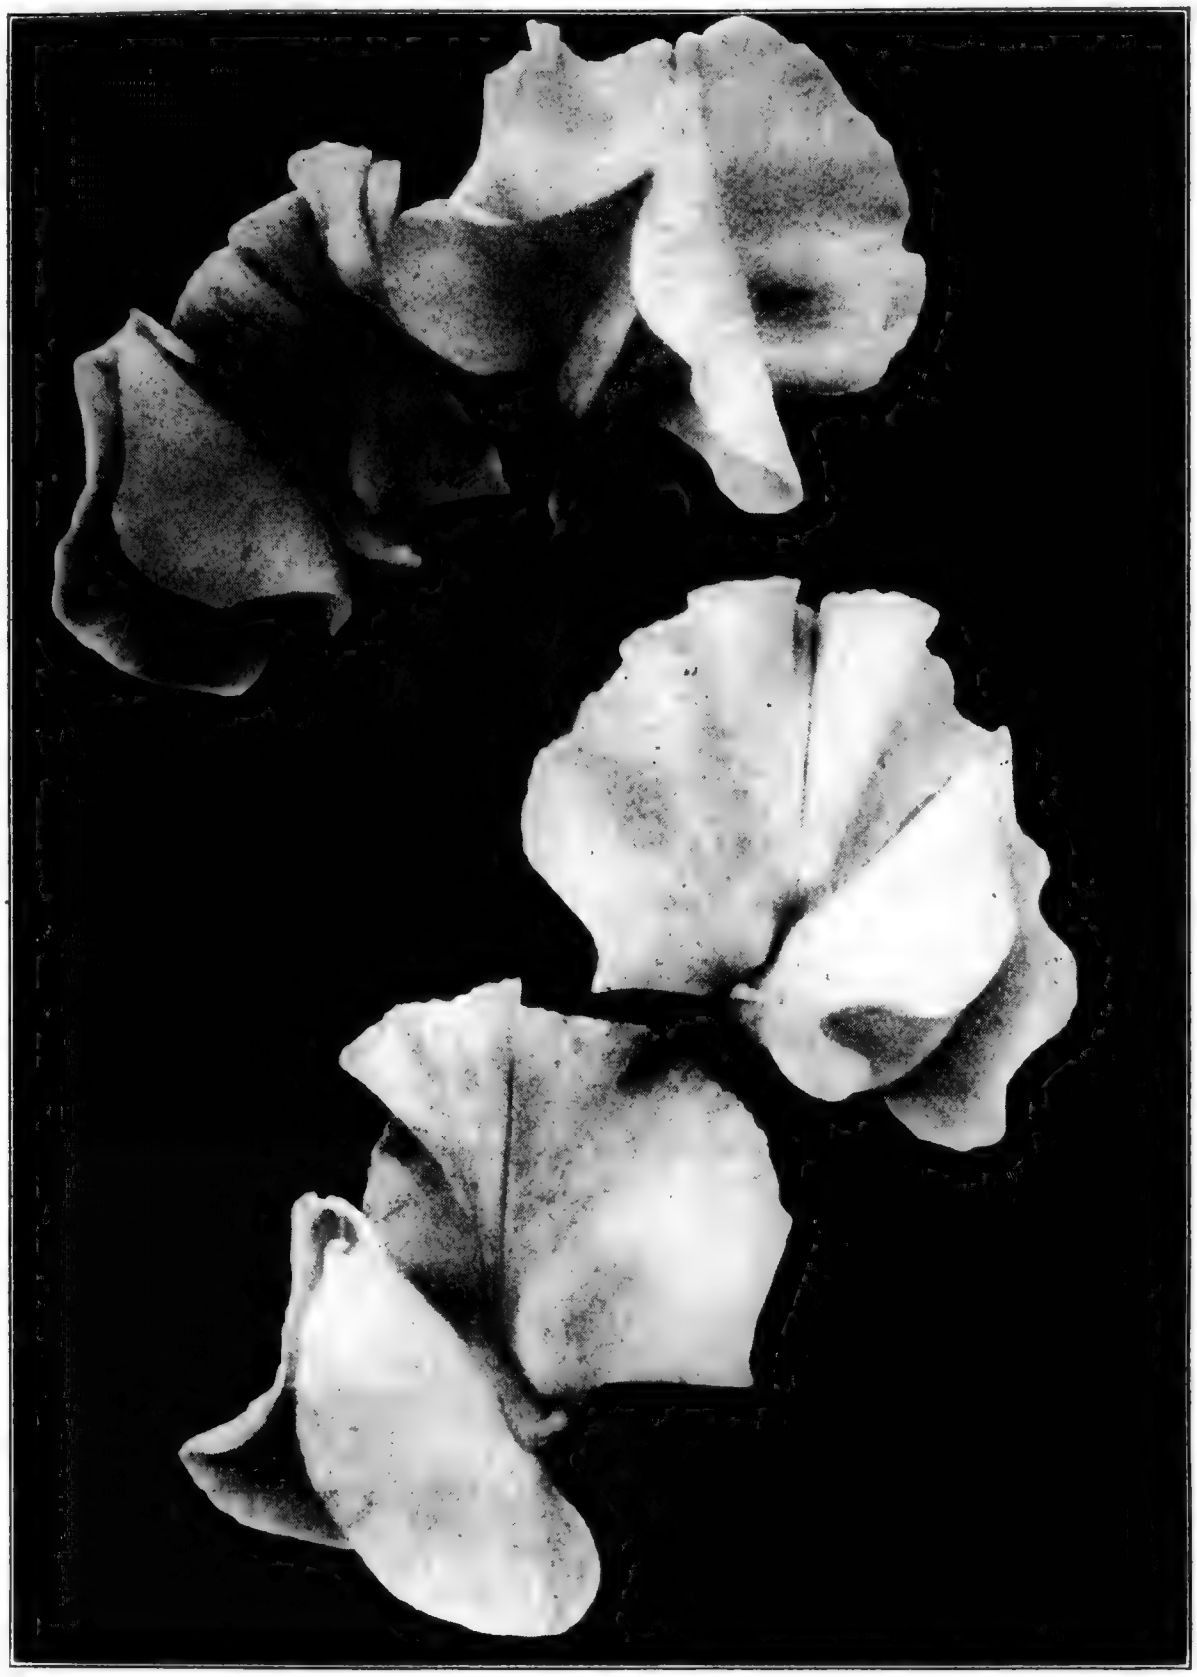
The piece was four feet long, eighteen inches high and eighteen inches wide. The base represented a valley filled with ferns; the approaches were of gladioli and sweet peas; the top was supported by iron posts covered with foil and vines; the crossties were of daisies and sweet peas and the rails were represented by heavy cord covered with foil. J. W. Bealle designed and made the piece. He is a former railroad man, now a florist.

ORCHIDS

SEASONABLE NOTES.



Phalænopsis.

The beautiful phalænopsis, or moth orchids, are yearly becoming more popular commercially. They are not of easy culture, like cattleyas, dendrobes or cypripediums, and to do them well a special house is necessary. The California growers succeed specially well with phalænopsis. They have the advantage of being located 3,000 miles nearer the natural home of the phalænopsis, the Philippines, than the large eastern orchid specialists, but the latter are rapidly learning the needs of the moth orchids and extending their culture.

The best collections of these plants I have seen are growing in houses containing a central tank, over which rows of phalænopsis are hung on iron rods or galvanized piping. Thrips and red spider both trouble phalænopsis, but with the moisture provided by tanks of water this danger is largely minimized. Careful sponging of the leaves with tepid water helps greatly to keep these pests in check. Phalænopsis plants need considerable shade. The sun would soon burn and disfigure the handsome leaves of Schilleriana or amabilis. They need at all times a brisk, moist heat and there are not a few days and nights even in summer when a little fire heat will benefit them. Phalænopsis can be grown successfully in pans, on blocks or in deep, narrow baskets, in a mixture of fresh sphagnum moss and fern root.

EARLY SNOWSTORM SWEET PEA.

The Review for June 21 contained an interesting article with reference to George W. Kerr's work in breeding a race of early-flowering Spencers for greenhouse work, using Yarrawa as the seed-bearer. The accompanying illustration shows the variety Early Snowstorm, of which one and one-half acres were grown at the Floradale farm in California this season. Howard M. Earl, who has charge of the growing operations of the Burpee firm, says he considers Early Snowstorm as "undoubtedly the best of all the early white sweet peas, whether of the Spencer or grandiflora class."

Sweet Pea Early Snowstorm.

SWEET PEA CROPS.

When should I make my first sowing of sweet peas this fall in order to grow the second crop next spring on the same bed, or is it possible to make one batch produce flowers all winter and until late in the spring? V. R. F.—Ind.

I would not advise you to try successive crops of sweet peas in the same bed without some rotation. If you sow seeds early in September, the plants will start to flower about Christmas and will yield blooms for at least three months. I would suggest that you try a crop of tomatoes or cucumbers after the peas have passed. If you sow sweet peas in July they will start to flower early in October and bloom profitably until January. If you want to have a long succession of sweet peas, you should make two sowings, but do not attempt to run two crops on the same ground, as there would be a long gap between the crops. C. W.

POINTERS ON MIGNONETTE.

Please give me a few directions for growing mignonette indoors.
V. R. F.—Ind.

Seed of mignonette can be sown about August 1, in either solid beds or raised benches. If the latter, there should be no heating pipes below them. Use such soil as suits roses or carnations. Sow small pinches of seeds a foot apart each way and thin out to two or three seedlings in each patch. Mignonette needs a low temperature, 42 to 45 degrees at night being ample. The plants need supporting with wires, and cross strings or pieces of brush should be placed among the plants. Pinch back the first lot of flowers and let the plants start from the base. Watch for green worms, the kind which attack cabbages. They will need careful hand-picking in early fall. Plants throw stronger spikes when disbudded, and when well established a mulch of old manure, in addition to occasional soakings of liquid manure, will be found beneficial. Avoid heavy fumigation where mignonette is grown, as the foliage scorches easily. C. W.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

CULTURE OF MUSHROOMS.

I am sending you a package of mushrooms and would like to know which is the right kind. I find many of the small ones, but the majority are more like the large ones. This is my first attempt at growing them, but I intend to continue their culture and would like to know the name of the right variety.

W. H. H.—Mo.

These are small fungi which are not poisonous, but not much used for food. They come up abundantly in beds and benches, especially where barnyard manure has been used freely. The mushroom of commerce, Agaricus campestris, of which there are several forms, is much larger and heavier than these fungi and has thick, white stalks and white skin while young, if it is grown in a darkened position. It comes darker when grown in a strong light. While young the mushrooms are white, no matter where they are grown, and the gills are pink, turning brown and finally black with age.

Prices of mushrooms fluctuate widely, but they are highest during the hot summer months, when the culture is most difficult on account of the prevalence of insect pests and the difficulty in securing a suitable cellarage space where the temperature can be kept down to 60 to 65 degrees. It is comparatively easy to grow mushrooms under greenhouse benches in winter if provision is made to protect the beds from overhead drip and the mushrooms can be kept dark. Cellars also may be used, but the beds must not be made near boilers that radiate a drying heat. I find 50 to 55 degrees a good winter temperature, while in summer we use cellars where the temperature never exceeds 65 degrees on the hottest days. Ventilation is given on cool nights only at that season, and a fumigation with gas once in ten days clears out all insect pests. C. W.

POINSETTIAS FOR CHRISTMAS.

At what time should poinsettia cuttings be taken in order to have the plants in bloom at Christmas in 3-inch and 4-inch pots, and how should the plants be handled? S. L. L.—Ia.

Poinsettia cuttings can be taken from now until the end of July for flowering in small pots or pans for Christmas. I have rooted them as late as the early part of August for making up small pans. When the bracts show, the plants should be given a night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees, and special care in watering is needed if the foliage is to be retained. C. W.

SCALE ON PALMS.

Can you tell me how to rid palms of scale, without washing the plants, some of which are eight feet in height? It is difficult to wash the plants thoroughly, but something must be done, as much of the foliage is being spoiled.

W. J.—Ill.

I find that a good way to clean palms of scale is to lay them on their sides and give the under side of the leaves a spraying of Aphine. I have found that this will kill and loosen the scale, but will not remove it. A couple of days later lay the plants down again and use the hose on them, directing the water through a fine spray nozzle. If the work is done thoroughly, nearly all of the scale will be blown off by the pressure. Be sure to wet every portion of the leaves with the insecticide. Usually the scale is found on the under side of the leaves, but some of it probably will also be found on the upper portions. There are other insecticides which also are good remedies for scale. C. W.

Pollworth's Piscatorial Prowess.

POLLWORTH'S PULLING POWER.

The veracity of fishermen is said to be as elastic as a woman's age; fishermen's accounts of their bouts with the finny tribe are to be shorn of the embroidery before assimilating, wise men say. C. C. Pollworth, of Milwaukee, is a fisherman of parts, but Mr. Pollworth is an exception to the general run in that he is a proof-producing angler. Mr. Pollworth brings back pictorial record of his good luck, as shown in the accompanying illustration, and thereby has something on which to hang his tales.

The husky muskellunge partially obscuring Mr. Pollworth in the picture was hooked at Pelican lake, the Wisconsin paradise of fishermen, where the sportive Milwaukeean recently tried his luck for a few days. Incidentally, at the conclusion of his letter Mr. Pollworth places an onerous implication on the heads of our Chicago sportsmen, namely: "I note that quite a number of the Chicago boys go a-fishing, but one never sees any results!"

ROY WILCOX RETIRES.

A change in the affairs of J. F. Wilcox & Sons Co., Council Bluffs, Ia., was effected last week, when Roy Wilcox retired from the company, his stock being purchased by his mother, Mrs. J. F. Wilcox, and his brothers, Blaine Wilcox and Glen Wilcox. Owing to poor health Roy Wilcox expects for the present to devote his time to personal and estate matters.

The Wilcox greenhouses are among the largest in the west and since the death of J. F. Wilcox have been under the management of Roy Wilcox. In future Blaine Wilcox will be at the head of the company and Glen Wilcox will continue in charge of the large Manawa houses. Extensive additions are planned, which will make the establishment of still larger influence in trade affairs west of the Mississippi.

Reading, Pa.—Work has begun on a $25,000 greenhouse by the Lord & Burnham Co. for William Leith, who operates the Homeacre farms. Mr. Leith has a store at 317 South Main street.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Louis Menand, of Troy, N. Y., remarked that it looked gloomy early in the week, but that the sudden bright weather enabled them to fill their usual orders at the cemetery close by.

Henry Youell, of Syracuse, says the wet weather has affected the seedling gladioli planted out early. He examined some of his stock and found that quite a number of the plants were rotten. If warm weather follows now, a fine growth is looked for. Many seedlings and new varieties from California are on trial here for the first time. Entries for the show at New York during the S. A. F. convention promise to make a full list, according to Mr. Youell.

Albert H. Davis, of Syracuse, took a day off to indulge in the piscatorial art. "Only the rainy weather permitted such recreation at this busy time," observed Mr. Davis, "for we have been up to our eyes in work right along."

The Humphrey Floral Co., of Rome, N. Y., is a corporation formed by two sisters, who conduct a modern retail establishment with every success. Equal to any emergency, in this instance caused by enforced absence of male help, both were performing tasks I had never before seen done by daughters of Eve, and I venture the opinion that never were plants more carefully watered nor window boxes more artistically filled.

W. T. Hughes, of Rome, notes an increase in general business through the season of fully fifty per cent, and is, of course, sanguine regarding the future.

E. J. Byam, of Rome, says: "By all means show your patrons by word and action that ours is a business just as necessary in the lives of the people today as it was to the Romans of ancient times." The fine stock so attractively displayed indorses his views and attracts the ducats. W. M.

OBITUARY

Abraham L. Pennock.

Abraham L. Pennock, the oldest florist in Philadelphia, died in the Presbyterian hospital June 29, in the ninetieth year of his age. Mr. Pennock was the founder of the firm of Pennock Bros., the pioneer florists of his city, and father of the younger men whose names are household words in the trade today. He was widely known and highly respected, retaining until the close of his long and useful life a keen interest in the affairs of the busy world in which he has taken such a prominent part.

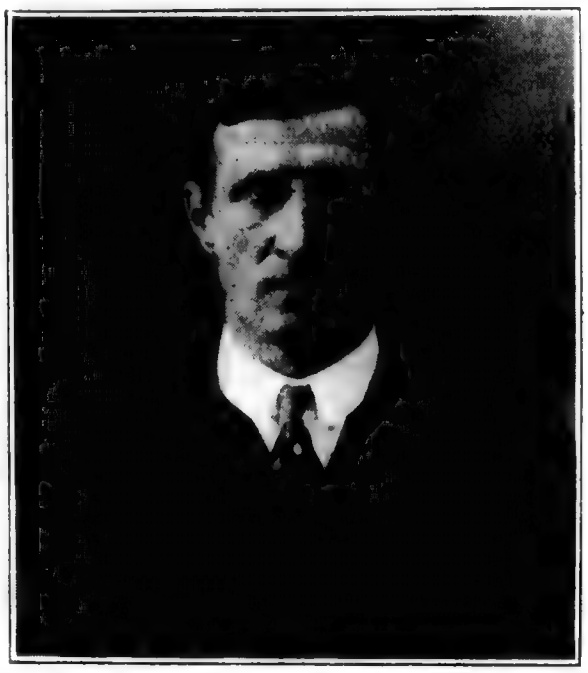
For many years Mr. Pennock had made his winter home in Jupiter, Fla., where two of his sons are engaged in business. He came from Jupiter to his home in Lansdowne, Pa., to spend the beautiful month of June. There was celebrated the golden wedding anniversary, June 5, when Mr. and Mrs. Pennock, surrounded by their sons and daughters and their children, had a happy reunion.

Abraham L. Pennock built his first greenhouses at Lansdowne in 1861, the year of the commencement of our great Civil war. It is interesting to note at this time of stress that Mr. Pennock had the courage to embark in a new enterprise when the whole country was ringing with alarms. Three years later, in 1864, while the war was still in progress, the firm of Pennock Bros. commenced business on Twelfth street, near Chestnut street, Philadelphia. The firm was composed of A. L. Pennock and J. L. Pennock. In 1876, the centennial year, Pennock Bros. removed to their present quarters at 1514 Chestnut street. The lot was the same size then as now, but the store and conservatory have been improved and remodeled since. In 1878, I think, J. L. Pennock withdrew. The firm was then formed of A. L. Pennock, Thomas Cartledge, John Westcott and Herbert A. Pennock. Mr. Pennock continued his active interest in the firm of Pennock Bros. and in his greenhouses at Lansdowne until 1892, when the firm of Pennock Bros. was again changed; John Westcott withdrew to take charge of Ferguson's Laurel Hill Nurseries, which he had just purchased, and Herbert A. Pennock retired to embark in business as a grower in Florida. The firm then consisted of Abraham L. Pennock and Thomas Cartledge, each partner bringing his son to learn the business. Upon the death of Mr. Cartledge, in 1898, Mr. Pennock withdrew from the firm of Pennock Bros., which from that day until this has been composed of A. B. Cartledge and J. Liddon Pennock.

Mr. Pennock's greatest floricultural achievement lay in making lily of the valley into an every-day-in-the-year flower through the employment of cold storage.

Mr. Pennock had divided his time since his withdrawal from active business between Jupiter, Fla., and Lansdowne, Pa., keeping in close touch with all the life of both places.

Mr. Pennock is survived by his wife, Mrs. Anna C. Pennock; three daughters, Mrs. Frances S. Laird, Mrs. N. P. Stauffer, and Mrs. Robert C. Folwell, and six sons, Herbert A., Casper, Samuel S., J. Liddon, Henry S. and George L.



The funeral services were held at the Pennock home at Lansdowne July 2 and were largely attended. There were many beautiful flowers. Phil.

J. I. Donlan.

James Ivera Donlan died suddenly at Ward's Island hospital, New York, Wednesday, June 27. Mr.

Charles W. Unglaub.

Donlan was a man of splendid artistic ability and he wielded a trenchant pen. His unique and interesting letters in The Review in its early days will long be remembered. He was associated with Klunder for several years and his capacity as a decorator was widely recognized.

He was active in connection with John Thorpe at the Chicago world's fair. Of late years he had been a writer for the New York World and other daily papers.

Fred M. Kelly.

F. M. Kelly, proprietor of a range of houses at Kokomo, Ind., and well known to Indiana florists, was drowned June 27.

The body of the decedent was found in the Mississnewa river, on the outskirts of Marion, Ind., and the authorities of the town said there was every indication that Mr. Kelly had been robbed and then thrown into the river.

The deceased, who was 35 years of age, entered the florists' business about fifteen years ago, and was considered one of the most capable growers of his part of the state. He had many friends, but his eccentricities were marked, although he was unfailingly generous and affable. He is survived by his mother, his wife and a daughter 9 years of age.

B. Hart.

B. Hart, senior member of the firm of Hart Bros., 8322 Detroit street, Cleveland, O., died Saturday, June 30, after an illness of only a few days. An attack of quinsy the first part of the week developed into diphtheria, from which he died.

Mr. Hart was a son of Herman A. Hart, one of Cleveland's pioneer florists, and was 40 years old. He was married and leaves a widow and one daughter. The funeral was held Monday, July 2, and was private. The burial at Riverside cemetery was in charge of the Masons. Mr. Hart was a member of the Cleveland Florists' Club and was prominent in the bowling tournaments of the club. F. A. F.

THE LATE C. W. UNGLAUB.

Charles W. Unglaub, who died June 4 at Springfield, O., had all his working life engaged in the florists' business. During the last years of his life he specialized in carnations and chrysanthemums and had the reputation of being one of the most successful growers of carnations in the state. The illness that caused his death at the age of 44 years came at a time when he was developing a new greenhouse establishment, he having sold his original range in 1912. He left a widow and two children. The executors of the estate are considering the sale of the Unglaub establishment.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

CULTURE OF MUSHROOMS.

I am sending you a package of mushrooms and would like to know which is the right kind. I find many of the small ones, but the majority are more like the large ones. This is my first attempt at growing them, but I intend to continue their culture and would like to know the name of the right variety.

W. H. H.—Mo.

These are small fungi which are not poisonous, but not much used for food. They come up abundantly in beds and benches, especially where barnyard manure has been used freely. The mushroom of commerce, Agaricus campestris, of which there are several forms, is much larger and heavier than these fungi and has thick, white stalks and white skin while young, if it is grown in a darkened position. It comes darker when grown in a strong light. While young the mushrooms are white, no matter where they are grown, and the gills are pink, turning brown and finally black with age.

Prices of mushrooms fluctuate widely, but they are highest during the hot summer months, when the culture is most difficult on account of the prevalence of insect pests and the difficulty in securing a suitable cellarage space where the temperature can be kept down to 60 to 65 degrees. It is comparatively easy to grow mushrooms under greenhouse benches in winter if provision is made to protect the beds from overhead drip and the mushrooms can be kept dark. Cellars also may be used, but the beds must not be made near boilers that radiate a drying heat. I find 50 to 55 degrees a good winter temperature, while in summer we use cellars where the temperature never exceeds 65 degrees on the hottest days. Ventilation is given on cool nights only at that season, and a fumigation with gas once in ten days clears out all insect pests. C. W.

POINSETTIAS FOR CHRISTMAS.

At what time should poinsettia cuttings be taken in order to have the plants in bloom at Christmas in 3-inch and 4-inch pots, and how should the plants be handled? S. L. L. Ia.

Poinsettia cuttings can be taken from now until the end of July for flowering in small pots or pans for Christmas. I have rooted them as late as the early part of August for making up small pans. When the bracts show, the plants should be given a night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees, and special care in watering is needed if the foliage is to be retained. C. W.

SCALE ON PALMS.

Can you tell me how to rid palms of scale, without washing the plants, some of which are eight feet in height? It is difficult to wash the plants thoroughly, but something must be done, as much of the foliage is being spoiled.

W. J.– Ill.

I find that a good way to clean palms of scale is to lay them on their sides and give the under side of the leaves a spraying of Aphine. I have found that this will kill and loosen the scale, but will not remove it. A couple of days later lay the plants down again and use the hose on them, directing the water through a fine spray nozzle. If the work is done thoroughly, nearly all of the scale will be blown off by the pressure. Be sure to wet every portion of the leaves with the insecticide. Usually the scale is found on the under side of the leaves, but some of it probably will also be found on the upper portions. There are other insecticides which also are good remedies for scale. C. W.

Pollworth's Piscatorial Prowess.

POLLWORTH'S PULLING POWER.

The veracity of fishermen is said to be as elastic as a woman's age; fishermen's accounts of their bouts with the finny tribe are to be shorn of the embroidery before assimilating, wise men say. C. C. Pollworth, of Milwaukee, is a fisherman of parts, but Mr. Pollworth is an exception to the general run in that he is a proof-producing angler. Mr. Pollworth brings back pictorial record of his good luck, as shown in the accompanying illustration, and thereby has something on which to hang his tales.

The husky muskellunge partially obscuring Mr. Pollworth in the picture was hooked at Pelican lake, the Wisconsin paradise of fishermen, where the sportive Milwaukeean recently tried his luck for a few days. Incidentally, at the conclusion of his letter Mr. Pollworth places an onerous implication on the heads of our Chicago sportsmen, namely: "I note that quite a number of the Chicago boys go a-fishing, but one never sees any results!"

ROY WILCOX RETIRES.

A change in the affairs of J. F. Wilcox & Sons Co., Council Bluffs, Ia., was effected last week, when Roy Wilcox retired from the company, his stock being purchased by his mother, Mrs. J. F. Wilcox, and his brothers, Blaine Wilcox and Glen Wilcox. Owing to poor health Roy Wilcox expects for the present to devote his time to personal and estate matters.

The Wilcox greenhouses are among the largest in the west and since the death of J. F. Wilcox have been under the management of Roy Wilcox. In future Blaine Wilcox will be at the head of the company and Glen Wilcox will continue in charge of the large Manawa houses. Extensive additions are planned, which will make the establishment of still larger influence in trade affairs west of the Mississippi.

Reading, Pa.—Work has begun on a $25,000 greenhouse by the Lord & Burnham Co. for William Leith, who operates the Homeacre farms. Mr. Leith has a store at 317 South Main street.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Louis Menand, of Troy, N. Y., remarked that it looked gloomy early in the week, but that the sudden bright weather enabled them to fill their usual orders at the cemetery close by.

Henry Youell, of Syracuse, says the wet weather has affected the seedling gladioli planted out early. He examined some of his stock and found that quite a number of the plants were rotten. If warm weather follows now, a fine growth is looked for. Many seedlings and new varieties from California are on trial here for the first time. Entries for the show at New York during the S. A. F. convention promise to make a full list, according to Mr. Youell.

Albert H. Davis, of Syracuse, took a day off to indulge in the piscatorial art. "Only the rainy weather permitted such recreation at this busy time," observed Mr. Davis, "for we have been up to our eyes in work right along."

The Humphrey Floral Co., of Rome, N. Y., is a corporation formed by two sisters, who conduct a modern retail establishment with every success. Equal to any emergency, in this instance caused by enforced absence of male help, both were performing tasks I had never before seen done by daughters of Eve, and I venture the opinion that never were plants more carefully watered nor window boxes more artistically filled.

W. T. Hughes, of Rome, notes an increase in general business through the season of fully fifty per cent, and is, of course, sanguine regarding the future.

E. J. Byam, of Rome, says: "By all means show your patrons by word and action that ours is a business just as necessary in the lives of the people today as it was to the Romans of ancient times." The fine stock so attractively displayed indorses his views and attracts the ducats. W. M.

Abraham L. Pennock.

Abraham L. Pennock, the oldest florist in Philadelphia, died in the Presbyterian hospital June 29, in the ninetieth year of his age. Mr. Pennock was the founder of the firm of Pennock Bros., the pioneer florists of his city, and father of the younger men whose names are household words in the trade today. He was widely known and highly respected, retaining until the close of his long and useful life a keen interest in the affairs of the busy world in which he has taken such a prominent part.

For many years Mr. Pennock had made his winter home in Jupiter, Fla., where two of his sons are engaged in business. He came from Jupiter to his home in Lansdowne, Pa., to spend the beautiful month of June. There was celebrated the golden wedding anniversary, June 5, when Mr. and Mrs. Pennock, surrounded by their sons and daughters and their children, had a happy reunion.

Abraham L. Pennock built his first greenhouses at Lansdowne in 1861, the year of the commencement of our great Civil war. It is interesting to note at this time of stress that Mr. Pennock had the courage to embark in a new enterprise when the whole country was ringing with alarms. Three years later, in 1864, while the war was still in progress, the firm of Pennock Bros. commenced business on Twelfth street, near Chestnut street, Philadelphia. The firm was composed of A. L. Pennock and J. L. Pennock. In 1876, the centennial year, Pennock Bros. removed to their present quarters at 1514 Chestnut street. The lot was the same size then as now, but the store and conservatory have been improved and remodeled since. In 1878, I think, J. L. Pennock withdrew. The firm was then formed of A. L. Pennock, Thomas Cartledge, John Westcott and Herbert A. Pennock. Mr. Pennock continued his active interest in the firm of Pennock Bros. and in his greenhouses at Lansdowne until 1892, when the firm of Pennock Bros. was again changed; John Westcott withdrew to take charge of Ferguson's Laurel Hill Nurseries, which he had just purchased, and Herbert A. Pennock retired to embark in business as a grower in Florida. The firm then consisted of Abraham L. Pennock and Thomas Cartledge, each partner bringing his son to learn the business. Upon the death of Mr. Cartledge, in 1898, Mr. Pennock withdrew from the firm of Pennock Bros., which from that day until this has been composed of A. B. Cartledge and J. Liddon Pennock.

Mr. Pennock's greatest floricultural achievement lay in making lily of the valley into an every-day-in-the-year flower through the employment of cold storage.

Mr. Pennock had divided his time since his withdrawal from active business between Jupiter, Fla., and Lansdowne, Pa., keeping in close touch with all the life of both places.

Mr. Pennock is survived by his wife, Mrs. Anna C. Pennock; three daughters, Mrs. Frances S. Laird, Mrs. N. P. Stauffer, and Mrs. Robert C. Folwell, and six sons, Herbert A., Casper, Samuel S., J. Liddon, Henry S. and George L.

The funeral services were held at the Pennock home at Lansdowne July 2 and were largely attended. There were many beautiful flowers. Phil.

"A ROLLING stone gathers no moss," but there are lots of florists who do not use moss in their business.

ONE of the troubles is that in this trade prices are made, not on what it costs to produce the stock, but based on the selling prices of other people.

IT is not too late to plant some of that surplus stock on your own grounds and thus convert it into an excellent advertisement for next season.

IT is reported that Cincinnati begonias have been selling unusually well and certain dealers in young stock say they are unable to supply the demand for plants wanted for Christmas flowering.

MANY people have noted a distinct improvement in the practice of the trade in the payment of bills; one by one florists are acquiring the means and the habit of cleaning up all outstanding accounts each month.

THERE is a strong and rapidly increasing demand for wind storm insurance on greenhouses. While a number of companies write storm insurance, their requirements are so severe that the ordinary type of greenhouse establishment is not acceptable.

IT seems clear that any falling off in the flower buying of the well-to-do during the war will be fully compensated for by the increased use of flowers by the working people, whose incomes are likely to be larger and steadier than ever before. The florists' problem, as time goes on, will become one of production rather than distribution.

PLEASE NOTE.

Each week a number of letters containing advertising instructions reach The Review while the paper is on the press—just a few hours earlier and they would have had attention a week sooner than is possible.

It is the aim to give prompt service, but to secure it advertisers should note: "It is impossible to guarantee the insertion, discontinuance or alteration of any advertisement unless instructions are received by 4 p. m. Tuesday."

TRADING WITH THE ENEMY.

Since the British navy blockaded Germany it has been a more or less popular pastime with the trade to undertake, by arrangement with someone in Holland or in Scandinavia, to obtain German merchandise by indirection. Many shipments of German flower seeds have been made from Holland masquerading as of Dutch origin. The same with valley pips and other articles. Some of these shipments have come through safely, but many have been confiscated by the British. It has been a good game because the American did not expect to pay unless he received the goods, but now the United States government's preparing to take a hand and a term in prison may be the penalty which will follow conviction.

The trading with the enemy bill will be the last of the great war measures Congress will consider, but in advance of its passage the departments are warning American merchants to avoid any transaction which may develop unexpected responsibilities.

THERE IS A SURPLUS.

Although there were considerable quantities of surplus geraniums in the east at the close of the 1916 season, it is probable the arrival of the Fourth of July never has caught the trade the country over with so much unsold stock as is on hand today. There are localities in which practically everything has been sold, and there are individuals who have cleaned out ahead of their neighbors, but the majority of florists, especially the bedding plant specialists in the cities, have more unsold stock than ever before at this date.

Usually the arrival of the Fourth is considered as marking the end of the bedding plant season. Perhaps it may not be so this year, because the season has been from two to three weeks late from the start.

The oversupply includes almost everything, but consists principally of geraniums and cannas. Last year geraniums were overdone in localities, principally in the east, and a few growers cut down on them, but the majority felt that last year's surpluses were only the result of waiting for buyers instead of going after them and there was sufficient confidence so that unusually large stocks were worked up for this season.

How large a part of the present surplus is due to increased production, what part is due to the late, cold spring and wet Decoration day, what part is due to the unsettlement following the declaration of war, what part to the tidal wave of vegetable planting and what part to the average florist's disposition to await rather than seek the buyer, it is difficult to determine, but a decision would not alter the fact that the season leaves much to be desired.

At the start there was a fairly well concerted effort to get better prices, but not for long. It did not take many weeks of backward conditions to convince some of the plantsmen that half a loaf is better than no bread and prices asked became more irregular than ever. Especially during June have values shrunk. The continuous rain at Memorial day, in many localities, hit the plantsmen hard—a large percentage of the sales lost at that time are gone for the year. Consequently, much stock has since been sold below the cost of production.

The outcome is especially unfortunate because the trade will need better prices next season even worse than it has needed them this year.

THE COST OF PRODUCTION.

The uncertainty about the price of coal has been turned into a certainty that the grower's fuel bill will be about double that of last year, by the action of the mine operators in agreeing to a scale of maximum prices for the products of various fields.

Growers now can begin to figure what it will be necessary to charge for stock to make up for the increased cost of production. Many who contract for their fuel supply have already done so, while others were uncertain what the increased cost in their establishments would be. It is certain, however, that this fall must see better prices for the grower if he is to realize a profit on his labor and investment.

It will not be necessary, perhaps, to make a radical increase in the price of stock. What increases are necessary can easily be secured from the flower buyer, as he is in the habit of paying more for everything he purchases. Consequently the same margin of profit will be left for the retailer and the grower will be able to live and pay his coal bills.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

With the setting in of warm weather the wholesale cut flower market has resigned itself to the regular run of summer business. Trading last week was slow, stock plentiful and prices low. A slightly improved tone was noted June 30, but demand was not active enough to clean up the market for the week end. July 2 found business even a little better, with stock generally considerably shorter, but demand was lethargic and buyers' prices prevailed.

American Beauties are not in large supply, but there are enough to fill buyers' needs. There is some good stock, but, on the whole, quality is not good. Other varieties of roses sold poorly, although the quality, considering the time of year, is fairly good. Prices were low and large numbers were sold for nominal returns. Carnations also move poorly. The quality averages poor, although some good stock is arriving. Their season is almost over.

Even valley was plentiful last week, but sold for fair prices. Easter lilies have been difficult to move, but a slightly improved demand was noticeable towards the last days of the week. The supply is large. Orchids enjoy the distinction of being the only item on the market that was really scarce last week. A good demand easily cleaned out what stock arrived and prices held up well. Stocks sold fairly well. There are not many sweet peas to be found on the market, the season being nearly over. There are plenty of gladioli to fill all needs. Daisies have been selling slowly, due, in a large measure, to the great number of field daisies which may be seen.

The supply of peonies has shortened down somewhat, although northern crops are coming in and there are considerable quantities still in cold storage. They sold fairly well last week. Outdoor candytuft is commencing to arrive, but is moving slowly. Snapdragons are also selling poorly. A moderate supply of delphinium is arriving and receives a fair call.

Greens have not yet become normally plentiful.

June Business.

June has been an unusual month in this market; it has given widely varying results for the different interests. In a retail way, there have been fewer fashionable weddings than usual and they have called for less elaborate floral accessories. This has cut into the business of some of the best retailers. On the other hand, funeral work has been good, transient trade in the medium class stores has been excellent and outdoor work above the average for June. Consequently some retailers are well pleased, especially as stock was obtained at low prices.

Wholesalers have not been short of stock. There has been a large turnover at prices that were, perhaps, a little below the usual June average. Some houses handled considerably more stock than last year and thus made an increase in sales. The reverse was true of others. But it should be considered that June of 1916 was unusually good; to equal last June was doing well. It was noted that shipping trade to the country towns was excellent, especially the first three weeks of the month.

The growers fared in proportion to their production; with some it was more than a year ago, with others, less.

June Weather.

June was an excellent growing month, both in the field and under glass. With only slight interruptions, the weather remained cool during the entire month. June 16 frost was observed, this being the latest in the spring upon which frost has ever occurred in Chicago within the records of the Weather Bureau. The highest temperature during the month was 86 degrees June 26. Although there was some deficiency in the total rainfall, the showers were evenly distributed and highly beneficial to growing crops. Most of the rains occurred during thunder storms, and some of these were accompanied by fresh gales, the highest wind velocity being fifty miles an hour June 12. The percentage of sunshine was considerably below the average, being only sixty, as compared with seventy-one as the normal for the month.

That locally-grown orchids have been the best property on the market during June is the statement of H. Van Gelder, of Percy Jones, Inc., who says even now, with eastern orchids to be had in quantity, the call for local stock exceeds the supply.

C. J. Michelsen is looking for an unusually good summer business in this market this year. He bases his belief on the decreased production of garden flowers, the excellent business being done in the cities and towns that draw on Chicago, and the fact that vacations will consume less than usual of people's time and money.

The Albany Nurseries, which have been operated as a spring catchpenny, on Madison street, near the W. W. Barnard Co., has closed the store. It is a corporation of which Charles A. Meinersmann, a landscape architect who operates two retail flower stores, is ostensibly the head, but it is said the backing was by Mr. Lehmann, of the Fair. Report has it that the store has done $13,000 or $14,000 of business in nursery stock, bedding plants, consignment seeds, etc., in the three months it has been operated, but that expenses have been so high there has not been a great deal of profit in it.

The matter of coal prices being to the front just now, it will be of interest to note that Peter Reinberg, Wietor Bros. and other large growers in the city, who feel under the necessity of using smokeless coal, have contracted for their season's supply of Pocahontas at $3 per ton at the mine, as against $1.35 last year. Transportation will cost $2.30, making the fuel cost $5.30 this season, compared to $3.50 last season.

At the home of Charles Erne it is the rule to celebrate the centennial of the signing of the Declaration of Independence—because Mr. Erne arrived in this world of many joys July 4, 1876.

George Wienhoeber, who now has been in business for himself two years and a half, says May and June have been excellent months, from one-third to one-half better than last year.

At Winterson's Seed Store it is said the cut flower business has been remarkably steady this season. The sales of nursery stock have been far below normal because of the loss of the wholesale business in imported stocks, but the retail sales of vegetable seeds have been the largest ever done and, of course, the margin of profit on the latter is much the best.

The monthly meeting of the Chicago Florists' club will be held at the Briggs House, corner Randolph street and Fifth avenue, July 5, at 8 p. m.

John Fuhrmann and his 13-year-old daughter, who were severely injured while motoring in Michigan June 24, are doing nicely in the north side hospital to which they were removed after the accident and their complete recovery is expected. The machine overturned into a ditch, burying the occupants underneath. Mr. Fuhrmann sustained severe injuries to his spine, as well as to his legs and stomach. His daughter's stomach was crushed, the younger son was severely bruised, as was the elder, who was, however, the only one able to get around and lend assistance to the others. The injured were taken to a local hotel, but facilities were inadequate and hearing that a limited train to Chicago would pass through in an hour, the elder son decided to flag it. This he did and the injured were loaded into the baggage car on the beds which they had occupied in the hotel. They were met by ambulances when the train reached the city.

A. Lange and family believe in the recreative value of picnics. July 1 was spent at Ninety-first and Robey streets on such an outing.

The annual stockholders' meeting of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association will be held at the company's office, 182 North Wabash avenue, July 16.

The Market.

There has been a surfeit of rain during the last week. This, of course, has made cool weather the usual thing and, while there were two hot days, stock in general is still in fair shape.

The effects of the cloudburst of Friday, June 22, are still felt, as the washouts on the railroad tracks at the west end of the city make the arrival of incoming trains more or less of a problem.

On account of the cool, cloudy weather, peonies are just about at the height of their season, whereas they should be a thing of the past by this time under conditions of previous years. Sweet peas are still arriving in quantity, although the quality is poor and the end of the cut cannot be far off. This stock is moving, but the prices realized are low. Carnations are becoming softer daily and the deterioration is quite marked when they are compared with the stock of a few weeks ago. Good stock is moving fairly well and is bringing fair prices, but the medium stock is not clearing, even in bargain lots.

Roses are good and the supply is more than adequate. Of course, when the supply is large the long, fancy stock suffers most, as it does not find such a ready market as the shorter grades, and proportionate prices are not so good as when stock is somewhat scarce. Russell roses are having a good sale and the cut, which is fairly large, is being disposed of without the difficulty experienced in moving other stock. Orchids are plentiful and in fine form. The demand is not strong, but there is little or no surplus and the prices range from $6 to $7.50 per dozen for good stock. Lilies are extremely plentiful and it is impossible to handle the cut with any degree of satisfaction. Valley is in good condition and moves well.

On account of the lateness of the season this year, planting goes merrily on. It is a question, however, whether the work will keep up long enough to offset the weeks when nothing in this line could be done.

We will have plants ready for delivery about July 15th or we will reserve the plants for you until you are ready for them. From our experience we have found that early planting will give the best results. There is less risk in shipping small plants and they will reach you in better condition. We would suggest to you to let us know your requirements in carnation plants and we will give you the best price possible on the entire order. Satisfaction is guaranteed with all plants that we ship out and we do not ship any plants out unless they are examined in the field before shipping.

Much funeral work toward the end of the week helped wonderfully and kept the business well up to the mark set last year. It is to be expected, however, that there will be a marked drop during the next few weeks.

Various Notes.

Miss Gretchen Baumgarten, who has been ill for about six weeks, is reported to be somewhat better, though still in a precarious condition. Physicians state that her convalescence will be slow and, while she may be able to be up in a short time, it will be almost a year before she will have entirely recovered. We are glad, indeed, to be able to report some progress in the right direction.

W. M. Reid, with the W. W. Barnard Co., of Chicago, was in Milwaukee June 30.

Will Kuhl, with the Holton & Hunkel Co., left Saturday, June 30, for a week or two of recreation. H. J. S.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Poor flowers predominate in the cut flower market. There is a great deal of trash that is worthless. Put this aside and the market is reduced to a moderate supply of flowers, which are in active demand at fair summer prices. These flowers include a few varieties of roses, Easter lilies, gladioli and extremely few orchids. Valley is obtainable, but there are signs that the growers are saving their pips for the fall and winter. Sweet peas are not warm weather flowers, few as they are. Delphinium has been in oversupply.

There are only two carnations that the buyers want, Mrs. C. W. Ward and Matchless. They stand the heat when well grown; the older varieties seldom do. A few early asters have come, mostly pink and white. White roses have fallen short of the demand, but small white flowers, such as candytuft and feverfew, have been in heavy supply, with many remaining over.

The month of June has shown enormous receipts, low prices and a large total in dollars and cents. The outlook for July is that the receipts will be light. Outdoor gladioli from the south now are competing with the greenhouse-grown stock. Cold storage peonies do not meet with much favor.

The Button System.

An interesting feature of the American Association of Nurserymen's convention in the Adelphia hotel last week was the organization's button for identification. By its aid a member could tell at a glance what nursery any other member represented. For instance, the man on the other side of the room, that tall, fine-looking man, wears a button on his coat lapel numbered 104. The catalogue shows that number to be the property of the North Abington Nursery Co., North Abington, Mass., while further aid from the same service shows that the other man talking to him represents the J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., of Pomona, N. C., no less a personage than Paul Van Lindley himself.

An Object Lesson.

There is a beautiful garden in this city that affords pleasure to everyone who sees it. I never see it without experiencing a sense of being the better for the sight. It is a small, perfectly plain garden. There is a square grass plot on the right and one on the left off a path that leads from the top of a flight of steps to the house. The center of each plot is filled by a flower bed. Along the front of the vine-covered house is another flower bed. That is all; yet the effect is so fresh and pretty, an effect that is heightened by the city surroundings, that I often recall it with pleasure.

Particularly does it come to mind when some brother florist complains of the war's effect on business, one who does not try and whose place shows that he is not trying. Then that garden comes to mind, and I think that the man who planted that garden with its rich crotons and dracænas, its soft green ferns and its bright-hued and its variegated-leaved geraniums, had courage and was going right ahead playing the game. You have guessed whose garden it is? Of course you have. Everybody knows the garden in front of Robert A. Craig's and everybody is the better for knowing it.

Various Notes.

Arthur A. Niessen believes that the June business in cut flowers has been heavy, fully equal to anything past. This was made possible by the great quantity of flowers.

BALTIMORE.

Mary's Lamb Now a Grown-up.

I have been writing from time to time about some of the older establishments of Baltimore. This week I am going to tell something of one which, while not so old, has played an important part in the progress of the florists' business of our city. There were just four stores in the city, those of Halliday, Feast, Cook and Pentland, when the business now conducted by Mary Johnston was founded by her father, the late Robert Paterson.

A boy of 18, Robert Paterson arrived in this country in 1857 from Scotland, where he had received a thorough training in the greenhouses on the estate of the Earl of Minta. His first position in this country was with his uncle, who at that time was gardener for Johns Hopkins, on what is today Clifton park. In 1859 he secured his first private place, that of General Tyson, of Howard county. There he met and married one who became "the power behind the throne" in every enterprise he undertook. From 1859 to 1874 he worked on some of the best places in Maryland—Tyson, Glenn, Appold, McDonald, Wells, Garrett, all names linked with the progress of the state.

It was in 1874, while employed on the T. Harrison Garrett estate, at Montebello, that Mr. Paterson realized his family was growing and that its future should be provided for, so with practically no capital, save a wife and six children, he faced what in those days was a man's job, the establishment of a retail florist's business. The start was humble—only one house, the old reliable lean-to of those days; yet there was plenty of work for each child to do.

When Hayes Was President.

In those days the only place where one could dispose of one's product was the markets, and here the stall of Robert Paterson was open throughout the year. After the spring rush with plants, one of the children would go out every market day with the cheaper funeral designs, and at Christmas with immortelles, wreathing and the like. The efforts of the six children, coupled with the practical knowledge of the father, soon began to tell, and in 1878 a store was procured at 221 West Madison street, part of the site of which now is occupied by the present store; and Mary Paterson, now Mrs. Mary Johnston, after a year's training in the store of Robert J. Halliday, was installed as its manager. She was then 16 years of age, and has been at the helm ever since. She has seen the business grow under her careful management from the little store that each day disposed of the output of her father's greenhouses to what was described last winter by one of the Sunday papers as "one of the most fashionable and prosperous florists' businesses in the city." The newspaper writer described the phenomenal success of the business, and ascribed this success to the personality of its proprietor—"Everyone isn't born with the clever fingers and the seeing eye, and everyone is not born with the capacity for hard, unremitting labor."

"There's a Reason."

Mary Johnston possesses the "clever fingers and the seeing eye," and there is no one who knows better than the writer that there is not a qualification a florist should possess that is not natural with her. Her business, through its many years of association with some of Baltimore's best families, has become an institution on which the customers depend; that is, if visited by death, Mary Johnston is sent for—no employee will do—and is asked to take charge of everything.

A thing she is featuring with great success at funerals of old customers, when there are quantities of flowers, is to remove the tributes from the house to the cemetery with her own men and vans, and in this way keep the undertaker from piling them on top of one another.

Her son, Robert, has finished his education, and with his father, W. J. Johnston, looks after the decorating, of which there is much. It is often the lot of Mary Johnston, in the families of some of her older patrons, that her

The Market.

Midsummer dullness reigns in cut flower circles. There is a fair amount of business transacted, but prices are low. In spite of the recent warmer weather, the quality remains remarkably good. For American Beauty roses there is little call. In hybrid teas the red and deep pink varieties have sold the best, with a fair demand for Ward, Kaiserin and Double White Killarney. Outdoor Jacqueminot, Brunner and other hybrid perpetuals are now coming in, but are late this year for weddings and graduations, and as a result prices are low. Carnations are abundant and so far pretty free from red spider, but prices are low, all the way from 25 cents to $2 per hundred. Outdoor sweet peas now are arriving and are of better quality and color than the premature product.

Until this week yellow marguerites sold well. Sweet sultans are at present in favor. Peonies are in heavy supply, but prices average only one-half of those of a year ago, due to the crop coming so late. Larkspurs, Spanish irises, sweet williams and other outdoor stock are used for window decorations. Liliums are not selling well. Valley now is of poor quality. Pansies are done for the season. Cattleyas are shortening up. The demand for asparagus and ferns is light. Bedding plant trade continues, but has fallen below expectations.

Various Notes.

The officers and executive board of the American Sweet Pea Society decided, after hearing reports from Newport, Bar Harbor, Lenox and other sweet pea centers, not to postpone the convention and exhibition to be held in Boston July 7 and 8. While a week later would have been better for this section, a good exhibition will be staged, although some would-be exhibitors are this season spending more time on food crops than on flowers for exhibition.

Wax Bros. made a handsome casket cover of cattleyas and adiantum for a funeral June 29. They had twelve other designs at the same funeral. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wax left June 30 for a five weeks' pleasure and fishing trip to Moosehead lake, in Maine. Shipments of lake salmon are looked forward to at the store. Mr. Wax is a remarkable angler and never fails to secure a heavy pannier. Herbert Hartford, Harry Rosenberg and Miss Pike all started on their vacations June 30.

iams and sweet peas. Of the latter King White is especially good. The firm is finishing a successful pansy season, being a leading specialist in these flowers. This week the firm is harvesting the seed crop and will make savings at once for flowering next fall under glass.

R. A. Hatch, of Cliftondale, has done well with roses this season and is now sending in extra good Hadley, Crimson Queen, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant and Sunburst.

The nursery and seed store employees of R. & J. Farquhar & Co. will hold their annual field day at Glen Echo park July 7. The seed store at 6 South Market street will not be opened that day. Seed business has broken all records there this season and the call for vegetable plants has been and still is phenomenal.

Frank Edgar, of Waverley, has more than 1,000 plants of Pæonia officinalis rubra and says tnat it pays far the best of any variety he grows. Mr. Edgar has had a good call for young stock of poinsettias and begonias and is now busy potting up stock of the latter for fall sales.

The finest carnations now coming to the market are the new rare pink Albert Roper from the Roper Estate, Tewksbury. These carnations seem to be just as fine in hot as cold weather and realize top prices here.

Henry R. Comley at his Park street store is showing some nice pans of achimenes and gloxinias. He reports that June business was satisfactory.

W. J. Thurston, manager of the Flower Exchange, leaves July 9 for a vacation to be spent along the Massachusetts coast.

William Jurgens, of Newport, is sending to A. E. Walsh a superior lot of liliums and outdoor sweet peas.

Matthew Siegel and A. Flick, of McAlpine's, are whist specialists and selected strong tables for a tournament at the Otisfield Club hall, Roxbury, June 28. Siegel's table won handsomely.

The committee on the annual Gardeners' and Florists' Club Picnic, to be held at Cunningham park, East Milton, July 25, is busy on details connected with it and expects to make it the best ever.

ter are cutting a fine crop of hybrid perpetual roses. The management reports satisfactory business for the month of June.

S. J. Goddard started planting his carnation houses this week. Stock has made splendid growth in the field.

Nine young men from the R. & J. Farquhar & Co. seed store and nurseries have enlisted.

Recent visitors here included B. H. Farr, of Wyomissing, Pa., and William Gray, of Newport, R. I., who attended the recent peony exhibition.

James Wheeler has a splendid field of Queen of the Market asters and his carnation stock looks excellent. He still is cutting fine marguerites and carnations.

W. N. C.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The clean-up June 30 was all that had been expected, and more. Prices for everything but valley were low, but there were no unusual sacrifices. Good valley was scarce and about any price asked could be had. The price of longiflorum lilies was firmer and some select flowers brought more than $3 per hundred. The accumulations of the week, however, were disposed of at from $1 to $2 per hundred.

The orchid supply is more than sufficient for the demand. Some special gigas touched 50 cents each, but from 40 cents downward were the general quotations. The quality is excellent, but the retail requirements were light and dinner and funeral demands smaller than usual.

Shipments of carnations continue larger than usual at this time of the year, but another week or ten days will find the old plants eliminated and the receipts much lighter. Prices were low, the best stock not bringing more than $1.50 per hundred. A great deal of the stock was sleepy and sold at 50 cents per hundred and under.

Apart from the cold storage stock, the peony season is over. Some of the best of the late arrivals brought as high as $2 per dozen. Asters are arriving freely and everybody seems to have been growing delphinium this year.

The rose shipments continue heavy. Some fair stock of American Beauties is received, prices for the best averaging about $15 per hundred. The heat is affecting the smaller roses and the short-stemmed arrivals sold at from $2.50 to $5 per thousand. Rambler branches are here in great numbers and the outdoor rose season, which was retarded by the cold weather, is at its height.

For the other seasonable flowers there is but a light demand and for feverfew and sweet william there is none at all. There is an adequate supply of sweet peas, daisies, stocks, coreopsis, gladioli, calendulas and gypsophilas.

July 1 sixty wholesale cut flower houses closed their doors, many of them for the first time in more than a quarter of a century. The Sunday closing seems to have been accomplished with unanimous consent and without harm to the business.

Various Notes.

July 9 a special meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held at its rooms in the Grand Opera House building, Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue. The meeting will be of importance because of the coming S. A. F. convention, now but six weeks distant. Everything now presages a large attendance.

George W. Crawbuck's family is spending the summer at their home in East Quogue, L. I. Mr. Crawbuck goes there for his week ends.

The war is likely to thin out seriously the helpers in the stores, wholesale and retail.

H. Riedel will be on jury duty in the Court of General Sessions during July.

A. Bowker, with Riedel & Meyer, has joined the Sixty-ninth regiment.

Charles Carlin has recovered his health and was in the wholesale district June 30.

George Hildebrand, of John Young & Co., is away with his wife and three boys for two weeks in the mountains.

James M. King, of 252 East Two Hundred and Third street, one of the old-time florists, is on the Berkman jury.

Charles Millang says men are so scarce at Bayside that he has to do his own flower and bulb growing.

John Gunther and family are at Midland Beach, Staten Island, for the summer.

Messrs. Irwin, Pierson, Siebrecht and several kindred spirits in four automobiles are taking a week's trip through Long Island and New England.

Col. J. H. Mason, of the Eagles, who is one of the Kervan force, participated in the society's three-day convention at Providence and Newport, returning July 3.

W. Sullivan, salesman for H. Weiss, and H. Peake, with Walter Sheridan, will join the Sixty-ninth regiment July 15.

Miss Mabel E. Conkling, bookkeeper for H. E. Froment, leaves this week for a month's vacation at Sacket Lake. George Ott left July 2 for his holiday.

Sol Goldenberg, foreman for Russin & Hanfling, was visited by the stork last week. Twin boys were left at his home.

A meeting of the schedule committee of the National Flower Show was held June 23 at the office of Secretary John Young. Besides Mr. Young there were present C. H. Totty, Thomas Roland and A. Farenwald.

The stork called at the home of Paul Meconi June 23. Meconi & Son will be the name of the new firm.

J. J. Coan has returned from Atlantic City much improved in health. He will enjoy a further rest in the Catskill mountains.

John Kessler has charge of the flower department at Wanamaker's store.

George W. Crawbuck, Jr., contemplates joining the navy.

R. J. Irwin reports a continuation of the good business his establishment has been having all the year.

J. K. Allen's tent, with the 50-foot shade trees above it, at his wholesale headquarters on Twenty-eighth street makes a trip to the country unnecessary.

Christian Bonnet, of Bonnet & Blake, has the highest priced garden in Brooklyn. He has planted a plot of ground 50x100 close to the city hall. The value of the vacant property is said to be near $100,000. Mr. Bonnet's son John, aged 14 years, recently graduated from school with high honors and was valedictorian of his class. George H. Blake, of the same firm, is away on a fishing trip. The firm's business last season was the best in its history, it is declared.

Badgley & Bishop entertained their employees and guests at Chatham, N. J., in celebration of the Sunday closing movement. J. Austin Shaw.

The death of J. I. Donlan, once a well known figure in the trade, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

D. J. Pappas, president of the United Cut Flower Co., is greatly interested in the success of the eleventh annual outing of the Greek-American Florists' Association, to be held next Wednesday, July 11. The steamer Ajax has been engaged for the trip to Witzel's and will leave the foot of East Twenty-third street at 10:30 a. m. The committee of arrangements has made elaborate preparations for a good old time for the members and guests and many will attend because the Florists' Club has omitted its outing.

The Horticultural Society of New York will hold an exhibition Saturday and Sunday, July 14 and 15, in the Museum building, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park. Prizes are offered for hardy roses, flowers of herbaceous plants and those of shrubs and trees, Japanese irises and other plants; also for vegetables. These shows attract some of the private gardeners and a few who seek gardeners' trade, but not many florists.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business at the wholesale houses, considering the time of the year, has kept up well. There seems to be plenty of stock, save that the fancy grades are none too plentiful. Now that weddings, graduations and other factors that create a demand are over, business may be expected to revert to summer's dullness. Many of the flower buyers have packed and gone north to summer resorts, and about the only thing left for the retailers is funeral work.

The wholesalers expect stock to be scarce from now on, as the growers have commenced to pull out the old stock and the field stock has suffered a great deal of late for the want of a good, drenching rain. A few gladioli are arriving from the field and meet with a good demand, the leading sellers being America, King, Pink Beauty and Augusta. These featured the market last week at $4 per hundred for the best quality. Unless good rains arrive the outdoor crop of sweet peas will amount to little.

Carnations and roses plainly show the effects of the hot weather and excellent blooms of these are hard to find at present. Shasta daisies are arriving in fine form and sell well. Easter lilies are not any too plentiful and the price is up to $8 per hundred. Many outdoor flowers are offered, but their sale is only fair. Ferns and asparagus sell well.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis Florists' Club's annual picnic, July 26, promises to be the best and largest ever held by the club. One of the big features this year will be a parade of decorated automobiles carrying the picnickers to the grounds.

The parade will form in the wholesale district and the line of march will extend to the downtown business section and then to Ramona park. This part of the program is in the hands of W. C. Smith and Frank A. Windler. Special prizes for the various contests are coming in daily and anyone wishing to post prizes should do so at once.

The annual meeting of the Missouri State Florists' Association will be held sometime next month at Columbia, Mo. Secretary W. S. Wells says that all members will receive notification of the date in due time. Much important matter is up for this meeting and a large attendance is looked for.

The early closing of the wholesale houses has gone into effect and the trade is buying earlier in the day. The retailers are in sympathy with the movement.

August Hummert, vice-president of the St. Louis Seed Co., says that he never saw business keep up so well as it has this year. The large force put on early in the season is still busy. Inventory was begun this week.

John S. Carter, head of the Nicotine Mfg. Co., says his men are working overtime to catch up with orders. Never before has there been such a demand for nicotine extracts as this year.

George Schmidt, rose grower for W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, has had great success this season with Hadley and Russell, the latter being the finest ever seen on this market. The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. handles the stock with great success.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

WISCONSIN peas are in excellent condition and a fine crop is expected.

NASTURTIUM is one of the items on which the American seed trade is likely soon to become self-reliant.

THE growing season is late practically everywhere, but most seed crops look fairly well and promise at least moderately well.

THE Chicago onion set crop looks favorable at the present time, although still a little backward. With good weather from now on a fair crop is expected.

How long will the supply of valley pips last? In spite of decreased use of cut valley this season, most forcers are within sight of the end of their resources.

THE large attendance at last month's seed trade convention was the result of many houses sending an unusual number of representatives. Several members were represented by three or four men, while one of the concerns seeking seedsmen's patronage had as many as seven solicitors.

THE California growers say the hot weather recently experienced has had a further unfavorable effect on the radish crop. With reduced imports from France, it looks as though a surplus of radish will be good property next season. The imports in the six months ended December 31, 1916, were only 41,923 pounds, against 309,417 pounds in the year ending June 30, 1916.

VOLUNTARY SEED CONTROL.

[An extract from an address by George H. Clark, Canadian seed commissioner, before the American Seed Trade Association at Detroit, June 20.]

Seed control, whether voluntary or enforced by law, presupposes a condition in the commerce of seeds that is in need of regulation in the interests of agriculture and horticulture, or of the trade itself. Seed control is now generally considered to be necessary in most agricultural countries as a means of self-protection, because countries that are without seed control may easily become the dumping ground for seeds of a quality that may not be marketed in those countries where the seed trade is subject to regulation.

The European System.

In the older countries of Europe voluntary systems of seed control grew out of experience under conditions of agriculture that were more or less intensive. They were preceded by many years of educational work that resulted from the operation of seed laboratories. By slow degrees those countries came to demand principally seed of superior quality and to have to offer to other countries seed of inferior real value. This condition naturally had its reaction in other countries, which found it necessary or expedient to correct the disadvantage that had accrued to them by a process of legislation in-

A Big Demand for Pansy Plants is Looked for Next Spring

It is expected that our American people will follow the beautiful custom of our European allies, who wear pansies to show that they have friends in active service. This will mean a big demand.

Toole's Pansy Seed is Carefully Grown

For 35 years we have been growing high quality Pansy Seeds. Toole's Giant Prize Strain is the result of our painstaking labors. The flowers are large, well formed, with pronounced color markings.

Packet, 20c; Trade packet of 1000 seeds, 40c; ½ ounce, 90c; ¼ ounce, $1.25; 1 ounce, $5.00.

This superb strain can also be supplied in special separate color mixtures of Blues, Black, Browns, Reds, Yellows, White, Fancy-edged Sorts and Masterpiece at the same price.

stead of the slower process of education that would naturally precede voluntary seed control systems.

In looking to future developments in the commerce of seeds, members of the American Seed Trade Association would do well to carefully consider whether they may be of greatest service to themselves, their fellows and their country by devoting their energies toward obstructing the natural trend of the times, or, on the contrary, to move in advance and help to mold public opinion along lines that may generally be recognized as being in the best interests of all.

Two Kinds of Men.

The need for legislation to regulate the commerce of seeds would probably not have existed had the trade in seeds been confined to persons who would be accepted as members in this association. I understand that good business morals is the first qualification on the part of applicants for membership. It is well to recognize, however, that jobbing in the seed trade has been and probably will continue to be the privilege of people whose first interest is not always the proper protection of agriculture.

It was at first a source of some disappointment and worry to me when, at the commencement of our efforts toward seed control in Canada, I seemed to be unable to convince a few of our good seedsmen that a proper measure of seed control was as much in their best interests as for the protection of agriculture. After twelve years of experience I can now better understand the feelings of those men who have had before them the scepter of the criminal code applied to their day-to-day operations.

Uncle Si sez:

It's al'right to say the world owes us a living, but it isn't a half bad idea to remember some of the "owing" is on our side too.

SNAPDRAGON SEED

Time has arrived for sowing seed of Snapdragon for winter blooms. Snapdragon will yield greater profit than any plant you can use, and this is a year when results must be reckoned with.

Plants will be ready to bench three months from sowing of seed. A dollar or two invested in snap seeds will give an abundance of plants equal in results to a hundred dollars invested in carnations, roses or bulbous stock.

Seed of our famous Silver Pink, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 pkts., $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Seed of Nelrose, White, Garnet, Yellow, Light Pink and Fancy Mixed, 35c per pkt.; 3 for $1.00. All orders cash Free cultural directions.

Plants of the above varieties, ready August 1, at $6.00 per 100.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

Seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

All sorts and mixtures except where noted are: $5.00 per oz., $1.25 per ¼ oz., 5000 seeds, $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 25c; any 5 packets, $1.00. Please order by number.

22. GIANT KENILWORTH STRAIN. The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3½- to 4-in. It is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.
24. GIANT KENILWORTH SHOW. An extra fine strain of large flowers; the immense flowers are of circular form and great substance. A beautiful collection of colors and markings.
26. GIANT KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE. Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 in. long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.
28. GIANT MASTERPIECE. A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance; large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stem.
30. GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES. A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich, velvety colors; reds are particularly conspicuous; the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large, dark blotches.
32. GIANT PARISIAN. The flowers are of enormous size and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground; an unusually showy mixture.
34. GIANT BRONZE. A fine mixture of all shades of velvety brown, bronze, Havana brown, mahogany and copper shades.
36. TRIUMPH OF GIANT. Remarkably beautiful. The imposing five-spotted flowers on long, vigorous stalks surmount the foliage in the most graceful manner, are of enormous size, perfectly round and of unusual substance. The individual petals are very broad and cover each other in such a manner as to make the flowers appear almost double, the border of every petal being conspicuously curled. The plants are of a robust growth and form compact bushes of a round shape.
40. GIANT BATH'S EMPRESS. The finest of fancy English Pansies. Flowers are very large, mostly frilled and blotched and of great substance and the colors are brilliant and varied.

12. KENILWORTH GIANT PRIZE is undoubtedly the largest flower and longest stemmed Pansy in the world. The enormous flowers are of perfect form and of great substance. Petals overlapped and undulating. The rich colorings and markings are widely varied, some flowers being almost self-colored. 500 seeds 30c, 1000 seeds 50c, ⅛ oz. $1.35, ¼ oz. $2.50, oz. $10.00.

10. KENILWORTH GIANT EXHIBITION is the very finest complete mixture ever sent out. Seed carefully saved only from marked plants of the best varieties, with the largest and best shaped flowers and richest coloring. It is impossible to convey an adequate idea of the delightful variations in color and markings of this unrivaled mixture. 500 seeds 30c, 1000 seeds 50c, ⅛ oz. $1.35, ¼ oz. $2.50, oz. $10.00.

New Early-flowering, or Winter Blooming

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow with dark eye.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with dark eye.
16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.
18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations.

500 seeds 25c, 1000 seeds 40c, ⅛ oz. $1.10, ¼ oz. $2.00, oz. $7.50.

20. PRINCESS. (The New Upright Pansy.) This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture on heavy stem carried well above the foliage. Attractive by brilliancy of its colors.

70. ORCHID-FLOWERED, Mixed. A dwarf, free bloomer, with a range of delicate colors that do not exist in any other Pansies; a remarkable combination of light rose, shell pink, blush mauve, fawn, light brown, orange and chamois.

GIANT PANSY SEED

In Separate Colors

38. Mme. Perret. Red and wine shades.
42. Adonis. Light blue, white center.
44. Black. Almost coal black.
46. Giant Apollo (Masterpiece type). New bronze, veined and blotched.
48. Lord Beaconsfield. Purple, shaded white.
50. Goliath. Large, curled yellow, blotched.
56. Light Blue Shades.
58. Indigo Blue. Deep, velvety blue.
80. Purple. Large, rich deep color.
84. Mercury. New. A deep blackish purple, really self-colored.
86. Pres. McKinley. Yellow, dark blotched.
90. Vulcan. Dark red, with five blotches.
92. Victoria. Blood red, violet blotches.
94. Red. A collection of rich, red shades.
98. Psyche. Curled white, with five blotches.
100. Yellow. With dark blotch.
102. Yellow. Large golden yellow.
104. White. With violet blotch.
106. White. Large satiny white.
110. The preceding 19 colors mixed in equal proportions.

the seedsmen. The production, preparation and distribution of farm and garden seeds is an exceedingly complicated business, to which the application of impracticable law may easily do more harm than good.

In the general circumstances of international and interstate trade in seeds it was unfortunate that prompt service from legislative control seemed to be necessary and advisable. Legislative control of the commerce of seeds is now general throughout North America, and I would not now recommend that it be dispensed with until such time as something that is permanently better be provided and finally established.

A Promising System.

In my judgment the voluntary action that has recently been taken by representative seedsmen on the suggestion of officers of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, is deserving of the careful consideration and wholehearted support of every member of this association. The working out of the plans which thus far have been given in brief in the press will naturally lead to a national system of voluntary seed control and to the gradual elimination by common consent of legislative control.

The seedsmen have been given good reason to expect that they will be provided with reasonably prompt and efficient service from seed laboratories made conveniently available to them. I have good reason to know that the officers of the Department of Agriculture who are to assume immediate responsibility for that service, will have no bed of roses. They will need your wholesome coöperation.

The Seedsman's View.

Ten years ago this step in advance toward voluntary seed control would probably have met with effective opposition on the part of members of this association. Perhaps there are even now those who are considering this new proposition from the viewpoint of which in the end may be the lesser of the evils. It is scarcely to be expected that you may obtain relief from legislative control that may seem objectionable to you during the period while progress is being made toward the permanent establishment of a system that will ultimately give better service to agriculture, as well as be more acceptable to good seedsmen.

The legislation that now exists may in fact be needed in the meantime for the protection of legitimate seed trade against the designs of unscrupulous seed venders. Within five years this system of voluntary control, now proposed, will come to be well understood in practice and may be made to provide the basis for the further betterment of the seed trade of a nature that could not easily be obtained by coercive measures.

ELMIRA, NEW YORK

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Capitola, Cal.—At the Brown Bulb Ranch it is stated that the rate at which orders for freesia and calla bulbs come in indicates that war conditions help sales rather than curtail them.

Mount Angel, Ore.—June 1 C. A. Gerhard launched his ship of business, the Mount Angel Seed & Floral Co. Mr. Gerhard has a greenhouse and a tract of land, and proposes to sell flowers, seeds, bulbs, flowering and vegetable plants.

ASPARAGUS NEEDS FRESH SOIL.

About fifteen years ago I planted a house to Asparagus plumosus. The crops did well for thirteen years; then I had the bed trenched to a depth of eighteen to twenty inches and worked in a quantity of stable manure. When this work was completed the bed was replanted to 3-inch and 4-inch plumosus plants.

The plants started slowly, although I gave one side of the bed a sprinkling of bone meal and later the other side an application of lime. The growth, however, was not so good and so rapid as formerly, although the other conditions were the same as in other years. The plants receive plenty of water.

W. E. K.—Cal.

After growing Asparagus plumosus in the same soil for thirteen years, the soil would inevitably become more or less soured and exhausted, and the trenching of such a bed would bring the sourest soil to the top. This undoubtedly is the trouble with the new plants placed in the beds.

The only real remedy for such a case would be to lift the plants and then dig out the bed to a depth of eight to ten inches, refilling the bed with fresh soil before replanting the stock. The sooner this is done the better. Although it means much work, it undoubtedly would pay in the long run.

W. H. T.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

The scarcity of all kinds of good stock continues, and both wholesalers and retailers have had difficulty in filling orders for good indoor roses, carnations, valley and orchids. Even sweet peas, not having gotten over the heat wave, are scarce and poor. Cold storage Easter lilies have helped out, though outside of funeral stock they are not much liked, nor in great demand. Gladioli are selling freely on account of the scarcity of other stock, but even at that some of the colors do not clean up. America, that good old standby, is greatly in evidence, its soft coloring making it suitable for any kind of work, but some of the more strongly marked gandavensis and other hybrids clash with one another and cannot always be used. Some pretty combinations are worked out in the retailers' windows with blue and white agapanthus and delphiniums, all these lasting well.

Field carnations are thin and poor, and there is little chance of improvement in these until the young stock comes into flower. Centaureas are fine hot weather flowers, the imperialis types holding their color much longer than cyanus. Another fine hot weather flower is the African marigold, the large double yellow and orange forms being fine for decorations of any kind. They do not show signs of wear so quickly as gaillardias and coreopsis, and the objectionable odor common to the older types is almost entirely absent. Spikes of single hollyhocks, too, in the softer shades of color, make a nice showing, and as the lower flowers fall those higher up develop, making a display over a long season. Greens of all kinds are still plentiful and good, but pot ferns are scarce.

Various Notes.

John Fincken reports an extra good run of funeral work at the Washington street store. Nursery stock is selling well and a good deal of landscape work is being taken care of.

An enjoyable evening was spent by the members and friends of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society at Jahnke's cafe, June 23. President Taylor was in the chair and introduced speakers and entertainers, including Mrs. McGillivray, wife of the treasurer, who was in good voice and received several encores for her songs.

Ernest Braunton, for many years connected with some of the older private places here and well known as a writer and speaker on horticultural topics, has been elected to a seat on the park commission. His knowledge of native and exotic shrubbery and plants should make him particularly fitted for the position.

Albert Goldenson, manager of the Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson store, reports a good run of funeral work and also several good weddings. At one of the latter the interior decoration was carried out in Shasta daisies, with suitable greenery. An old-time wedding bell was used for a centerpiece and the bride carried lily of the valley and white orchids.

J. M. Grant reports that, in spite of quiet times, there is still something doing in landscape work. He has several nice contracts in hand, as well as some bigger things under consideration.

GLADIOLUS SPIKES

80 sorts, including Pendleton, Niagara, Panama, Golden King, Glory, Blanche, Alice Carey, America, King, Augusta, War, Ida Van, Peace, etc., $2.00 and $2.50 per 100 according to variety and size. Mrs. Beulah R. Patton, wife of M. B. Patton, of the Patton Seed Co., Pasadena, died suddenly from heart failure after an automobile ride June 25. Mrs. Patton had not been feeling well since the extremely hot weather of a week previous, but she had given no cause for anxiety to her friends.

M. B. Patton, or "Pat," as he is affectionately known to a wide circle of friends, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife. Always bright and cheerful, bustling and happy in disposition, her sudden death is one of those terrible shocks to all who knew her. Mrs. Patton was a native of New Hampshire and in 1905 came to South Pasadena, where she lived until the day of her death. A large number of floral tributes were sent to the funeral, which took place June 27.

William Wienhoeber, son of Ernst Wienhoeber, of the Ernst Wienhoeber Co., Chicago, is one of our visitors this week. He evidently is combining pleasure with a look into the business end here, as he is keen on seeing what is going on. Mr. Wienhoeber came out by the way of the Grand Canyon and will return by the coast.

All the wholesalers report a falling off in the shipments to desert sections, much of the business now being done consisting of made-up designs and sprays. This is getting to be an increasingly profitable business and is a great convenience to small florists who do not carry much in the way of supplies. As usual when the growers are short of stock to peddle, the local demands on the wholesalers have been heavier and more consistent.

H. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

By reason of the unparalleled conditions that have prevailed and the possibilities for new developments, the florists here are particularly interested in the reports covering the first half of the year's business The facts revealed by comparisons of figures with those of the first six months of 1916 are gratifying for the most part, in that they show a greater volume of business this year than last. June was a good month all around. Weddings were exceedingly numerous and, while not so elaborate on the average as in former years, they were productive of considerable good business. Funeral orders were a big item throughout the month and counter trade held up seasonably well. Prospects for the last half of the year are considered bright.

The stock situation has improved since the last report, due principally to a few days of cooler weather, which has served to shorten the supply a little. After the deluge of flowers last week, the lighter offerings, while still in abundance for the demand, are a source of gratification for all concerned. Even with the improvement it is hard for the market to absorb the supply at substantial prices. Good roses are a little scarce, as most of the growers are off crop and replanting. American Beauties are noticeably on the short side of the market. This makes toward firmer prices on first-class roses. Russell continues to maintain its popularity.

Gladioli are becoming more plentiful from day to day and bid fair to dominate the market in another week. The average quality leaves nothing to be desired and the demand so far has taken care of the supply in good shape. Panama, America and Francis King are the varieties most in evidence. Dahlias come in for a share of attention. It is much to be regretted that this flower does not hold up better for shipping, as it has so many other desirable qualities and grows to such splendid advantage in this vicinity.

Easter lilies are plentiful and many yellow callas are to be seen. Lilium auratum is beginning to appear, the quality being particularly fine. Carnations are in excessive supply, so good flowers are hard to clean up even at moderate prices, and inferior stock goes begging at any figure. Good outdoor sweet peas are well taken, notwithstanding the wide variety of garden flowers. Orchids and valley are still a little short of the demand.

Various Notes.

Final details for the second annual show of the Dahlia Society of California were completed at a meeting held June 22 at the Palace hotel. It was decided to give the show in the ballroom of that hotel September 4 to 6, and to spare neither time nor expense in making it the finest exhibition ever held in San Francisco.

The flower show committee of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held a meeting at the Hotel Whitcomb a few evenings ago to make preparations for the proposed show to be held in the spring of 1918. Those present were M. Poss, E. James, J. A. Carbone, H. Plath, C. W. Ward, D. Raymond, Fred Bertrand, W. B. Clarke, Walter Hofinghoff and John Gill. In order to assure success for the show, it was decided to guarantee $5,000. Already about $2,000 has been pledged. A committee on schedules was appointed, as follows: M. Poss, chairman; H. Plath, E. James, C. W. Ward, V. Podesta, Fred Bertrand and Frank Pelicano, the last three representing the retailers. A committee was also appointed to see about the reservation of a hall in the civic auditorium.

The new store of F. C. Jaeger & Son, at 152 Powell street, was formally opened for business June 23. Besides the many friends who called to congratulate him personally, Mr. Jaeger received telegrams from Los Angeles, New York and other places, extending best wishes to the new firm. The combination promises to be a particularly happy and profitable one, as the son, Fred C. Jaeger, Jr., is taking an active part in the management of the business, and Mr. Jaeger's daughter, Laura, is to assist with the bookkeeping. The force is further strengthened by Manuel Gottelli, an experienced florist, who is well known locally, having been with Podesta & Baldocchi and more recently with MacRorie & McLaren.

E. W. McLellan has gone to southern Oregon to join his wife for a while, who has been up there for some time for her health.

Domoto Bros. are bringing in some fine potted Lilium auratum.

Mark Ebell, the Sacramento florist, was a recent visitor in the bay district. He reported business holding up well in the capital city.

C. Madvig, secretary and treasurer of the C. Kooyman Co., Inc., is back at headquarters after an absence of two months, during which he covered a large portion of the United States. He is well pleased with the results of his trip.

A. J. Rossi and Frank Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., are both reported to be convalescing. Frank Thatcher is on his vacation. S. H. G.

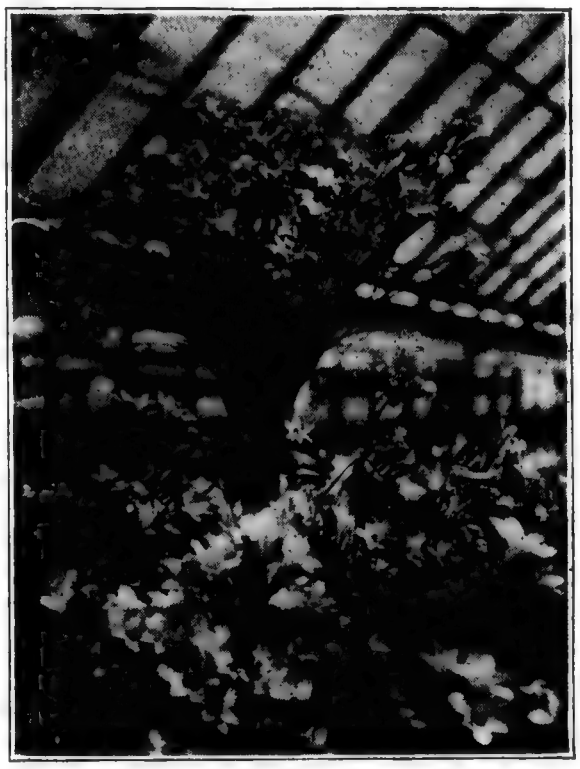
PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

There was little business for either the wholesalers or retailers last week, owing to the summer weather and the activity in behalf of the Red Cross. There was an abundance of stock in the market, that from outdoors coming in quantities, but there was little call for it. Funeral work has been light.

Various Notes.

During Red Cross week small red, white and blue bouquets were sold by a motion picture actress for $10. Pink carnations brought $5. Such prices made the local florists jealous.



Sunday closing again is being agitated.

George Spencer, foreman for Martin & Forbes, has been sick for the last three weeks, but is recovering. It is now reported that Mr. Spencer will marry the nurse who cared for him.

Max M. Smith and Thomas Luke will leave for a three weeks' vacation in Yellowstone park July 10. They will make the trip by automobile.

FISCHER'S SPLENDENS

A Magnificent Lavender Freesia

The only commercial colored Freesia in the world, not to be compared or judged in the same class with any other colored Freesia. It stands alone for size, strength, beauty and fragrance. The flowers are very large, with long, heavy stems with foliage reaching well up the stems, and are highly fragrant.

It is a Freesia that will stand the test of time and will be grown by all florists when stock can be offered at commercial prices. Was awarded a Certificate of Merit at the Pasadena Flower Show.

Stock is limited; send in your orders as soon as possible. Is offered in two shades of color, a bluish lavender and a reddish lavender. Only good sized, flowering bulbs are offered.

Price..per dozen, $3.50; per 100, $20.00

All staple items are in sufficient supply for present demands, with the probable exception of local roses and greens. There is a slight lull noticeable after the steady rush of last week's business, but there is no business depression. Weddings are still a big part of the activity, but graduations are all over with and funeral work is not so heavy. The weather has been fair, but not so warm as we usually expect at this season.

All parks and private grounds now are a mass of roses. Auto loads of these blooms were used at the annual rose show, which took place June 29 and 30. There were forty-seven cups and vases as prizes. METHODS OF PROPAGATION.

[This is the second installment of extracts from a paper read by T. D. Hatfield, of Wellesley, Mass., at a meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The third will be run in an early issue.]

Cuttings of evergreen trees and shrubs, mostly coniferous plants, are put in during the autumn and kept over in a cool greenhouse or coldframe. The same thing is done with cotoneasters, evonymus and buxus. They scarcely do more than callous during the winter. A fair percentage may be expected to root during the following spring and summer, but some junipers, torreyas and taxus may lie over another year. Those that root may be planted in the spring, but it is customary to keep them in flats until established, as the roots of some are brittle, especially the yews and torreyas.

Establishing New Varieties.

It is best to root all the forms and variations from the type from cuttings, especially the foliage forms of conifers, as they are surer of retaining their varietal character than when grafted. Ordinarily the juvenile forms of thuja, juniper and chamæcyparis, with acicular whorled leaves, give way in a few years to the adpressed adult form and sometimes quite extreme forms. If, however, these juvenile and other forms are rooted from cuttings they will be likely to retain their individuality during the lifetime of the plant. In this way many peculiar forms of conifers have been established and are now in cultivation, but if grafted they are liable to take on the adult form or revert sometime or other, either wholly or in part. The dimorphic character of many conifers makes it difficult to fix these variations with any degree of certainty and they sometimes break away. The red cedar, as before stated, has at first acicular juvenile leaves and later adpressed, scale-like adult leaves. Now, if it is pruned or gets injured the first new leaves that appear are juvenile and it does not resume the adult form for two or three years, starting life over again, after a setback, so to speak.

Dwarfing Plants.

It takes less time to flower a plant from a cutting or graft than from a seed, and at less stature. This fact is often taken advantage of to dwarf stock. A cutting of the poinsettia, if taken in spring and grown, will sometimes reach a height of six feet before flowering, but if a cutting is taken in July it will flower at one-third this height or less. It is a common practice to take cuttings of flower stems of Crassula coccinea and bloom them when a few inches high, and the same can be done with Sedum spectabile. The ordinary garden phlox can be rooted from cuttings and grown as a pot plant and has considerable decorative value. Chrysanthemums can be bloomed down to a foot high, depending on when the cuttings are rooted.

Leaf Cuttings to Fix Sports.

Drop a leaf of a Rex begonia on the sand of the propagating bed and it will root at almost every leaf fork. This suggestion has been taken advantage of by growers of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and now stock of this is raised almost exclusively in this way.

Leaf cuttings are often the only means of fixing a sport. Sports as they occur in chrysanthemums mean a change in the color of the flower, sometimes half and half. Generally the sporting does not extend to the whole shoot, and shoots below a certain point produce normal flowers; so to fix a sport it must be done from the shoot that produces it. Sometimes one is limited to leaf eyes, which generally root quite easily and so the sport is fixed. The plants obtained will produce rootstocks the following autumn from which can be got a plentiful supply of cuttings. Rose sports can be treated in the same way, although grafting and budding may be practiced with these.

OUR PRIMROSES, grown as usual from the best strains in existence, are ready again. The plants are all grown outside in frames, short, stocky and full of life. All our obconicas are from our own seed, seedbearers selected from thousands of plants. Order early and order enough, you know you need them, you know they are very profitable, you know there will be no Azaleas and you know you must have something to fill the gap.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE peony specialist of Dayton, O., P. D. Berry, the other day sold a plant of one of his rare varieties for $100, according to the papers. The entire crop this year was sold to the Good & Reese Co., of Springfield, O.

G. A. TOLLESON, who has been associated with A. V. Wickstrom in a nursery business at Lake City, Minn., last week purchased the Wickstrom interest in the firm. He will continue the business under the name of Tolleson Nurseries.

FIRE, originating from sources unknown, last week destroyed the large warehouse of the Mutual Nurseries, at Monroe, Mich., causing a loss estimated at $15,000 and ruining large quantities of seedlings. Charles A. Ilgenfritz, the proprietor, was in Philadelphia attending the nurserymen's convention at the time of the blaze.

THE A. A. N. MEETING.

[The opening sessions of the convention at Philadelphia were fully reported in The Review of June 28.]

Officers Elected.

At the close of the forty-second annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen last week, the following officers were elected:

President—Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.

Vice-president—J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.

Secretary—Curtis Nye Smith, Boston.

Treasurer—J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa.

Executive committee—T. B. West, Perry, O.; E. W. Chatlin, Winchester, Tenn.; Charles C. Mayhew, Sherman, Tex.

An Arboretum.

Acting on a recommendation in the address of the president, the convention voted to have a committee appointed to work out a plan for an arboretum to be maintained by the association, to be located in some accessible place where the association can hold most, if not all, of its meetings after the arboretum is under way.

National Advertising to Start.

Following discussion of the report of F. L. Atkins, chairman of the publicity committee, an appropriation was made as the nucleus of a fund for a nation-wide educational campaign to show the public the extent and purpose of the nursery business in the United States. This action is interpreted as a turning point in the history of the association, which hitherto has avoided publicity.

A session was given largely to discussion of advertising as an adjunct to the selling force of the nurseryman. W. F. Therkildson, advertising manager of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., told that advertising will sway public opinion. Robert Pyle, of Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, also urged the expert use of advertising. Irvin F. Paschall, advertising manager of the Farm Journal, said that nurserymen should take advantage of popular interest in agriculture to sell nursery products.

Lloyd C. Stark.

A strong plea for the development of amateur interest in gardening also was voiced by Prof. L. C. Corbett, of the Department of Agriculture. Professor Corbett maintained that the nursery business was suffering, both æsthetically and practically, from too exclusive cultivation of its professional side. Increase of amateur interest, he said, would do much to encourage the development of new stocks.

The funds for publicity must come from the members, as the association had a balance June 27 of only $5,361, and the receipts for the preceding year had fallen $2,483 behind the expenditures.

Opposes a Quarantine.

Acting on the report of William Pitkin, chairman of the committee on legislation, the association went on record as unalterably opposed to the needless and unjustifiable exclusion of all foreign nursery stock by act of Congress, as is urged by certain entomologists.

It is expected, unless new activities prevent, that a general conference of all interests will be held during the next few weeks. The committee "has instructed the association's counsel to consider the legal aspects of the matter and to prepare the case for conference, and we also have secured a scientific adviser who will be able to inform us as to the scientific aspects of the questions that will arise."

Export Our Surplus.

A resolution pledged the assistance of the association in restoring the devastated area of northern France. A plea came from Prince Poniatowski, of Paris, urging that American nurserymen send such stock as they can spare. The letter said:

> One can see through the Aisne Department lots of small orchards with trees cut down at about a foot from the ground and the upper part lying there in full bloom, enough sap having been found in the upper part of the trunk to respond to the call of spring. It is a heart-rending sight. Seeds for plants, vegetables and fruits are being distributed, and the damage can be quickly repaired, but it will take four or five years before it can be yielding any fruit, and the trees we can get from the south will hardly thrive in our northern climate, which is something like that in Vermont.

Business Matters.

While a good part of the convention was devoted to discussing the affairs of the association, including the failure of the new plan of organization, with "additional" dues of from $5 to $50 per member, to produce as much revenue as is needed by the wider activities, one of the sessions was given over to the discussion of purely trade problems. Under this head the following items were entered on the program and brought out some good thought:

"Prices, Wholesale and Retail. In the Face of Unprecedented Advance in Labor, Supplies, etc., Are We Not Forced to Raise Prices—How?" F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan., and W. W. Hoopes, West Chester, Pa.

"The Relations of Wholesaler and Retailer. Would the Interests of Either or Both Be Better Served Through Separate Organizations?" M. R. Cashman, Owatonna, Minn.

"When Are Evergreens (if Ever) Dormant?" J. B. Baker, Fort Worth, Tex.

"Maintenance of Soil Fertility," Milton Moss, Huntsville, Ala.

The papers prepared by J. B. Baker and M. R. Cashman were particularly thorough.

The Banquet.

The banquet, briefly referred to in last week's report as likely to become a permanent feature of the convention, has proved to be a great hit, not because of the excellence of the Adelphia's cuisine, but because of the excellence of the entertainment provided. After the vaudeville stunts and music, which were served with the food, there was "oratory" by members of the trade, but a semaphore, guarded by a huge policeman, was placed in the middle of the room and whenever a speaker showed any tendency to become long-winded he was interrupted by a chorus

PEONIES

One of Our Peony Blocks

Our peony list is not a long one, but it has been made up with great care and with the idea of including only the best and most distinct kinds. We believe we are offering a line-up that is really worth while, an assortment representing the very best out of hundreds of varieties. We give you sorts presenting a wide range in color and shade—coming into bloom throughout the entire season.

Our stock is correct and unmixed, carefully rogued every other day while in bloom. The price is for divisions with three to five eyes—and roots.

J. W. Hill, of Des Moines, Ia., read a night letter from Herbert C. Hoover, the U. He suggested that a representative be sent to Washington to confer with the proper authorities on the subject.

THE TEXAS ASSOCIATION.

Secretary J. S. Kerr, of the Texas State Nurserymen's Association, announces the completion of the program for the summer meeting of the body to be held at College Station, Tex., August 2, during the week of the Texas farmers' congress. The regular annual convention of the association will be held September 25 and 26, the place of meeting to be decided upon at next month's session. Membership dues should be sent at once to Secretary J. S. Kerr, of Sherman, in order to secure position in both the summer and fall edition of the badge book.

The program for next month's meeting follows:

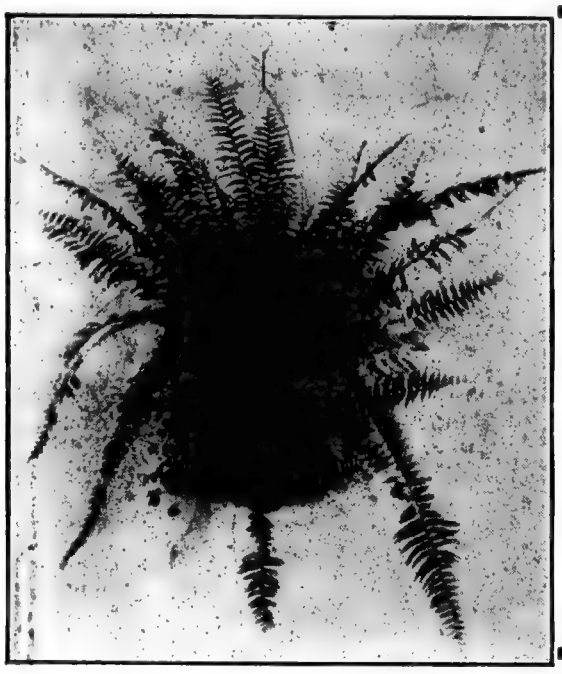
many weddings during the last ten days and a number of funerals, all of which have held business at normal.



Various Notes.

Frank W. Philips, of Philips Bros., has left for a month's fishing trip along the New Jersey coast. He is after big sea fiish. Fred Philips, of the same firm, went to Point Pleasant June 30 to remain until after the Fourth. He also was after fish.

August Begerow had an attractive patriotic window last week. In a tank floated two miniature battleships, while on "shore" were a Red Cross ambulance and an outfit for the care of wounded.

The Rosery Floral Co. featured a large American flag in flowers in its window display. R. B. M.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

The supply of stock underwent a change during the last week, there being an abundance where before there had been a scarcity. Roses are in good supply and are of fair quality. They range in price from $2 to $6 per hundred. Carnations hold up well for this season of the year. Besides the quantities produced by local growers, thousands are being shipped in, and out of the whole some good stock may be selected at low prices.

The supply of lilies has increased. They are now plentiful at from $8 to $10 per hundred. Indoor gladioli are of good quality and sell at $5 to $8 per hundred. Peonies are gone. New outdoor stock includes sweet peas and gladioli. The former are of good quality and sell at 50 cents per hundred. Delphiniums, snapdragons, Shasta daisies, gaillardias, coreopsis, Canterbury bells and phloxes sell well.

Various Notes.

The E. G. Hill Co. and Bertermann Bros. Co. have consolidated their retail stores. Mr. Thomas, former manager of the Hill store, is again at Bertermann's. Mr. Cluesmeyer has gone to A. Wiegand's Sons Co.

A. Kempe has been cutting some fine smilax.

Sairy Constantine, with the Claypool Hotel Florist, is away on a month's vacation. He intends visiting Mackinac Island and several other points in Michigan.

The Broad-Ripple Floral Co. has been cutting some fine indoor gladioli.

E. J. Bertermann has gone on a vacation.

The Claypool Hotel Florist had an attractive window decoration for Red Cross week. Cash sales between noon and 6 p. m., June 25, amounting to $70, were contributed to the fund.

Axel Nelson's delivery auto was slightly damaged recently when it collided with another machine.

E. E. Temperley has been having some specimen Chatelaine begonias.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana will hold its next meeting in Indianapolis the afternoon of July 10. The proposed cyclone, hail and snow insurance association will be discussed. A large number of Indiana florists are expected to attend. E. E. T.

The Market.

The supply in the market is fair and is sufficient for all present needs. The demand is fair and steady, but not strong enough to bring about a firm market. Shipping business in ferns is excellent.

Roses are in heavy supply, but only a limited number of the blooms are long-stemmed. The supply of carnations is decreasing and only a few are of good quality. There are plenty of good Easter lilies to be had. Gladioli have been selling as fast as they came in and more could have been disposed of had they been available. Among other offerings are snapdragons, feverfew, cornflowers, outdoor sweet peas, peonies, candytuft and gaillardias.

Greens are plentiful. New ferns are meeting with a heavy demand.

Various Notes.

Miss Laura Murphy, after attending the Confederacy Reunion at Washington and visiting other eastern points on her vacation, has returned home.

Among the recent visitors were A. W. Herre, representing the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, Ill., and Herbert Pennock, of Jupiter, Fla.

The annual meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held July 9. Officers for the ensuing year will be elected. C. H. H.

WESTERLY, R. I.

Mark A. Cassidy, superintendent of school gardens, who was injured in an automobile accident a fortnight ago and has since been at St. Joseph's hospital, Providence, is reported to be improving.

Conrad Schultz was a business caller in New York and vicinity last week.

The floral liberty bell used in connection with the recent Elks' flag day ceremonies, composed of Key roses, lilies and violets, was made by Farquhar Smith.

Russell I. Sparks, formerly with S. J. Beuter & Son, Inc., has enlisted in the Connecticut field artillery. W. H. M.

GERANIUMS

Geraniums are more the people's flower today than ever, and next season will be in greater demand than ever.

Geraniums are the Christmas, New Year, Easter, Birthday, and every other day flower. Now is the time to secure stock for Winter and Christmas flowering, or to grow on for stock.

We have a fine lot in 2 and 3-inch pots, large assortment of varieties in single, double, scented, and ivy-leaved sorts.

2-inch, $2.00 per 100, $18.50 per 1000; 3-inch, $3.00 per 100, $25.00 per 1000, until October 1st, when from every indication we will have to advance prices to meet present industrial conditions.

Greenhouse Heating.

Subscribers are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

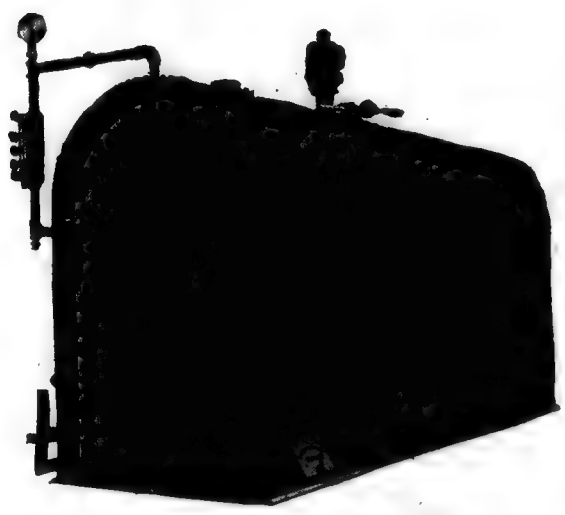
DEPENDS ON STYLE OF BEDS.

I am planning to erect a small greenhouse and should like to get the advice of The Review's Heating Department about the piping of it. The house will be 18x36, with 6-foot side walls, each containing three feet of glass. It will be an even-span house, running east and west, with a boiler room and potting shed across the west end. I propose to use hot water and shall want a temperature of 70 degrees in zero weather. What size and arrangement of pipes will be best for this house? How far below the level of the greenhouse floor should the boiler be placed, for best results? H. M. D.—Tenn.

To heat a greenhouse 18x36, with three feet of glass in the side walls, to 70 degrees in zero weather, we would use three 2½-inch flow pipes, placing one upon each plate and the other two feet below the ridge. For the return coils place three 2-inch pipes on each side wall and five under the middle bench. In case solid beds are used, it would be possible to heat the house with a 2½-inch flow pipe upon each plate and with six 2-inch returns on each wall.

While a fairly good circulation may be secured if the top of the boiler is even with the floor of the greenhouse, we would prefer to place the boiler two feet lower.

"PIPED WITHOUT ANY SYSTEM."



We are repiping three houses which we recently purchased, and which are now piped without any system at all. The houses are each 28½x100. We have a 35-horsepower steam boiler. One house is used for carnations, one for chrysanthemums and geraniums and the other for ferns. I am enclosing a rough sketch of the piping, so you can gather some idea of its present arrangement.

We had planned to run one 2-inch flow through the gable of each house and return with two 1-inch pipes under each of the four benches. These flows would leave a 4-inch main at the west end and run to the east end. We should also like to place a 1½-inch or 1¼-inch return under each gutter, to serve in case of snow. Will this be enough piping in the mum and carnation houses, where we want a temperature of 55 degrees at night? In the north house, which will be used for ferns, we planned to place two 2-inch flows on the purlins, with the returns the same as in the other two houses. Will it be satisfactory to run a coil on the east end and above each door? The houses are located on a small hill and are entirely without protection. T. F. C.—Ill.

The sketch shows three 2-inch flows, with two 2-inch and two 1½-inch re-

Remarkable Commercial Records

The past year has developed unheard-of commercial records for the business interests of this country.

U. S. exports have reached the enormous sum of $4,000,000,000.

The bank clearings of our country were $260,102,653,054.

The tonnage in steel assumed the astounding figure of 40,000,000 (forty million) tons.

The year's earnings in freight and transportation of the railroads ran into billions.

HORTICULTURALLY speaking, 1916 also made remarkable history.

Cut Flowers and Greenhouse Products } $70,000,000 to $72,000,000 (according to the best available figures).

These figures, we hope, will leave a generous and well deserved profit for our numerous florist friends.

Our company takes pride in announcing that the year 1916 goes on record as the world's highest mark in the sales of greenhouse boilers. During the year of 1916 we sold direct from factory to user the following boilers for greenhonse heating:

Kroeschell Greenhouse Hot Water Boilers	1,639,500 sq. ft. glass
Kroeschell Tubeless Hot Water Boilers	104,850 sq. ft. glass
Kroeschell Tubeless Steam Boilers	65,400 sq. ft. glass
Kroeschell Water Tube Steam Boilers	203,200 sq. ft. glass
Kroeschell High Pressure Steam Boilers	1,003,336 sq. ft. glass
TOTAL	3,016,286 sq. ft. glass

Getting Down to the Real Facts About Flues on Tubular Boilers

FIND out the actual inside diameter of the flues on practically any tubular boiler that you know anything about, and you will find they measure as low as two inches and seldom, if ever, more than three.

Such tubes choke down the combustion.

This is why.

The flames and gases coming directly from the fire, contain a surprising quantity of half burned coal, black sooty stuff, and also cinders.

The small tubes cool the flames and gases down to such an extent that the sooty parts stick to the sides of the tubes, or go up the chimney in black smoke.

Such smoke is simply unburned coal or money wasted.

The soot and cinders filling up the tubes, choke the draft, causing more and more of the coal to go up the chimney unburned. Sticking to their sides, it also prevents the water from quickly absorbing the amount of heat it should.

In comparison, look at those two big tubes in the Burnham.

They are so large that the flames continue to burn the gases and unburned parts of the coal throughout their entire length. The rear combustion chamber or space into which they lead, allows a further burning.

All this happens before the 4-inch tubes are reached, which means that the soot and gases are fully burned, giving off much heat otherwise wasted.

The 4-inch tubes are kept surprisingly free from cinders, because they drop to the bottom of the rear combustion chamber, from where they are easily removed.

You can plainly see that the big flues and the rear combustion chamber are practically as good heating surfaces as the fire-box itself. Also that only the clean, fully burned gases enter the 4-inch tubes, which extract nearly all the remaining heat before they have a chance to go up the chimney.

In this Burnham Tubular, you not only have tubes made of long-lasting charcoal iron, instead of short-lived steel, but a size and arrangement that produces ideal burning conditions for even the lower grades of fuel.

There being no dead heat absorbing masonry, the water because it surrounds all flues and the fire-box as well, simply squeezes the heat right out of the coal. At present price of coal, such a heat squeezer means a big saving.

For further facts, send for circular of this new Burnham, made at our factory at Geneva, N. Y.

turns, in the fern house; eight 1-inch flows and three 1-inch returns in the carnation house, and three 2-inch and two 1-inch flows, with six 1-inch returns, in the geranium house. If there is no glass in the outer walls, the amount of radiation in the fern and chrysanthemum houses is not far from correct. If there are only three 1-inch returns in the carnation house, as we infer is the case, there should be an increase to the extent of not less than two returns. However, the arrangement of the pipes is decidedly faulty.

While 1-inch pipes may be used for steam returns in houses 100 feet long, we prefer to use 1¼-inch pipes in houses of that length. For low-pressure steam it will be advisable to use a 2½-inch flow pipe for each house if a single flow is used, but if it is desired to utilize the 2-inch pipe now in the house, a 2-inch flow pipe may be placed upon each wall plate or on the purlin posts. To carry a temperature of 55 degrees in zero weather, we would use eleven 1-inch returns if there is no glass in the side walls, or twelve returns with thirty inches of glass. In case 1¼-inch returns are used, we would install nine returns if there is no glass in the walls, or ten returns with glass.

For 65 degrees in the fern house, three additional returns will be necessary. One or two of the returns may be under each gutter, as proposed. It is hardly feasible to carry the returns over the end door.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

The end of June usually marks the close of the busy season for florists, but the cool weather has kept stock in good condition and business has been excellent, which arouses hope that it will continue for a while longer, for this has been a record-breaking season.

There are still plenty of good flowers. These, together with asters, which are expected soon, and the early planted roses, will provide the market with a plentiful supply of stock.

Various Notes.

Several employees of various stores started on their vacations June 30.

The McCallum Co. announced a picnic for its employees at its establishment at Harmony July 4 and invited all of the Pittsburgh florists.

There were two heavy wind storms with an accompaniment of hail last week, but no damage was reported.

Edward Ludwig, son of E. C. Ludwig, has enlisted in the United States Army Hospital Corps and expects to go to the front soon. He is a graduate of Cornell University. Clarke.

WILMINGTON, DEL.

The Wilmington Florists' Club, which was organized in March, 1917, held its third monthly meeting June 25 at the home of William N. Potter, Twenty-ninth and Boulevard streets. The club at present has no home and meets with its members. After the business meeting, an entertainment committee served ice cream so long as the members could eat. The next meeting will be held July 30 at the home of J. Elmer Betty. The club has proved to be of great benefit to the florists of Wilmington.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Last week brought material evidences of the summer decline, and the masses of outdoor roses gave the indoor stock a veritable black eye. Funeral work has fallen off. The month of June, with its weddings, was, however, especially busy and afforded a general clean-up for the season.

The June Show.

Roses and strawberries were the features of the annual June exhibition which the Rhode Island Horticultural Society held in the ballroom of the Narragansett hotel at Providence, Friday, June 29, afternoon and evening. The exhibition was far superior to similar shows in several years. It was originally scheduled for the previous week, but owing to the lateness of the season the date was changed.

One of the most striking exhibits was of roses from Roger Williams park, of which Fred C. Green is superintendent. This consisted of nearly fifty varieties. The long-stemmed roses from the Burke & Burns Rose Co. attracted much attention, as did the spikes of gladioli from Smith, the Florist, who also had a bridal shower bouquet of marguerites and roses with yellow ribbons. Opposite the entrance was a novelty decoration from Macnair consisting of a circle of glass with figures poised on the edges fishing, or gazing on the crimson roses which floated in the water. Asparagus ferns and a center bouquet of pink completed the decoration.

Another decorative table represented a rock garden in miniature, set up by T. J. Johnston & Co. (Ed Brooke). This had a fountain and illuminated electric bulbs, bowl of water lilies and masses of pyrethrum, snapdragon, pine boughs and other greens. In the center of the hall was set a pyramid of boxwood surmounted by the spreading cibotium fern with Boston fern intermixed. Eugene Appleton with a display of decorative foliage plants and palms took first prize.

The prizes were awarded as follows

PLANT TUBS

EVERLASTING VIRGINIA WHITE CEDAR

EVERYBODY agrees that Plant Tubs made of everlasting Virginia White Cedar will best resist rot or decay. The "Keystone" brand of White Cedar Plant Tubs are made of this celebrated wood, and these goods are painted inside and out with best oil paints, a rich green.

They are bound with heavy steel hoops for the large size, and electric-welded wire hoops (galvanized) on the small size. The large sizes are trimmed with handsome drop handles and metal feet, and have perforated, removable bottoms.

These Cedar Tubs are made in all sizes, from 24¼ inches top diameter down to 6 inches, amply large for a Bay Tree and small enough for a Hyacinth. Every one guaranteed. Booklet in colors, with prices, furnished upon request.

The Market.

Business during the last week of June was good, considering the intensely warm weather and heavy rains. There was a good call for wedding bouquets and small decorations, but there were no elaborate affairs. Counter trade was slow and there was no funeral work to speak of. Blooming plants met with a fairly good sale for hospitals.

The supply of greenhouse stock was equal to the demand, although the hot weather has had a telling effect on the quality of the carnations. They are, however, exceedingly plentiful. Roses are in large supply. The quality has suffered from the heat. Sweet peas are deteriorating in quality. In outdoor flowers the conditions are somewhat better. Some fine gladioli are arriving and peonies may be had in large quantities. Irises are over for the season, but there is much other miscellaneous stock. Callas are in large supply, but valley is scarce, and the prices quoted are high. Orchids are in moderate supply.

Business during June more than came up to expectations of both wholesalers and retailers. Not only was there a larger number of weddings than during the same month of any previous year, but the outdoor planting was heavier. Stock of all kinds was of exceedingly fine quality this spring.

Various Notes.

A. J. Lanternier & Co., Frank J. Knecht, the Doswell Floral Co. and the Flick Floral Co. donated flowers to the Red Cross last week to be sold for the benefit of that society. Miss Georgia Alise Flick, of the Flick Floral Co., was among the girls dressed in Red Cross uniforms who sold flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lanternier celebrated their fifty-second wedding anniversary Friday, June 29. In the evening there was a reunion of their children and their children's families. Mrs. A. J. Lanternier and Roy J. Brown won prizes at cards. The house was elaborately decorated with roses and outdoor flowers.

The Doswell Floral Co. had some fine Ophelia and Richmond roses featured in a window display last week. They report June a satisfactory month, judging from the standpoints of supply and demand.

The greenhouse force of Frank J. Knecht & Co. is busy replanting stock. The men are cutting heavily of roses and carnations. The company has had an exceedingly fine spring business.

The Flick Floral Co. is showing some excellent outdoor stock, including gaillardias, coreopsis, calliopsis, Japanese irises and cornflowers. The store reports a record business during the month of June. R. F.

Florists, Seedsmen, Nurserymen-- which is the BEST way to kill weeds?

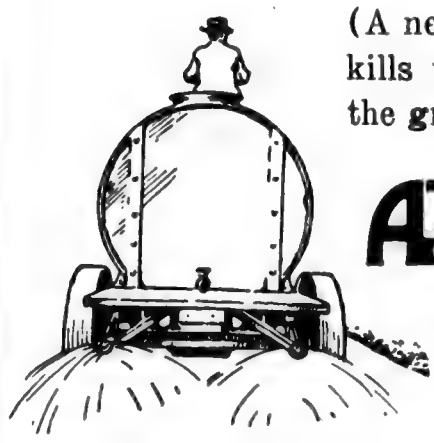
The old way has been by hand weeding—paying excessive labor costs several times during the year to do the work.



But today owners of estates and homes, as well as leading railroads, municipalities, country clubs, parks and cemeteries, maintain beautiful weed-free paths, gutters, drives, roads, tennis courts and rights of way by the use of

ATLAS WEED KILLER.

One gallon of Atlas clears 600 sq. ft. for entire season. Weeds die a few days after first application—then no more trouble for the entire year. Compare with costly hand-weeding, which must be done over and over again.

Tell your customers of the economy, ease and effectiveness of using Atlas. They'll appreciate it—and you'll profit.

It will pay you, in profits, to stock Atlas Weed Killer. All details on request.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

An unusual number of weddings and funerals, coupled with school graduations, cleared a quantity of stock last week. This class of work constituted the greater part of the demand.

The market is filled with peonies. So many are grown in this neighborhood that the supply is greater than the demand. About all outdoor stock is good and includes some fine gaillardias, cornflowers, larkspurs, sweet williams and Shasta daisies. Pink snapdragons and yellow irises also are good and have a large call. The only stock that seems to be in oversupply is carnations of the poorer grade, which clear only at bargain prices. Good carnations sell at $2 per hundred.

The demand for roses has dropped and prices are low. Good fancy stock includes Ophelia, Shawyer, Sunburst and Scott Key. Ward is a good seller. There are many Harrisii lilies in the market and the price is low. Outdoor roses are reaching the market in large quantities. Fancy ferns have been scarce, with a small supply of daggers. The market is well supplied with asparagus. Bedding stock still is slow in moving and good plants are offered at low prices.

Various Notes.

During one of the many recent electrical storms the house of Charles E. Sharpe at Sea Breeze was struck and several boards torn from its sides. Mrs. Sharpe and the children were at supper when the house was struck, but were not injured.

E. Kendig, of Oswego, and N. A. Hallaner, of Ontario, N. Y., were visitors at the peony show last week.

Winfred H. Wilson has a new Chandler automobile.

As advertisements for the peony show, all the stores had elaborate displays of those blooms in their windows last week.

Harry P. Neun is growing some good hydrangeas, for which he finds a ready sale. He reports business as excellent.

NO-SLIP

THERE are two no-slip points about our Half Iron Frame houses which you don't want to let slip by without attention.

The first is: We use angle iron purlins, because we know that the flat surface of the angle, when screwed to the bar, will hold the bar against any slipping better than a pipe purlin, with its round surface.

And besides, if an angle iron purlin is the best for a Full Iron Frame house, it's best for a Half Iron one.

This is a point we have been pointing out to you every so often. Sometimes oftener.

The second no-slip point is the way we securely bolt the column fitting to the purlin; and then bolt it hard and fast to the column by bolting it through and through.

With no slip of the bars, and no chance of slip on the column fitting, you overcome one of the most usual slip-up points in constructions that slip.

You know we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business.

For Germinating Small Seed

From one of our customers, George Hallock & Son, Orient, L. I., N. Y., we received the following:

"We also found a light wetting very beneficial at times in getting small seed to come up when conditions were unfavorable for germination. The value of this feature at times needs no comment."

ST. LOUIS NOTES.

interests elected the following officers: President, D. S. Geddis; vice-president, Jules Bourdet; secretary and treasurer, F. P. Maid.

The sympathy of many friends is extended to Paddy Patton, of the Smith Wholesale Floral Co., in the death of his father last week.

William H. Kruse left this week for an automobile trip east, which, no doubt, will wind up in New York in time for the S. A. F. meeting.

Ostertag Bros. put in a busy week with funeral work. John Burke says other lines of business have slowed up. The trade will be pleased to learn that Charles Ostertag has fully recovered from an operation for appendicitis and will be back at his post this week.

Walter Young, of the C. Young & Sons Co., returned last week from Chicago, where he joined the aviators at Ashburn. Mr. Young successfully passed the requirements.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Weber left July 1 for the northern lakes, where they will spend the summer. Mr. Weber is in search of better health. Fred C., Jr., assisted by his brother-in-law, Arthur Beyer, is in charge.

Joseph Wors, youngest son of Charles Wors, has joined the navy. When last heard from he was in Canada ready for the trip to the other side of the big pond.

Edward Westmann, manager of Vandervoort's flower department, says the season was better than any other since the department was started, and will warrant an enlargement of the department during the coming season.

Fred H. Weber has given up his Boyle avenue store and all business is being done at the new store, Olive street and Taylor avenue. The new conservatory recently completed by the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, in the rear of the new store, is filled with fine decorative plants.

L. L. Harter, plant pathologist of the Bureau of Plant Industry, spent a few days recently at the Missouri Botanical Garden for the purpose of examining the Texas root-rot fungus.

George H. Angermueller says that seasonable advertising pays and that his shipping trade this season has doubled.

C. W. Bolgiano, of Washington, D. C., son of F. W. Bolgiano, president of the American Seed Trade Association, spent a few days here last week visiting the various seed houses.

W. H. Miller, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, called on the trade last week. J. J. B.

The two insertions sold everything I had.—H. M. Morris, Rantoul, Ill.

SIM'S HYBRID YELLOW POLYANTHUS

his is one of my houses. 20x300 feet, of National Flower Show Gold Medal Polyanthus. These have been in bloom constantly since November.

I had two houses of Giant Yellow Polyanthus in full crop at Easter. A Review correspondent saw them March 31st and wrote:

"They include some beautiful varieties, which are being carefully marked and saved for propagation. One bed 300 feet long, of a pale yellow polyanthus, true to type in every plant, was particularly fine. I measured individual flowers two inches in diameter and many of the stalks stood eighteen inches high. Two houses, each 300 feet long, are devoted to this crop, and a glorious sight they are."

But the best of it is they had a glorious sale. You can do as well next season if you order your stock now.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

SWEET PEA SOCIETY MEETS AT BOSTON

The ninth annual convention of the American Sweet Pea Society, held in Boston July 7 and 8, brought forth an excellent exhibition from the commercial growers and amateurs of New England. The society at its business meeting also discussed some subjects important to the growers of sweet peas for the market.

THE ninth annual exhibition and convention of the American Sweet Pea Society was held at Horticultural hall, Boston, July 7 and 8 and, although the season was late in Massachusetts as elsewhere, the quality of the flowers exhibited was high. The meeting was favored by perfect weather conditions. For the first time in the history of the society W. Atlee Burpee & Co. had no exhibit, but local sweet pea growers had more than 100 varieties, occupying more than 2,000 feet of space. Few flowers were in July 7 and those were not of exhibition quality, but nearly all classes drew competition July 8.

George W. Kerr, president of the society, did not have his usual display and the flowers were much missed. There were no displays by seedsmen. Retailers who at previous Boston shows made nice exhibits were conspicuous by their absence and while there were several classes allotted to them, none of the splendid tubs of sweet peas, such as were seen at Newport and Bar Harbor, were shown.

A Fine Display.

Many local growers who had planned to have exhibits did not show at all. Increased food production, decreased flower production and shortage of labor were mainly responsible. Furthermore, the sweet pea shows come at the busiest season of the year for the professional producers, but, after making allowances for all these shortcomings, it was a magnificent display of flowers.

The leading prize-winners came from Lenox and Pittsfield, high in the Berkshire hills, and from Newport, R. I. These were private gardener exhibits. Amateur exhibits were numerous and the quality of the flowers splendid and only a little inferior to those seen in the open classes.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

President.
George W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.

Vice-President.
Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass.

Secretary.
William Gray, Newport, R. I.

Treasurer.
William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass.

George W. Kerr, Re-elected President of the American Sweet Pea Society.

The judges of the exhibition were George W. Kerr, William Nicholson, S. J. Goddard, James Methven, W. N. Craig, Donald McKenzie, J. Harrison Dick, Victor May, D. F. Roy, W. C. Rust and John L. Smith.

At the business session, held in the lecture room at Horticultural hall, President Kerr presided. There was a good attendance of sweet pea enthusiasts. In the absence of R. M. Saltonstall, president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, William P. Rich, secretary of that society, cordially welcomed the Sweet Pea Society to Boston.

President Kerr made his annual address and William Gray, the secretary, made his annual report of the activities of the society. William Sim, the treasurer, reported that the financial condition of the society had improved during the year, there now being a balance of $296 in the treasury. On motion of W. A. Sperling, the reports were approved and accepted. The report of the executive committee recommending that the fiscal year of the society begin January 1 instead of July 1 was adopted.

The Test Garden.

Prof. A. C. Beal, of Cornell University, in charge of the sweet pea trial grounds there, said that the finances had been cut to one-fourth the annual amount for the horticultural department and test work for 1916, and as a result all work on annuals had to be dropped. Some seventy winter-blooming varieties, including a number of Australian sorts, were planted last fall. Just about the time the plants started to bloom a leaky gas main destroyed practically the entire crop and no definite conclusions could be drawn from the test made. The university now is in a financial condition to go ahead with the work, Professor Beal said, and he hoped to include as many novelties as possible among both indoor and outdoor varieties.

Some discussion followed Professor Beal's remarks and it was decided to endeavor to have a delegation of the society's members visit the trial grounds at Ithaca during the flowering season.

William Sim spoke of the prices charged by California growers of seeds of winter-flowering sweet peas. He said he would not object to the high prices if the flowers came true to name, but in several of his large houses last season not twenty-five per cent came true. This meant a serious loss to growers, Mr. Sims said, as the bulk of the flowers were of unsalable colors.

Varieties Do Not Come True.

W. N. Craig spoke of another man who paid $20 per ounce for his seed and little of it came true to name. Secretary Gray said he bought what should have been Hercules from a prominent seed house, sowed it in fall, kept it potted, planted outdoors early and the flowers were mostly those of Mrs. Cuthbertson, with some whites mixed in.

It was felt that the seedsmen should exercise greater care in sending out seeds. George W. Kerr said he believed the California growers were doing their best to keep and send out true stocks. He had spent some time there recently and had seen between 1,000 and 2,000 acres of sweet peas growing.

J. Harrison Dick spoke of the work that the Rev. W. T. Hutchins had done toward popularizing the sweet pea in America and hoped it might be possible to have a Hutchins memorial medal to be offered each year in the same way as the Eckford Challenge cup is offered in England. Messrs. Sim and Gray spoke in favor of such a medal and it was voted to report the idea to the executive committee for its consideration.

A letter from the Merchants' Association of New York, asking the society to hold its next convention there, was read. Several members favored meeting in New York in 1918. Mr. Sim favored Boston. It was finally decided to leave the selection of the place for the 1918 meeting to the executive committee with sentiment favoring New York, as New England has had successive meetings at Newport, Bar Harbor and Boston.

Officers Reëlected.

On motion of W. A. Sperling it was voted to reëlect the officers of the society for another term. They are: President, George W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.; vice-president, Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass.; secretary, William Gray, Newport, R. I.; treasurer, William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass.

Secretary Gray stated that he already had some interesting articles in preparation for the next bulletin and had the assurance of a good annual bulletin and that he felt that it would hold present members and help to add many new ones.

A vote of thanks to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for the use of the building for the show and courtesies extended was passed on motion of J. Harrison Dick.

The Awards.

The complete list of awards, with varieties used by the winners, is as follows:

General View from the Entrance to the National Sweet Pea Show, Boston.

PRESIDENT KERR'S ADDRESS.

[The following is the address of President George W. Kerr in opening the meeting of the American Sweet Pea Society at Boston, July 7, 1917.]

As president of the American Sweet Pea Society, I welcome the members present to this, our ninth annual meeting, and the third meeting held in Boston during the last five years. Those members who, like myself, have attended all our exhibitions must have observed the great strides made in the quality of the exhibits, the improved methods of staging the flowers, and year by year the many new colors and varieties which are now exhibited.

Improved methods of culture are of course responsible for the fine flowers we now see. The day of simply sowing our sweet peas in the spring where they are intended to flower and cutting therefrom blooms to win cups or premier honors in keen competition, is indeed past. But, might I sound a note of warning against growing our plants so strongly as to induce coarseness of flower? Although I admire large flowers, I abhor any suspicion of coarseness, as it immediately detracts from the dainty simplicity of the sweet peas.

I regret that owing to the backward season I am unable to make an exhibit today. The plants which were being specially grown for my firm in the neighborhood of Boston are only now showing a few scattered flowers, and I am sorry that I am not the only exhibitor whose plants are yet so backward. However, we unfortunates must hope for better luck at our next convention.

Financial Condition Better.

The society is greatly indebted to two of its members, who by their untiring efforts assisted the treasury so materially last fall. I refer to Messrs. Totty and Stalford. The thanks of the society must also be extended to Mr. Morse, of San Francisco, who in the fall of 1915 was instrumental in securing for us several much needed subscriptions.

Since our last annual meeting we have lost the active services of the moving spirit of the American Sweat Pea Society, in fact, one who was instrumental in organizing the society, namely Harry A. Bunyard, who served the society in the capacity of secretary since its inception and to whom we owe our heartiest thanks.

Your committee was, however, fortunate in securing the services of another able and capable secretary, one who knows sweet peas from A to Z, and is also able to grow them to perfection. We have not yet forgotten Mr. Gray's sweet peas exhibited at the last sweet pea show held in New York in 1914.

That the sweet pea still retains its pride of place as first favorite among all annuals, can not be gainsaid. Had I had any doubt of its preëminence, such doubts would have been shattered during my recent visit to the seed growing district of California, where I had the great pleasure of looking over from 1,000 to 2,000 acres of this charming flower. It naturally made one wonder where all the seed went to.

New Type a Winner.

The new type of sweet peas, namely the early-flowering Spencers, is destined to still further enhance its popularity. In addition to its value for winter flowering under glass, this type will flourish in warm climates where the summer-flowering varieties are almost valueless. For instance, from sowings made in Florida in late September, the new early-flowering Spencers will begin to bloom by Christmas and continue flowering until May. They are also valuable for extending our blooming season in the north. I understand that they are now being grown to the exclusion of all other types in Australia.

In closing might I urge the members to assist our society by inducing their time the plants started to bloom a leaky gas main destroyed practically the entire crop and no definite conclusions could be drawn from the test made. The university now is in a financial condition to go ahead with the work, Professor Beal said, and he hoped to include as many novelties as possible among both indoor and outdoor varieties.

Some discussion followed Professor Beal's remarks and it was decided to endeavor to have a delegation of the society's members visit the trial grounds at Ithaca during the flowering season.

William Sim spoke of the prices charged by California growers of seeds of winter-flowering sweet peas. He said he would not object to the high prices if the flowers came true to name, but in several of his large houses last season not twenty-five per cent came true. This meant a serious loss to growers, Mr. Sims said, as the bulk of the flowers were of unsalable colors.

Varieties Do Not Come True.

W. N. Craig spoke of another man who paid $20 per ounce for his seed and little of it came true to name. Secretary Gray said he bought what should have been Hercules from a prominent seed house, sowed it in fall, kept it potted, planted outdoors early and the flowers were mostly those of Mrs. Cuthbertson, with some whites mixed in.

It was felt that the seedsmen should exercise greater care in sending out seeds. George W. Kerr said he believed the California growers were doing their best to keep and send out true stocks. He had spent some time there recently and had seen between 1,000 and 2,000 acres of sweet peas growing.

J. Harrison Dick spoke of the work that the Rev. W. T. Hutchins had done toward popularizing the sweet pea in America and hoped it might be possible to have a Hutchins memorial medal to be offered each year in the same way as the Eckford Challenge cup is offered in England. Messrs. Sim and Gray spoke in favor of such a medal and it was voted to report the idea to the executive committee for its consideration.

A letter from the Merchants' Association of New York, asking the society to hold its next convention there, was read. Several members favored meeting in New York in 1918. Mr. Sim favored Boston. It was finally decided to leave the selection of the place for the 1918 meeting to the executive committee with sentiment favoring New York, as New England has had successive meetings at Newport, Bar Harbor and Boston.

Officers Reëlected.

On motion of W. A. Sperling it was voted to reëlect the officers of the society for another term. They are: President, George W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.; vice-president, Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass.; secretary, William Gray, Newport, R. I.; treasurer, William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass.

Secretary Gray stated that he already had some interesting articles in preparation for the next bulletin and had the assurance of a good annual bulletin and that he felt that it would hold present members and help to add many new ones.

A vote of thanks to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for the use of the building for the show and courtesies extended was passed on motion of J. Harrison Dick.

PRESIDENT KERR'S ADDRESS.

[The following is the address of President George W. Kerr in opening the meeting of the American Sweet Pea Society at Boston, July 7, 1917.]

As president of the American Sweet Pea Society, I welcome the members present to this, our ninth annual meeting, and the third meeting held in Boston during the last five years. Those members who, like myself, have attended all our exhibitions must have observed the great strides made in the quality of the exhibits, the improved methods of staging the flowers, and year by year the many new colors and varieties which are now exhibited.

Improved methods of culture are of course responsible for the fine flowers we now see. The day of simply sowing our sweet peas in the spring where they are intended to flower and cutting therefrom blooms to win cups or premier honors in keen competition, is indeed past. But, might I sound a note of warning against growing our plants so strongly as to induce coarseness of flower? Although I admire large flowers, I abhor any suspicion of coarseness, as it immediately detracts from the dainty simplicity of the sweet peas.

I regret that owing to the backward season I am unable to make an exhibit today. The plants which were being specially grown for my firm in the neighborhood of Boston are only now showing a few scattered flowers, and I am sorry that I am not the only exhibitor whose plants are yet so backward. However, we unfortunates must hope for better luck at our next convention.

Financial Condition Better.

The society is greatly indebted to two of its members, who by their untiring efforts assisted the treasury so materially last fall. I refer to Messrs. Totty and Stalford. The thanks of the society must also be extended to Mr. Morse, of San Francisco, who in the fall of 1915 was instrumental in securing for us several much needed subscriptions.

Since our last annual meeting we have lost the active services of the moving spirit of the American Sweat Pea Society, in fact, one who was instrumental in organizing the society, namely Harry A. Bunyard, who served the society in the capacity of secretary since its inception and to whom we owe our heartiest thanks.

Your committee was, however, fortunate in securing the services of another able and capable secretary, one who knows sweet peas from A to Z, and is also able to grow them to perfection. We have not yet forgotten Mr. Gray's sweet peas exhibited at the last sweet pea show held in New York in 1914.

That the sweet pea still retains its pride of place as first favorite among all annuals, can not be gainsaid. Had I had any doubt of its preeminence, such doubts would have been shattered during my recent visit to the seed growing district of California, where I had the great pleasure of looking over from 1,000 to 2,000 acres of this charming flower. It naturally made one wonder where all the seed went to.

They are also valuable for extending our blooming season in the north. I understand that they are now being grown to the exclusion of all other types in Australia.

In closing might I urge the members to assist our society by inducing their flower-loving friends to become members?

Every subscription helps, and now that we have our heads well above water, let us with united effort make what is at present a comparatively small society a large and flourishing one.

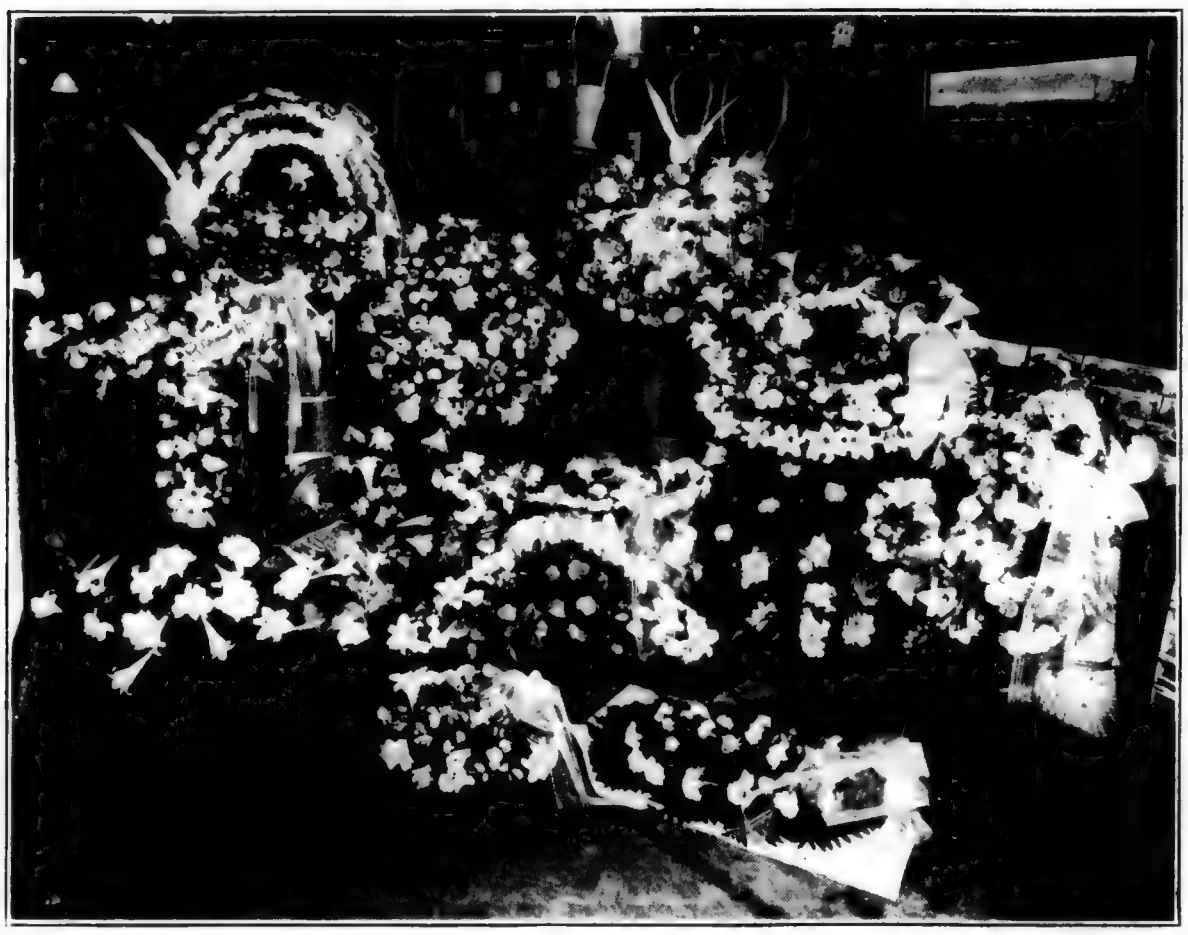
Our thanks must be extended to Mr. Gray, our secretary, for his unceasing work on our behalf during the past winter and spring; also to Mr. Dick for his careful compilation of our first bulletin. Messrs. Gray and Dick are aiming at something more pretentious in our next bulletin, and we must all do our best to help them.

PREVENTING EXPRESS LOSS.

Max Schling's Plan.

During exhibition week last winter the legislative committee of the S. A. F. joined me in my efforts to secure better shipping conditions from the express companies. We had a meeting at that time with three vice-presidents of the express companies, for which meeting I had arranged previously, and they, after an hour's discussion, decided to look into our complaints and try to assist us as much as possible to secure better service.

Since that time I have kept working on this matter and finally, after several consultations with these men, succeeded in securing a label, copy of which I enclose. This label is good for plant or flower shipping, and will be sent throughout the country to be placed on the bulletin boards of the different express companies. In this way it is made an official label.



The cost of the label is $1.50 per thousand. Anyone desiring to secure some should write to me, enclosing the additional cost of postage, as the price is net to us. They can be secured in lots of 500 or 1,000, or in such quantities as anyone wants to buy.

Express Companies Coöperate.

This is not the only privilege I secured. We florists told the express companies that we would gladly pay an additional charge to secure quick service and would gladly pay for telephone calls which this quick service at times necessitates. The express companies cannot go into this matter on that basis. The Interstate Commerce Commission does not allow them to change rates, even with our consent, and their system does not allow them to incur expenses for a shipper. To collect these small items the companies would have to go through the same routine as if a package had been shipped. Therefore, they decided to pay the cost of the additional telephone calls wherever necessary.

I am willing to keep on working on this matter, and I hope within a short time to find a way which will insure us against any unnecessary loss.

I will bring this matter before the interested parties during convention week in New York. Therefore, I would ask any parties interested in expressage to write or call and arrange for a meeting on express matters in New York during convention week. The best way would be for the different florists in the different states, or the different florists' associations, to elect a delegate, who would call on me and work with me. The influence of one, alone, never can secure so much as a body of men, each one willing to do a little work. I am sure that if I keep on working in this direction, we shall be able to do some good for ourselves and others in our business.

FAST WORK AT UNIONTOWN, PA.

The store of Stenson & McGrail, Uniontown, Pa., was a busy place June 29. One of Uniontown's prominent citizens had died and Stenson & McGrail were called on for a number of funeral pieces. Three members of the store's force turned out the work shown in the accompanying illustration in four hours. Nearly all the flowers used were grown by the firm, showing, as the proprietors of the store expressed it, "that even in our small town we sometimes have to get a move on."

REASONS FOR CONSOLIDATING.

Announcement recently was made in The Review of the purchase of the Indianapolis retail interests of the E. G. Hill Co. by Bertermann Bros. Co. The following notice recently was given the public in that city:

CONSOLIDATED.

Bertermann Bros. Co. E. G. Hill Floral Co.

To give still better service and prices; to maintain one of the best flower shops in the country; to combine selling forces, to enable the public and agents of both firms in Indiana and surrounding states to use fresh Cumberland flowers; to promote the selling of flowers by wire; to secure and give the same advantage of other large local firms by merging; to greet friends of both firms and show every courtesy possible, are our reasons.

With the consolidation of interests the number of first-class flower stores in Indianapolis is reduced by one and the E. G. ROTARY FLORISTS CONVENE.

The question of charging for packing, the cost of fuel and war-time prices of flowers were among the subjects discussed by the assembled Rotary florists at last month's annual convention of the International Association of Rotary Clubs, held at Atlanta, Ga. R. Irving Gresham, of the Dahl Floral Co., Atlanta, was elected chairman of the florists' unit in Rotary and Thomas Joy, of Nashville, Tenn., was reëlected secretary-treasurer.

It was recommended that the advertising in the official organ of the international organization be continued next year and that Chairman Gresham and Secretary Joy endeavor to have all florist Rotarians contribute toward the advertising fund. The secretary was authorized to prepare a roster of the country's Rotary florists and to supply each member with a copy, to make for accuracy in the exchange of telegraph and mail orders. It was proposed to appoint a sub-chairman in each Rotary district, whose duty it shall be to solicit the interest and financial aid of all members in his territory.

ILLINOIS FLORISTS TO MEET.

The fall meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association will be held in the armory at Galesburg, Ill., November 6 and 7. President Pillsbury says the intention is to have a big flower exhibition as a side show for the public.

FLORISTS AND THE DRAFT.

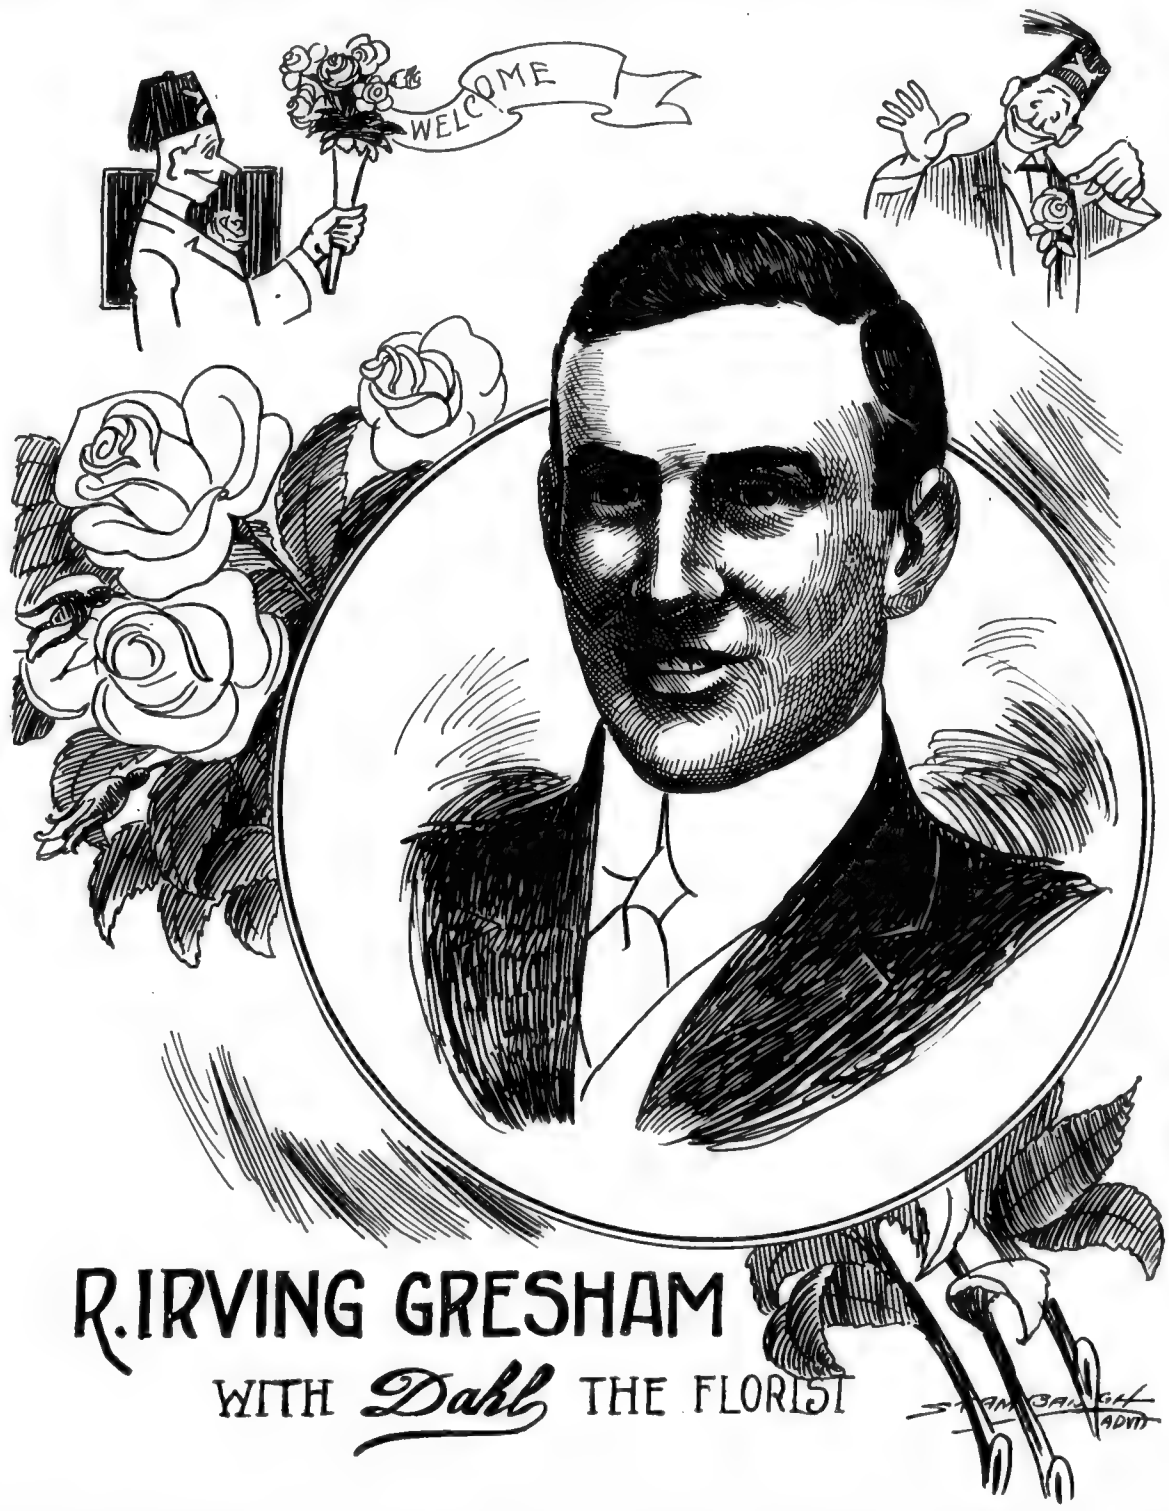
The selective draft by which the men who registered June 5 for service in the United States army will be selected is expected to be made soon and the drafted men called to the colors September 1. In the meantime President Wilson has announced the regulations which will govern exemptions from service.

These regulations which will affect the young men in the florists' trade are:

Physical disability.

Having a dependent wife or child; being a son of a dependent widow; a son of aged, dependent or infirm parent, or brother of a dependent orphan child under 16 years of age.

Subjects of Germany and all other aliens who have not taken out their first papers.



Being morally deficient.

Being a member of any well-recognized religious sect existing May 18, 1917, whose creed forbids participation in war and whose religious conscience is in accord with that creed.

Physical disability, of course, will mean the rejection of the drafted man whether he wills or not. Exemption under any of the other provisions must be claimed and will be passed upon by the local exemption board. An appeal from the decision of this board may be taken to the district board.

It is certain that when President Wilson designates certain industries as necessary to the maintenance of the military organization, that of florists will not be among them. Employment in one of these industries, however, will not be absolute ground for exemption. It must be shown that the person seeking exemption is necessary to the industry and cannot be replaced by another person without detriment to that industry.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

DOWN at Atlanta, Ga., there is a live wire florist, R. Irving Gresham, for many years associated with the C. A. Dahl Co. Mr. Gresham knows nothing of sloth; he is busy every moment and he uses his head as well as his hands in his business. So when the Rotarians held their annual meeting at Atlanta a few days ago it was only natural that the local newspaper artist should cartoon Gresham as the symbol of the Atlanta florists' welcome to the visitors. And it was much as a matter of course that the florists in Rotary—173 of them, also progressives and good fellows—should elect Gresham chairman of the florists' section of the International Association of Rotary Clubs. He says it will be his purpose during his term of office to get a florist into each of the 127 local Rotary clubs not now so fortunate.

By the nature of his occupation, the young man in the florists' trade, especially the growing end, will come near the physically ideal for a soldier. His employment in pure air indoors and out and his activity make for good health, which is a prime requisite among the qualities of a good fighting man.

Messrs. Gray and Dick are aiming at something more pretentious in our next bulletin, and we must all do our best to help them.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

PREVENTING EXPRESS LOSS.

Max Schling's Plan.

During exhibition week last winter the legislative committee of the S. A. F. joined me in my efforts to secure better shipping conditions from the express companies. We had a meeting at that time with three vice-presidents of the express companies, for which meeting I had arranged previously, and they, after an hour's discussion, decided to look into our complaints and try to assist us as much as possible to secure better service.

Since that time I have kept working on this matter and finally, after several consultations with these men, succeeded in securing a label, copy of which I enclose. This label is good for plant or flower shipping, and will be sent throughout the country to be placed on the bulletin boards of the different express companies. In this way it is made an official label.

The cost of the label is $1.50 per thousand. Anyone desiring to secure some should write to me, enclosing the additional cost of postage, as the price is net to us. They can be secured in lots of 500 or 1,000, or in such quantities as anyone wants to buy.

COAL COST NOT CUT

FLIMFLAMMING THE PUBLIC.

But the Public Wakes Up.

The daily newspapers, which hailed the coal price fixing agreement pulled off at Washington as a wonderful thing for the people, one by one are coming around to the view expressed by The Review in reporting the affair, that it was not what it purported to be; that it was in reality an affirmation of extortionate mine mouth prices and in no sense a reduction.

The Chicago Tribune, which was one of the papers that gave the "reduction" the biggest send-off, now declares that "the coal mine owners of Illinois and Indiana still have the soft coal situation by the tail."

The Operators' Side.

May 29 the Tribune printed an article showing that June 1, 1916, the price of Illinois soft coal screenings at the mine mouth was from 80 cents to $1 a ton. It also stated that May 29, 1917, the price of the same coal under the same conditions was $2.75 a ton.

In an effort to make a fair statement of the changed conditions which justified such an enormous increase in the price of coal, George H. Cushing, editor of the Black Diamond, organ of the coal mine owners, was asked to say in what particulars and to what extent the cost of producing coal in the Illinois district had increased. These figures are as follows:

Increased cost of labor, due to increased wages	$0.50
Increased cost of all mining materials	.10
Increased cost of securing and housing miners	.05
Total increased cost per ton	$0.65

Accepting these figures at their face value—and other experts say they are much too liberal—the justified price for soft coal at the pit mouth June 1, 1917, was something like $1.55 a ton.

The price then prevailing was $2.75 a ton, which gives an additional profit of $1.20 a ton over and above that reaped by the miners in 1916.

When asked to explain and to justify, if possible, this addition of $1.20 a ton on top of the allowance for increased cost of production, Mr. Cushing hesitated and evaded.

"Perhaps they did it because they thought they could get the money," it was suggested.

"I guess that's about it," he replied.

Much Coal Is Stored.

The mine operators were hailed as patriots for agreeing to a price of $2.75. It may be that the patriotism was shown by their not raising the prices to still higher figures.

No florist has been able to find a place where he could buy coal at prices reduced since July 1, but even before the conference in Washington, consumers of coal were being urged to lay in at once their supply of fuel for consumption next winter. To a large extent they took that advice.

Perhaps the largest distributor of coal in Chicago reports that during June he actually delivered in Chicago nearly three times as much coal to customers as during the same month in 1916. The same report is made by other large dealers. It is estimated that, on the whole, more than one-tenth of the total supply needed for consumption next winter was put in the bins in June.

Public Stops Buying.

When the famous conference of coal mine owners was held in Washington it was announced in the newspapers that a drop of from $1 to $5 a ton would follow by July 1. That was followed by the vitriolic attack made on the work of the conference by Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Secretary of War Baker. Promptly, also, came an official circular of the Illinois mine owners, quoting prices which show no reduction whatever.

The result has been that, to a large extent, consumers have stopped buying coal for storage. Dealers complain quite generally that their delivery teams are standing idle in the barns. It is also true that large dealers are not storing coal in their yards. There is an extremely small supply now on the ground in Chicago. And some of the largest dealers are advising their customers not to buy and store coal at present. They are themselves waiting for the price at the mine mouth to drop.

STOP MANURE WASTE.

Farmers are urged by Assistant Secretary Carl Vrooman, of the United States Department of Agriculture, to make every effort to save the vast amount of valuable manure now allowed to go to waste in this country. Assistant Secretary Vrooman estimates that one-half the manure produced in the United States is not used as a fertilizer, there being an annual loss of material worth $1,200,000,000—one and one-half times the value of the country's 1916 wheat crop.

"This is not a wild guess," he continues, "but a shrewd and conservative estimate based on reliable statistics. It has been found that each horse or mule produces annually $27 worth of manure (as compared with commercial fertilizers); each head of cattle $20 worth; each hog $8 worth. Calculating from the 1910 census figures for number of animals on farms, the total value of manure produced is found to be about $2,461,000,000. Recent investigations by the Department of Agriculture indicate that at least half of this great wealth of fertilizing material is sheer waste. In some good general farming sections not more than fifteen per cent of the manure produced is used. Even in the most intensive dairy regions, where cows are largely stall fed and comparatively great care taken with the manure, the loss seems to be approximately twenty-five per cent.

"This great war has brought home to us Americans, as it has never been emphasized before, the fact that we are the world's champion wasters. Without making any comparisons, and subject to correction if it can be shown that the facts are otherwise, I dare aver that our $1,000,000,000 manure waste is the world's greatest single economic leak—the prize waste of the champion wastrels. With commercial fertilizers scarce, and some of them almost unobtainable, it would seem well worth our while, in this juncture, even without any reference to war conditions, to do everything within our power to stem this tide of loss, especially in consideration of the fact that stable manure is the best form of fertilizer known."

CARNATIONS

IRRIGATION AND BENCHING.

Too Much Water Harmful.

Early in the spring we promised to have something to say about irrigating the carnation field, having in mind the need of artificial watering in case of a repetition of last summer's absence of rain. So far this season there has been ample rainfall, at least in this section, and there probably has been absolutely no need for additional watering of the carnation plants. Therefore, unless you already possess a sprinkling outfit and installed it after the planting was finished, to be used when necessary, you will probably not have any. There are, however, some of these systems installed, and to the owners of these we want to direct a few timely remarks.

There can be no denying the fact that a sprinkling system will prove a great help in producing field-grown carnation plants, if it is used intelligently. On the other hand, it can prove just the opposite, if a proper degree of judgment is not exercised in using it. There is always present a great danger of overdoing a good thing, and especially is it true in this case.

A plentiful supply of water usually will result in a strong growth, and the natural tendency is to give the plants all the water they want. This probably is the correct thing to do during the months of May and June, during which time the plant is practically made. Beginning with the first of July, however, the grower must begin to work the plant into proper condition for lifting rather than to encourage its growth. That can only be done by withholding the water and cultivating the field, and that is where judgment will come into play. If the plants have had an abundance of water, it will not do to allow them to go to the other extreme too quickly, or they will begin to fire and lose the lower foliage. Especially is this true if you do not cultivate the plants frequently; in fact, frequent cultivation will prove of the greatest help in keeping the soil in proper condition.

Condition Goes Before Size.

A large, soft plant will not transplant well, but a well matured plant that has been run rather on the dry side for a few weeks before planting time, regardless of the size, usually will come through without trouble. For this reason we are always mindful of the condition of the plants, rather than their size, at planting time. Experience has taught us that a medium-sized plant in good condition for transplanting will soon overtake a large plant that lingers for several weeks before it really is under way. It should be borne in mind, however, that we are saying nothing against a large plant which is properly matured for planting.

The time is here to prepare the benches for replanting. Do not lengthen the work any more than is necessary, as every day lost will mean just that much less time for the new plant to make its growth. Empty benches produce no revenue; put on enough men to push the work along. If possible, refill a whole house at one time. You will find it much easier to handle a whole house of newly planted carnations than part of a house of them. When refilling the benches, see that the soil is well pulverized and that the bench is properly filled along the edges, and level the soil off nicely as you go along. Place an inch of strawy manure on the bottom of the bench before filling in the soil, and before filling make sure that the bench will go through the next season without breaking down. There is, perhaps, nothing more vexing than to have a bench give way under a batch of high-grade stock.

A. F. J. Baur.

GREEN APHIS ON CARNATIONS.

I am sending you three plants of carnations, one each of Matchless, White Wonder and Alice, and would like to have you tell me the cause of the spots and streaks on the foliage. The plants appeared to be healthy until they were attacked by green aphis, but after a few sprayings with a nicotine extract this pest apparently was overcome, as I found no more of the insects. The plants, however, resemble those sent you. Do you think they will come through all right by benching time?

A. L.—Mo.

Those spots on your carnation plants were caused rather by the punctures made by the aphis than by the nicotine. There is no reason why the plants should not grow right along and make fine plants by early August. We noted two or three leaves with leaf-spot on them. It might be advisable to go over the field and pick off all the leaves that show a trace of this disease. A hot, sultry spell would cause the disease to spread rapidly and endanger your entire stock. A. F. J. B.

ZOE LEADS THEM ALL?

A carnation which has been on the market long enough to have proved itself is Zoe Symonds. It is a variety which originated with Henry J. Symonds, at Decorah, Ia., but which never has been widely disseminated. Peter Reinberg has grown it in considerable quantity for the Chicago market and has sold the cuttings to a number of other growers in various parts of the country. Another grower who obtained stock of the originator is Joseph Bancroft & Son, Inc., Cedar Falls, Ia. George H. Bancroft, secretary and treasurer of the company, who supplied the photograph for the accompanying illustration, says that Zoe Symonds with them has proved to be the best dark pink they ever have seen, and they have tried practically all of them.

Carnation Zoe Symonds Has Made Some Warm Friends.

The originator describes the color as cerise. The average size of the flower is from three to three and one-half inches. The flowers are well built up in the center and are carried on long, stiff stems. It is said to be a rapid grower and prolific bloomer. The variety was registered with the American Carnation Society in 1913 as a cross of White Perfection and Prosperity.

BADLY INFESTED WITH THRIPS.

Can you help me out of my trouble? As you can see by examining the enclosed carnation buds, they are in bad condition. Can you tell me the cause and the best remedy? P. J. S.—Ill.

If you will tear open one of your buds, you will find a number of small insects, known as thrips. They are about one-sixteenth of an inch long and about one-fourth as wide, and of a light brown color. You will have to look sharp, as they are quick to hide among the petals. It would be useless to start now to dislodge them. They multiply so fast during the warm weather that you could not hope to get them under control before it would be time to refill the benches with new stock. The time to fight thrips is during cold weather, when conditions are in your favor. By keeping them down throughout the cool season, you could keep the upper hand after warm weather sets in. If the percentage of good blooms is too small to be profitable, I suggest that you tear these infested plants out and get your houses ready for an early start with the new plants. It will pay you far better than to try to exterminate the thrips. Empty the houses entirely and fumigate heavily with cyanide gas. A. F. J. B.

CULTURE OF SMILAX.

Please inform me as to the proper treatment of my smilax plants. They grew splendidly during the entire winter and some of them now are drying off. The remainder I propose to transplant into another house, but I would like to know if I should dry them first. M. M.—Mo.

The smilax may be transplanted from the old bed to the new one without being really dried off, but young stock from 3-inch pots would give better results, as the old plants may not start off as evenly as the young ones and consequently would not produce so good a crop. A bed of smilax should have a depth of six inches of good soil and should be well drained, for after the plants are established they require plenty of water.

During the hot weather a light shading may be put on the glass, but by the middle of September the plants should have full light, and throughout the winter a night temperature of 60 degrees should be maintained. Syringe the plants every bright day, otherwise thrips and red spider are likely to attack them. W. H. T.

Increased cost of securing and housing miners	.05
Total increased cost per ton	$0.65

Accepting these figures at their face value -and other experts say they are much too liberal- the justified price for soft coal at the pit mouth June 1, 1917, was something like $1.55 a ton.

The price then prevailing was $2.75 a ton, which gives an additional profit of $1.20 a ton over and above that reaped by the miners in 1916.

When asked to explain and to justify, if possible, this addition of $1.20 a ton on top of the allowance for increased cost of production, Mr. Cushing hesitated and evaded.

"Perhaps they did it because they thought they could get the money," it was suggested.

"I guess that 's about it," he replied.

Much Coal Is Stored.

The mine operators were hailed as patriots for agreeing to a price of $2.75. It may be that the patriotism was shown by their not raising the prices to still higher figures.

No florist has been able to find a place where he could buy coal at prices reduced since July 1, but even before the conference in Washington, consumers of coal were being urged to lay in at once their supply of fuel for consumption next winter. To a large extent they took that advice.

Perhaps the largest distributor of coal in Chicago reports that during June he actually delivered in Chicago nearly three times as much coal to customers as during the same month in 1916. The same report is made by other large dealers. It is estimated that, on the whole, more than one-tenth of the total supply needed for consumption next winter was put in the bins in June.

Public Stops Buying.

When the famous conference of coal mine owners was held in Washington it was announced in the newspapers that a drop of from $1 to $5 a ton would follow by July 1. That was followed by the vitriolic attack made on the work of the conference by Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Secretary of War Baker. Promptly, also, came an official circular of the Illinois mine owners, quoting prices which show no reduction whatever.

The result has been that, to a large extent, consumers have stopped buying coal for storage. Dealers complain quite generally that their delivery teams are standing idle in the barns. It is also true that large dealers are not storing coal in their yards. There is an extremely small supply now on the ground in Chicago. And some of the largest dealers are advising their customers not to buy and store coal at present. They are themselves waiting for the price at the mine mouth to drop.

STOP MANURE WASTE.

Farmers are urged by Assistant Secretary Carl Vrooman, of the United States Department of Agriculture, to make every effort to save the vast amount of valuable manure now allowed to go to waste in this country. Assistant Secretary Vrooman estimates that one-half the manure produced in the United States is not used as a fertilizer, there being an annual loss of material worth $1,200,000,000—one and one-half times the value of the country's 1916 wheat crop.

"This is not a wild guess," he continues, "but a shrewd and conservative estimate based on reliable statistics. It has been found that each horse or mule produces annually $27 worth of manure (as compared with commercial fertilizers); each head of cattle $20 worth; each hog $8 worth. Calculating from the 1910 census figures for number of animals on farms, the total value of manure produced is found to be about $2,461,000,000. Recent investigations by the Department of Agriculture indicate that at least half of this great wealth of fertilizing material is sheer waste. In some good general farming sections not more than fifteen per cent of the manure produced is used. Even in the most intensive dairy regions, where cows are largely stall fed and comparatively great care taken with the manure, the loss seems to be approximately twenty-five per cent.

"This great war has brought home to us Americans, as it has never been emphasized before, the fact that we are the world's champion wasters. Without making any comparisons, and subject to correction if it can be shown that the facts are otherwise, I dare aver that our $1,000,000,000 manure waste is the world's greatest single economic leak—the prize waste of the champion wastrels. With commercial fertilizers scarce, and some of them almost unobtainable, it would seem well worth our while, in this juncture, even without any reference to war conditions, to do everything within our power to stem this tide of loss, especially in consideration of the fact that stable manure is the best form of fertilizer known."

IRRIGATION AND BENCHING.

Too Much Water Harmful.

Early in the spring we promised to have something to say about irrigating the carnation field, having in mind the need of artificial watering in case of a repetition of last summer's absence of rain. So far this season there has been ample rainfall, at least in this section, and there probably has been absolutely no need for additional watering of the carnation plants. Therefore, unless you already possess a sprinkling outfit and installed it after the planting was finished, to be used when necessary, you will probably not have any. There are, however, some of these systems installed, and to the owners of these we want to direct a few timely remarks.

There can be no denying the fact that a sprinkling system will prove a great help in producing field-grown carnation plants, if it is used intelligently. On the other hand, it can prove just the opposite, if a proper degree of judgment is not exercised in using it. There is always present a great danger of overdoing a good thing, and especially is it true in this case.

A plentiful supply of water usually will result in a strong growth, and the natural tendency is to give the plants all the water they want. This probably is the correct thing to do during the months of May and June, during which time the plant is practically made. Beginning with the first of July, however, the grower must begin to work the plant into proper condition for lifting rather than to encourage its growth. That can only be done by withholding the water and cultivating the field, and that is where judgment will come into play. If the plants have had an abundance of water, it will not do to allow them to go to the other extreme too quickly, or they will begin to fire and lose the lower foliage. Especially is this true if you do not cultivate the plants frequently; in fact, frequent cultivation will prove of the greatest help in keeping the soil in proper condition.

Condition Goes Before Size.

A large, soft plant will not transplant well, but a well matured plant that has been run rather on the dry side for a few weeks before planting time, regardless of the size, usually will come through without trouble. For this reason we are always mindful of the condition of the plants, rather than their size, at planting time. Experience has taught us that a medium-sized plant in good condition for transplanting will soon overtake a large plant that lingers for several weeks before it really is under way. It should be borne in mind, however, that we are saying nothing against a large plant which is properly matured for planting.

The time is here to prepare the benches for replanting. Do not lengthen the work any more than is necessary, as every day lost will mean just that much less time for the new plant to make its growth. Empty benches produce no revenue; put on enough men to push the work along. If possible, refill a whole house at one time. You will find it much easier to handle a whole house of newly planted carnations than part of a house of them. When refilling the benches, see that the soil is well pulverized and that the bench is properly filled along the edges, and level the soil off nicely as you go along. Place an inch of strawy manure on the bottom of the bench before filling in the soil, and before filling make sure that the bench will go through the next season without breaking down. There is, perhaps, nothing more vexing than to have a bench give way under a batch of high-grade stock.

GREEN APHIS ON CARNATIONS.

I am sending you three plants of carnations, one each of Matchless, White Wonder and Alice, and would like to have you tell me the cause of the spots and streaks on the foliage. The plants appeared to be healthy until they were attacked by green aphis, but after a few sprayings with a nicotine extract this pest apparently was overcome, as I found no more of the insects. The plants, however, resemble those sent you. Do you think they will come through all right by benching time?

A. L.—Mo.

Those spots on your carnation plants were caused rather by the punctures made by the aphis than by the nicotine. There is no reason why the plants should not grow right along and make fine plants by early August. We noted two or three leaves with leaf-spot on them. It might be advisable to go over the field and pick off all the leaves that show a trace of this disease. A hot, sultry spell would cause the disease to spread rapidly and endanger your entire stock. A. F. J. B.

ZOE LEADS THEM ALL?

A carnation which has been on the market long enough to have proved itself is Zoe Symonds. It is a variety which originated with Henry J. Symonds, at Decorah, Ia., but which never has been widely disseminated. Peter Reinberg has grown it in considerable quantity for the Chicago market and has sold the cuttings to a number of other growers in various parts of the country. Another grower who obtained stock of the originator is Joseph Bancroft & Son, Inc., Cedar Falls, Ia. George H. Bancroft, secretary and treasurer of the company, who supplied the photograph for the accompanying illustration, says that Zoe Symonds with them has proved to be the best dark pink they ever have seen, and they have tried practically all of them.

Carnation Zoe Symonds Has Made Some Warm Friends.

The originator describes the color as cerise. The average size of the flower is from three to three and one-half inches. The flowers are well built up in the center and are carried on long, stiff stems. It is said to be a rapid grower and prolific bloomer. The variety was registered with the American Carnation Society in 1913 as a cross of White Perfection and Prosperity.

BADLY INFESTED WITH THRIPS.

Can you help me out of my trouble? As you can see by examining the enclosed carnation buds, they are in bad condition. Can you tell me the cause and the best remedy? P. J. S.—Ill.

If you will tear open one of your buds, you will find a number of small insects, known as thrips. They are about one-sixteenth of an inch long and about one-fourth as wide, and of a light brown color. You will have to look sharp, as they are quick to hide among the petals. It would be useless to start now to dislodge them. They multiply so fast during the warm weather that you could not hope to get them under control before it would be time to refill the benches with new stock. The time to fight thrips is during cold weather, when conditions are in your favor. By keeping them down throughout the cool season, you could keep the upper hand after warm weather sets in. If the percentage of good blooms is too small to be profitable, I suggest that you tear these infested plants out and get your houses ready for an early start with the new plants. It will pay you far better than to try to exterminate the thrips. Empty the houses entirely and fumigate heavily with cyanide gas. A. F. J. B.

CULTURE OF SMILAX.

Please inform me as to the proper treatment of my smilax plants. They grew splendidly during the entire winter and some of them now are drying off. The remainder I propose to transplant into another house, but I would like to know if I should dry them first. M. M.—Mo.

The smilax may be transplanted from the old bed to the new one without being really dried off, but young stock from 3 inch pots would give better results, as the old plants may not start off as evenly as the young ones and consequently would not produce so good a crop. A bed of smilax should have a depth of six inches of good soil and should be well drained, for after the plants are established they require plenty of water.

During the hot weather a light shading may be put on the glass, but by the middle of September the plants should have full light, and throughout the winter a night temperature of 60 degrees should be maintained. Syringe the plants every bright day, otherwise thrips and red spider are likely to attack them. W. H. T.

S. A. F. FOR NEW INSURANCE.

President Kerr Names Committee.

The spring of 1917 was recorded by florists of the central states as a season during which the elements, in the guise of tornadoes and cyclones, set a record for destruction of greenhouses and stock. The cyclone which struck Newcastle, Ind., March 11, resulting in a complete wreck of the Benthey range of 110,000 square feet and severe damage to the Lynch and other establishments, was followed March 23 by a tornado at New Albany, Ind., by the furor of which one of the growers, Anders Rasmussen, was reported to have suffered a loss of $80,000. Then came the episode of wind and hail at Mattoon, Ill., May 26, in which A. D. King was the heaviest loser with $30,000.

Wind storms of other years took their toll and then became matters of memory, but it seems that to last spring's work of the angered elements there will be dedicated a monument, a monument in the form of a wind storm insurance for florists. For amid the wreckage of the Indiana ranges was born the movement on behalf of wind storm, or cyclone, insurance, and during the months since that time the agitators have done much in interesting their state leaders in the formation of an association or company to insure growers against losses by storm, with risks such as growers have and with premiums such as growers can pay.

To Report at New York.

Although the Indiana association of florists has already prepared a constitution and by-laws for an insurance organization of this character, and has even submitted the plan to the Florists' Hail Association, with the idea of having that body include wind storm policies with its policies covering damage by hail, it is probable that the actual shaping of the new insurance association will be under the auspices of the S. A. F. That the S. A. F. now is championing the idea is seen in the appointment by President Kerr of an insurance committee, whose duty it shall be to study the proposition, investigate the policies offered by the various companies and report its finding at the convention in August. The committeemen are E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind.; J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., and Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, Ind. The last-named has been the hardest worker in behalf of the new insurance, probably for the reason that he does not want other florists to suffer as he did March 23, when, in less than five minutes, a tornado blotted out the work of a lifetime.

COL. GREEN WEDS.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Col. E. H. R. Green and Miss Mabel E. Harlow at Highland Park, Ill., July 10.

Col. Green's chief claim to fame is that he is the son of the late Hetty Green and heir to her millions, but to many florists he is known as the one man who ever seriously proposed a trust in the florists' business. Col. Green established the Green Floral Co., with a fine range for cut flower production, at Dallas, Tex., while engaged in operating a railroad there. As with many another rich man, for a time the flower business served him splendidly as a hobby and he mingled much with florists. This was just at the close of the era of trust formation and Col. Green thought he saw in the large corporation idea the way to control gluts by the diversion of the output as required, with consequent large legitimate profits. To the owners of several large cut flower establishments in the middle west he proposed the creation of a corporation to buy in and operate the principal ranges. At the time The Review expressed the opinion that a cash offer might well be considered by anyone approached, but that a proposition to sell for stock in the trust would better be declined. This was based on the belief that the florists' business is not susceptible to the same rules of management as are manufacturing enterprises dealing with non-perishables and it was accepted as sound advice and the idea was abandoned by its promoter, with some reluctance he said.

Col. Green is 48 years of age. He had been referred to as America's most sought bachelor and he has the quality of making a friend and well-wisher of every man he meets.

INSURANCE FOR EMPLOYEES.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Protects Men.

An action which is believed to be unique in the florists' business was taken by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., July 5, when each of the corporation's employees, numbering between 500 and 600, was presented with a life insurance policy.

The insurance was secured by a blanket contract made by the Pierson corporation with the Travelers Insurance Co., of Hartford, Conn. It provides for $500 of insurance for each employee who has completed one year of service at Cromwell Gardens, and an additional $100 for each year until the maximum of $1,500 is reached. A disability clause provides that in case any employee is permanently prevented from working he shall receive the principal amount, either in a lump sum or in installments.

The corporation pays the premiums on the insurance, but each employee receives an individual certificate assuring him that his family will be taken care of in case of mishap to him. This should give each employee a comfortable feeling.

A Large Establishment.

Cromwell Gardens are located in the Connecticut river valley, two miles from Middleton, Conn., and consist of more than 300 acres. The corporation has more than 800,000 feet of glass on the place and the balance of the acreage is devoted to growing nursery stock. Besides, it has an extensive business in landscape gardening. The place is a Mecca for trade pilgrims from all parts of the country.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., is owned by Andrew N. Pierson and his son, Wallace R. Pierson. That father and son have the interests of their employees at heart is shown by their action in buying the insurance, which must call for the expenditure of a considerable sum annually.

FLORIST HAS OWN COAL MINE.

Florists who are now wondering about their coal supply for next winter have good reason to be envious of Fred W. Arnold, Cambridge, O. Mr. Arnold has discovered that there is coal under his 20-acre establishment and will open it and have his own coal mined.

Although Cambridge is in the center of a large coal mining district, florists there are having the same trouble as those elsewhere—shortage in supply and high prices. These conditions determined Mr. Arnold to open his mine and become independent of the operators, the unions and the railroads.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

ROT OF IRIS ROOTS.

I disagree with C. W. that shallow planting is a remedy for the rot of iris roots. In the first place, I do not believe it should be called root rot, but crown rot; the plants rot at the crown, and the tops drop off the roots.

Some irises are so badly affected by this rot that it is not profitable to grow them. Maori King is a good example of this, and there are a few other good varieties, when judged by their flowers only, which are difficult to grow with any degree of success.

If an iris grower selects the right soil and a sunny location, he will eliminate much of this rot evil; and I might add that barnyard manure should be given a wide berth. One severe winter when there was little snow to protect the plants I mulched them with strawy manure, and the following spring many of them died from this rot. I have noticed this trouble only with the German, intermediate and dwarf, bearded varieties.

Iris germanica will grow well when planted shallowly, often when simply dropped on the ground. I dig a shallow trench, perpendicular on one side, and place the irises against the perpendicular side at the same depth they grew in the nursery. If planted deeply all the new plants naturally will form at the surface, the same as the shallowly planted ones. Just because an iris is planted too deeply it does not follow that it will continue to grow that way.

I have never seen Iris honorabilis ailing from crown rot, and if deep planting causes crown rot, as C. W. says, why should it not attack this variety in the same way it does others? I grow irises by the acre, and if I could escape crown rot by shallow planting what an easy task I would have! I believe that soil, location and variety are the determining factors. Willis E. Fryer.

WHEN ROSES MUST MOVE.

How shall I care for my roses while I am rebuilding the house in which they are growing? I wish to replant them in the same house. V. R. F.—Ind.

If the roses you refer to are in pots they can be placed in coldframes, or, at this season, they will take no great harm if placed outdoors. If they are in beds or benches I would gradually dry them off and then prune them back somewhat, later digging them up and laying them in trenches outdoors. I should have the beds prepared for replanting so that this work can be started as soon as the framework is up and the roof is ready for glazing.

C. W.

SPIDER ON OUTDOOR ROSES.

I am sending you some leaves taken from my outdoor rose bushes. Will you kindly tell me what causes the leaves to curl in this manner and what to do to avoid this trouble?

W. S. R.—Fla.

The leaves were rather badly broken up when received, but they had traces of red spider on them. To keep this pest in subjection is not easy in a warm, dry climate. The plants should be kept moist at the roots artificially, and if you have command of a pressure of water from a hose, use the hose freely on your plants. Use a nozzle with a fine, misty spray and reach the under side of the leaves as much as possible. The pressure of cold water is the best cure for red spider on outdoor plants. When sprayed on the plants, some of the nicotine extracts will kill red spider.

C. W.

ROSES A SECOND SEASON.

I have two benches that were planted with grafted roses, 1-year-old dormant stock, last January, 1917. The varieties are Sunburst, Ophelia, Lady Hillingdon, Killarney, White Killarney, Mrs. Charles Russell and Richmond. They are blooming finely now. Would you advise me to rest them, and how long? How short should I trim them after the resting period and how heavy mulching should I put on them?

E. C.—Ind.

There seems to be no need for resting these plants at present. They had a good rest prior to benching last January and therefore can be run right through the summer and probably through next winter as well; indeed, some of the large growers of Killarney keep their young plants going without rest for two full seasons. When the time comes that the condition of the plants shows that their strength is becoming exhausted they should be dried off gradually and not so severely that the leaves will fall; you do not want the plants to become dormant, only to rest them. The process probably will require six weeks. After that they can be cut back according to their needs, the general tendency being to overdo it, and an inch of old soil can be removed and replaced with fresh. Water and warmth will start them into renewed action in a comparatively short time.

THE AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

By-Law Revision Proposed.

An executive committee meeting of the American Rose Society was held at the City Club, Philadelphia, June 27. A revision of the constitution and by-laws, so as to allow for changes in membership fees, was discussed and it was voted that the secretary should send out notices of the contemplated changes to all active members, that a vote might be secured, as provided for in the constitution and by-laws, before the meeting in Cleveland next fall.

It was resolved: "That the present rules for affiliated societies be revised to make affiliation dues $1 per year for each member of the society, provided that payment of such dues be made to the American Rose Society before February of each year, so that provision might be made for the required number of annuals."

A report of the Washington Rose Test Garden was submitted for the committee by Robert Pyle.

It was voted that a financial statement regarding the society's exhibition held in Philadelphia March 20 to 24 inclusive be prepared by President Hammond and sent to all guarantors.

Mr. Farenwald presented the plans of the National Flower Show committee and asked that the American Rose Society prepare a preliminary schedule of premiums for the coming exhibition. Messrs. Farenwald, Pennock and Fancourt were appointed on this committee.

Test Garden at Cornell.

The roses at the national rose test garden at Cornell University are now at the height of perfection, being several weeks later than in previous years. An outdoor meeting of the plant industry conference was held in the garden July 5. About forty members of the campus community were present, and the outing was most enjoyable. Prof. E. A. White welcomed the members of the conference to the gardens and spoke of the aims and purposes of the American Rose Society in fostering the test garden work. He was followed by Prof. A. C. Beal, who spoke on the value of different species and varieties of roses and described their location in the garden plan. After a bountiful picnic supper the party inspected the beds and made careful observation of varieties.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

ROSES IN THE SOUTH.

Summer Treatment.

Notwithstanding the torrid heat under the glass in summer, if rose plants, both young and carried-over stock, are properly attended to they make an astonishing growth. One great drawback in the south is getting soil with any fiber in it, but in those sections where Bermuda grass grows this difficulty is overcome by placing thick sods of Bermuda turf, grass side down, on the bottom of the beds. Here and there little pieces may crop to the surface during the summer, but as soon as cool weather begins there will be no further trouble.

I prefer solid beds in the south for roses, and there is no need to provide artificial drainage if the soil naturally drains well. The young plants require much water to balance evaporation; likewise spraying, five or six times per day, to maintain a moist, growing atmosphere. The danger period is always immediately after a thunder shower, when the sun comes out and seems to shine with redoubled energy. Then the ventilation must be quickly increased, and the plants and walks and walls sprayed and dampened down. If this is not attended to at once, you will find great quantities of nice young shoots shriveled up, because evaporation is taking place more quickly than the shoots can supply the moisture.

Things Not to Forget.

The plants should be tied up as soon as they have made a little growth, and they should be kept tied up from time to time. In tying up the plants do not try to see how many shoots you can tie with one string. Tie the leading shoots separately and just tack up the blind wood off the bed. Tie so that the air can circulate through the plant as well as around it. This thing of crowding the plants close up around a stake is sure to cause trouble during the shorter days of the fall, because the plants do not then dry off easily, and the first thing you know the whole house has a healthy crop of black spot. With ordinarily good houses and intelligent care and culture, black spot can easily be held at a distance in the south.

In syringing the plants pay particular attention to the ends of each bed. It is here that red spider generally gains its footing. See that your hose is long enough to reach around the ends. All weeds must be kept down and the surface of the beds regularly stirred. Later a mulch of any kind of old manure may be given. This will help to keep the beds cool, prevent evaporation and do away with much of the stirring of the surface soil. The top and side ventilators and doors should be kept open day and night, except, of course, during storms. L.

WHEN TO TAKE THE BUDS.

Kindly inform me when to take the buds on these varieties of chrysanthemums: Lady Carmichael, Duckham, Mrs. O. H. Kahn, Mrs. Wells, Beatrice May, Polypheme, Pres. Roosevelt, Amorita, Pacific Supreme, Wells' Late Pink and Harvard. Please state, also, the size, color, height of stem, etc. I never have grown any of these varieties and know nothing about them.

L. L. C.—Wash.

The colors of the varieties and their approximate heights are as follows:

Variety.	Color.	Height.
Lady Carmichael	White	3½ ft.
Duckham	Pink	3 ft.
Mrs. O. H. Kahn	Bronze	3 ft.
Mrs. Wells	Bronze	3 ft.
Beatrice May	White	2½ ft.
Polypheme	Yellow	4 ft.
Pres. Roosevelt	Pink	3 ft.
Amorita	Pink	3½ ft.
Pacific Supreme	Pink	3 ft.
Wells' Late Pink	Pink	3½ ft.
Harvard	Crimson	3½ ft.

Take the buds on all these varieties about August 20, with the exception of Wells' Late Pink. Take the bud on this about September 10 onward. None of these varieties presents any great problems as to culture, with the exception, perhaps, of Beatrice May, which is liable to become infected with leafspot and should be grown drier than the average chrysanthemum.

Chas. H. Totty.

TIME TO BENCH MUMS.

When do you consider the right time to bench mums? S. L. L.—Ia.

Get your mums into the benches as soon as possible. Benching may be successfully continued until August 1, but the late plantings will give blooms inferior to those taken from early planted stock. C. W.

MUM STOCK FROM FIELD.

I have been experimenting with field-grown chrysanthemum plants and have found the results so satisfactory that it has occurred to me other growers in favorable sections might be interested in the process. Situated in Mississippi, I transfer the cuttings from the sand to the field in March, April or May. As I am prepared to irrigate the plants, the young stock makes a strong, healthy growth, with an abundance of roots. When the houses are ready I lift the plants from the field and transfer them directly to the benches. I shade the houses a little and spray the plants four or five times for a few days. With proper care, all of the plants will take hold nicely. If it is not convenient to shade the house, I pot the plants in 3-inch pots and then shade them for a few days, giving them plenty of space so that the air can circulate freely. In two weeks' time the plants are ready to bench.

After the plants are established in the benches I top them, and they immediately start a new growth. If I desire two blooms I select the two strongest shoots; if three blooms, the three strongest shoots. Good field plants will produce three salable blooms. Of course, none of the three blooms is so large as a single bloom from a plant, but 500 plants will yield 1,500 blooms instead of 500, and the returns in dollars will be considerably more.

ALBANY, N. Y.

The Club Visits Slingerlands.

The anual visit of the Albany Florists' Club to the establishment of Fred Goldring, at Slingerlands, N. Y., was made by automobile July 5. There were a few absentees and, although present in spirit, they missed the bully time had by the large number of members who did go. F. A. Danker and H. G. Eyres furnished autos for their employees.

Arriving in the golden sunset, a tour first was made of the farm, which is everything the word implies. Then came a peep into the houses, ending at the potting shed, where the monthly business meeting was held. The trip was followed by a buffet lunch, to which the members did full justice.

Inspecting the Place.

In making the rounds our host dwelt on the necessity of specializing, mentioning that his establishment had become known as a headquarters for snapdragons and calendulas. Another item is the growing of 10,000 melon plants from seed sown two in a pot, the seed being furnished by a grower nearby, who supplies a few leading hotels in New York city. The figures given by Mr. Goldring made his visitors desire to be around when the melons were cut.

The melon crop is followed by Boston ferns in pots, which are taken from the bench, leaving the runners for the next crop. It also was noted that table ferns are transplanted into side benches from flats, grown through the summer and potted up for winter use. They do well when thus treated. In chrysanthemums, Oconto, Golden Glow, Bonnaffon and Hamburg Late White constitute the list.

Old Killarney still is a favorite rose, with Ophelia as a companion. It is being debated whether it will not be desirable to grow carnations instead of roses next winter. The probable lack of azaleas is being forestalled by growing such stock as Bougainvillea Sanderiana and the like.

In outdoor shrubs, the two most profitable for florists' use were given as Spiræa Thunbergii and Hydrangea arborescens. Many other items of interest there were, but the meeting prevented further notes.

The Meeting.

President John J. Haggerty and Secretary Robert Davidson were in charge of the meeting and did excellent work.

It was agreed to hold the annual clam bake at Henke's grove, as heretofore, on the same date as last year. The price was slightly advanced in sympathy with the general rise in the cost of food.

Joseph Traudt, of Canajoharie, N. Y., gave a hearty invitation to the club to hold its next meeting at his place. The invitation was gladly accepted, the more so when it was discovered that the date fell on Saturday, September 1, which is followed by Sunday and Labor day. But Mr. Traudt was game and said he would entertain during the three days, falling back, if necessary, upon the famous Beechnut establishment. He finished by handing the name of his neighbor, J. O. Graham, of Little Falls, as a new member and his assistant at the approaching important event. Fred A. Danker spoke for the September meeting and J. H. Snyder, of Rhinebeck, asked for the privilege of entertaining in October, when the violets will be worth seeing. He says the prospects are rosy.

The only special exhibits shown were some pineapples in pots, grown and fruited by Master Fred Goldring, a lad 10 years of age. He promises to rival his dad as a plantsman.

It developed, by the way, that the worthy secretary, Mr. Davidson, has held that office since the club was organized and it is on record that each time pay day comes around the members are obliged to insist upon his accepting the sum agreed upon as part remuneration for his services.

Proceeding homeward by the unequaled light of Luna, it was agreed that such visits compensate the florist, even though he has his cross to bear during these times when, to quote Fred Danker, "everything savors of self-denial in aid of the Red Cross," and, added Louis Schaefer, "we seedsmen suffer also, though it may look on the surface as if it were all one would wish." Elyria, O.—The L. C. Hecock Floral Co. is remodeling its store at 333 East Broad street. Several thousand dollars are being expended for this purpose.

Reading, Pa.—Harry C. Huesman has purchased the business of the H. J. Huesman estate at Schuylkill avenue and Greenwich street and will continue it under his name.

OBITUARY

Philippe de Vilmorin.

The H. Frank Darrow Co., New York, American agent for Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, has received by cable announcement of the death of the head of the firm, June 30, but no details are available.

The firm of Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co. is one of the oldest and largest in the seed trade in France, and of the highest standing. The business was started prior to 1745 and is known the world around. Philippe became the head of the firm at 30 years of age, on the death of his father, in 1899. He had visited most of the principal seed establishments in America in company with the firm's representative, who before the war made annual trips here. At the outbreak of the war he tendered his services to France and has since devoted practically his whole time to the affairs of various organizations and administrative commissions to which he was appointed and on which the talents that had enabled him to perfect perhaps the finest organization in the seed trade anywhere in the world made him an extremely efficient member.

George W. Hillman.

George Washington Hillman, secretary and cashier of the New York Cut Flower Co., New York city, for more than twenty years, died suddenly of heart disease July 6 at his home, 174 Franklin place, Flushing, L. I. During the day Mr. Hillman had been at his desk and appeared to be in good health. Mr. Hillman was 53 years old and leaves a widow, three sons and four daughters. He was a member of several fraternal societies. At one time Mr. Hillman was manager of the growing department of John Henderson & Co., of Flushing.

The funeral services were held at the home July 9 and were attended by a number of florists from New York city, who sent many beautiful floral pieces.

J. A. S.

William Webber.

William Webber, for the last twenty years gardener for the Central hospital of Indianapolis, Ind., died July 2, in his fifty-seventh year. The decedent at one time was associated with the Bertermann Bros. Co., of Indianapolis. His wife and son survive.

WESTERLY, R. I.

George A. Carmichael, of Carolina, has been drawn for grand jury duty in the Superior court of Washington county.

Peter S. Byrnes was chairman of the committee of arrangements at the town celebration at Wickford July 4.

Louis J. Reuter, of S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., was high man with a score of forty-five of a possible fifty at the trap shoot of the Narragansett Gun Club July 4. W. H. M.

DETROIT, MICH.

As the gods and bad luck will have it, the dull summer spell is ushered in precisely at the moment when there is more or less of a glut of carnations, irises, American Beauties and outdoor flowers. The sale of some of the roses, however, is fair, and orchids and valley of best quality are picked up by the retailers. Tiger and Easter lilies are piling in with a vengeance.

Frank Dulsky, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, has returned from a vacation amid the bright lights of New York.

Henry Foster, of the E. A. Fetters establishment, has gone vacationing on the St. Clair flats. H. T.

OMAHA, NEB.

The Omaha and Council Bluffs Florists' Club recently was reorganized and during the last three months has increased its membership from eleven to more than sixty. In June the club gave the most successful banquet in its history and recently a bowling tournament aroused the enthusiasm of the members. The club is planning to hold a picnic, the date and place of which have not yet been selected.

The annual bowling tournament was held at the Huntington alleys, Wednesday evening, June 27. The affair was in charge of a committee composed of Messrs. Larmon, Foster, Shafer and Hines, who did their work well, every detail being planned and carried out perfectly.

Six 5-men teams reported at the alleys. They were captained by Gardner, Shafer, Clark, Bath, Foster and Meyer. The competition was keen and intense rivalry existed between the teams as well as the individual players. The team composed of Foster, Larmon, Roger, Harding and Marz won first prize. John Bath's team was second and the Meyer team third. Individual prizes were won by Foster, Meyer, Bath, Hagardine and Harding.

The evening was so enjoyed by the bowlers that another tournament is planned for the early fall. L. L. L.

...NEWS NOTES...

Crown Point, Ind.—Alois Frey, who recently returned from a month's business trip to California, celebrated his forty-second birthday anniversary July 10.

Bloomington, Ill.—While supervising the unloading of coal July 3, Frank L. Washburn was thrown from the car by the brake. Mr. Washburn weighs about 230 pounds and the fall fractured his right ankle. He will be confined to his bed for at least six weeks.

Alpena, Mich.—Miss Agnes Daoust and Frank Hardesty, a florist, of Columbus, O., were married at St. Bernard's Catholic church June 26. The church was decorated with Annunciation lilies and the bride's home with the same blooms combined with Ophelia roses, all of which were grown by Mr. Hardesty at Columbus and shipped to Alpena for the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Hardesty left for a three weeks' honeymoon trip to Minnesota and Canadian points on the great lakes.

Oshkosh, Wis.—The business of the Miles Co., established many years ago by the late Isaac Miles, who came to Oshkosh from England in 1853, was transferred July 1 by the Misses Minnie, Sarah and Emma Miles to Robert E. Pamplin, James E. Taylor and William Buchholz, three of the company's employees, who will conduct the establishment under the old name. The sale includes the store, land and greenhouses. Mr. Pamplin has been with the company for thirteen years; Mr. Taylor has been manager of the store and Mr. Buchholz has had considerable growing experience. The Misses Miles have retired from the business.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"I anticipate the time when there will be a woman's auxiliary to the florists' clubs," observed Mrs. Hazeltine, of the Hazeltine Flower Shop, Albany, N. Y. "Now we have no voice, but as just compensation we receive much information on woman florists through the columns of The Review." The annual outing of the Albany Florists' Club was the cause for the above remark, made by one of the foremost and most esteemed woman florists in the capital city.

"A hard nut to crack is to know just what to grow during these unprecedented times," observed F. I. Drake, of Pittsfield, Mass. "For instance, we never had too many S. A. Nutt geraniums until this year, when Beaute Poitevine had the call. As we are not wizards, we have Nutt on hand, and we shall hold onto it. Yes, there are quacks in the trade, and it is up to us to make our business indispensable," concluded Mr. Drake.

Mark Aitken, of Springfield, Mass., was the first of his city to introduce the idea of early closing and is firmly convinced it is the best thing yet attempted. "We have marked well," observed Mr. Aitken, "practically every condition entering into our business. Regarded from both an economic and social standpoint, early closing is highly successful. The two features noted are the saving in light and the creation of a more cheerful atmosphere." A charming window decoration was noted—a large bunch of larkspurs in an amber bowl, which stood on a golden plush draping. Satisfactory business is reported.

The J. W. Adams Co., of Springfield, considers this season to be one of the best recorded in its long nursery experience. An exceptionally moist growing period favored every kind of tree or shrub. Two choice specials were noted, Daphne Mezereum, finely berried, and a white climbing rose named Silver Moon.

George Sambrook, of Sambrook Bros., Troy, N. Y., observed that present conditions are no joke, as his two boys had enlisted, and they were the bowers of the business. We must bear these sacrifices cheerfully, thankful that they are being imposed upon us gradually, fitting the back for the burden, as it were.

LATE as it is, bedding plants still are selling.

THE retailer with the original thought is always a lap ahead of the other fellow.

IT appears that Easter lilies planted now will be good property when they bloom.

WITH so much indoor stock in the cut flower markets at this date, it seems probable the supply will be on the short side at the time fall business usually opens.

THE man with a surplus of bedding plants probably can place them, a dozen here and a dozen there, by a canvass of his neighborhood. The trouble is, most of us wait for the public to come to us.

FRED W. ARNOLD, Cambridge, O., says: "The best sow bug trap I ever have found is a flock of Indian Runner ducks. They do not disturb the plants in the least and are death on all classes of vermin. This trap is not patented and is well worth trying."

CHRYSANTHEMUM plants have sold less rapidly than usual this season, no doubt due to growers having their benches full of bedding plants several weeks after they usually are available for mum planting. In some cases the benches are not yet vacant and interesting problems arise.

MANY large growers are using women for the lighter forms of greenhouse work and are well pleased with the results obtained. Properly instructed, women make good greenhouse assistants, and they probably will take most of the places to be made vacant by the draft. The trouble will come at planting time.

WONDERFUL CROPS.

The government crop report, covering the conditions of the principal crops as of July 1, 1917, is an inspiring document. It indicates that the harvests this year will be the most bountiful on record. Of all the crops reported on, only one indicates a yield in quantity less than the harvest of 1916, and the one crop which is deficient is hay, a commodity not nearly so vital as it was before gasoline assumed most of the burdens of the horse. Even wheat promises a yield many millions of bushels greater than in 1916. The totals, compared with the final production figures of last year, are as follows:

Crops.	July 1, 1917.	Final, 1916.
Corn, bushels	3,120,000,000	2,583,241,000
All wheat, bushels.	678,000,000	639,886,000
Oats, bushels	1,450,000,000	1,251,992,000
Barley, bushels....	214,000,000	180,927,000
Potatoes, bushels..	452,000,000	285,437,000
Sweet potatoes, bu.	82,200,000	70,955,000
All hay, tons.....	103,000,000	109,786,000
Apples, barrels....	66,800,000	67,415,000
Peaches, bushels...	43,500,000	36,939,000

The first price given below is the average July 1 this year, and the second July 1 last year: Wheat, 202.1 and 93.0 cents per bushel; corn, 164.6 and 75.4 cents; oats, 68.9 and 40.4 cents; potatoes, 247.9 and 102.3 cents; hay, $14.56 and $12.09 per ton; cotton, 24.7 and 12.5 cents per pound; eggs, 28.3 and 19.7 per dozen.

THE S. A. F. CONVENTION.

Webster, he who wrote the dictionary, says that a convention is a "body or assembly of persons met for some common purpose."

Webster's definition exactly describes the S. A. F. convention, which will be held in New York city August 21 to 24. It will be an assembly of persons met for a common purpose. That purpose will be an exchange of views and experiences by florists of the United States and Canada.

Without a doubt there is no business, or profession, or trade, whichever you may choose to term it, which has made and is making greater strides both in a material way and in the science of production than that of the florist. Each year is a year of progress and no one man in the trade can keep up with this progress unaided by his fellows in the same line of endeavor.

Therefore, what can be of more help to the florists of the country than to assemble for a common purpose—the purpose of learning first-hand of the developments in their business from the men who are making that development? Such a meeting is a magnet for ideas. It draws them through discussion from the men who are best fitted to give them. One learns from another and all profit thereby.

Reports from the correspondents of The Review already are telling of the plans made by members of the society to attend the convention in New York city. Men prominent in the trade, successful men, from so far off as the Pacific coast are going to make the long trip across the continent so that they may profit by the experiences of others and learn of that which is new and that which is profitable in their business.

The program for the convention has not yet been announced. But it is certain that those who are framing it will be sure to provide features that will make the journey worth the while of every florist who is able to be present. Besides, there will be the added satisfaction of being a member of a body of men who are met together for the common cause of helping Nature produce that which is beautiful and which adds to the joys and helps alleviate the sorrows of existence.

PLEASE NOTE.

Each week a number of letters containing advertising instructions reach The Review while the paper is on the press—just a few hours earlier and they would have had attention a week sooner than is possible.

It is the aim to give prompt service, but to secure it advertisers should note: "It is impossible to guarantee the insertion, discontinuance or alteration of any advertisement unless instructions are received by 4 p. m. Tuesday."

THEY HAVE THE PULL.

The pull of the trade journal advertisement varies exactly with the pull of the reading matter.

That's a nice, hard sentence to think over.

But just consider this: The paper bought for amusement is read for amusement; that bought for the free premium may or may not be read at all; but the paper bought because it contains articles that really aid the readers—The Review, for instance—gets pretty close to the heart of things. Real editorial worth is easily "sold," like this:

Please find enclosed check for $3 in payment of two years' subscription to The Review. Your paper is a necessity in the business.—Dwight Ludlow, Ludlow Greenhouses, Worthington, Minn, July 2, 1917.

And because the pull of the ad varies exactly with the pull of the editorial, it is natural that advertisers in The Review should report large returns, at little cost, like this:

Kindly discontinue my ad and send the bill. There is nothing like The Review for selling the goods. Let me congratulate you on your good service.—W. S. Kidd, Aliquippa, Pa., July 2, 1917.

My "want" ad for a foreman brought me in touch with fifteen applicants. The Review does the work.—A. P. Andrew, Miller's Greenhouses, Muncie, Ind., June 30, 1917.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Considering that we are in the second week of July, no one but Mr. Lugubrious Blue would call business otherwise than excellent. Those whose memories or records go back to other Julys do not expect that the business this month will be as large as the business of May and June, but if July finishes as it has begun it will go on record as the largest summer month this market ever has experienced. The demand is erratic, some days strong and other days weak, but averaging considerably better than in July of last year. City trade is especially uncertain, the out-of-town demand continuing fairly steady and heavier than usual at this date.

The market is abundantly supplied with flowers that are excellent for this time of year. The quantity of stock on the market is considerably heavier than it was at this time last year and the result is that improved demand has not served to increase the prices.

You Can Get Good BEAUTIES Here

DON'T get the idea, because a number of growers have discarded Beauties, that you will have any trouble getting good Beauties on this market—you won't, certainly not if you send your order to us. We have a large summer crop of splendid quality for the season.

American Beauty no longer deserves first consideration in the market report. Several of the largest growers have discarded this oldtime favorite, and find it necessary to buy from other wholesalers to fill their orders, while nearly everyone has reduced the space given to Beauty. There still are good Beauties, however, and they sell steadily, though not briskly. The rose in largest supply is Mrs. Russell. A considerable number of growers have mastered the difficulty of growing this variety successfully and there is much good stock on the market. The warmer, brighter weather has taken some of the color, but the flower, cut well developed as it is, makes an even better show than Beauty, being much larger than any other rose. Killarney, too, is disappearing. In its place many growers have planted Killarney Brilliant. Richmond is nearly out of the market, Milady being the red rose now seen in most wholesale stores. At the moment the demand for white is stronger than for any other color in roses, because funeral work constitutes a large part of the demand. At the same time white is scarcest, as in their replanting operations most of the growers have discarded a part of their White Killarney. Ophelia has been the gainer in most cases and this rose now is among the leaders, in quantity, quality and demand.

There are carnations that should be thrown out for replanting, but the average quality of the stock on the market is better than older florists recall ever seeing so late in July. Also, the supply is heavier than it ever has been at this date. There is a wide range in values. The stock of certain growers sells readily at $2 per hundred, while the surplus, composed of the pick from the plants that should be thrown out, is difficult to clean up even at the street salesman's favorite offer of 5 cents per bunch.

Sweet peas also are holding out well because of the cool weather. Some splendid stock is seen. There are increased supplies of cattleyas and neither these nor valley can be said to be scarce, although the sources of supply are few. Fresh cut peonies still are coming in and a few growers and wholesalers have stored considerable quantities, so that it is probable the peony season will last until the middle of August this year. Easter lilies now are in large supply. Candidum has come from the south and the crop in Michigan is nearly ready. A few rubrums are seen and auratum is due in a few days. Gladioli have not yet arrived from local growers and the southern crop has ceased to cut a figure. There are quantities of outdoor flowers, some of which sell well when offered in good condition, but most of them suffer seriously in the packing. Greens again are abundant.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Florists' Club, July 5, was not largely attended, but President Amling, Secretary Zech and all the other officers were present. On the proposition of holding a picnic this summer the club voted adversely. A letter from A. D. King, of Mattoon, Ill., whose place was destroyed in the recent cyclone, was read and Secretary Zech was instructed to send an appeal to each member of the club in Mr. King's behalf. The New York Central railroad was selected as the official route to the S. A. F. convention at New York, the train leaving at 11:45 p. m., August 19, being selected.

The club voted to omit August and September meetings.

Various Notes.

One of the interesting announcements of the week is that Anton Then has placed with Peter Reinberg the exclusive sale of field-grown plants of the former's new scarlet carnation, Thenanthos, rooted cuttings of which were sold for the first time last spring. It is explained that Mr. Then's stock of the variety was planted out on Mr. Reinberg's farm, from which grew the present arrangement. Mr. Reinberg has grown 500,000 carnation plants in the field this summer in addition to his own requirements.

W. J. Smyth and family are summering as usual at Lake Marie, Antioch, Ill. Mr. Smyth drives the Pierce-Arrow to the store once in a week or two to treat himself to the sight of all hands hustling on funeral work, which is reported as unusually heavy this month.

As indicating that it will be a long time before this market will be short of valley, even with no further imports of German pips, P. C. Schupp states that the excellent valley now coming from the J. A. Budlong establishment is of pips of the 1915 importation, the 1916 stock still lying untouched in cold storage.

A. Miller, president of the American Bulb Co., returned July 8 from his honeymoon trip to Yellowstone park. At the same time came a large shipment of freesia bulbs from the company's representative now on the Pacific coast, the first freesias seen on the market this season.

N. J. Wietor states that it was the difficulty in securing day laborers which caused his firm to undertake replanting earlier this season than usual, everything now being set for 1917-18 except a few mums and part of the carnations. The first roses planted already are giving a cut. The space given to Beauties has been reduced one-half again this year, the plants of it on the benches now not exceeding 20,000. The space taken from Beauty has been given to Russell and Ophelia.

C. L. Washburn, who is visiting the Bassett & Washburn branch in California, writes that he found the three generations of the Bassett family resident there enjoying excellent health. O. P. Bassett was 82 years of age March 31. His grandson, E. B. Washburn, now has three bouncing boys. Mr. Washburn plans to start for home July 15.

charge. A. T. Pyfer returned July 10 from a vacation at the old home near Polo, Ill.

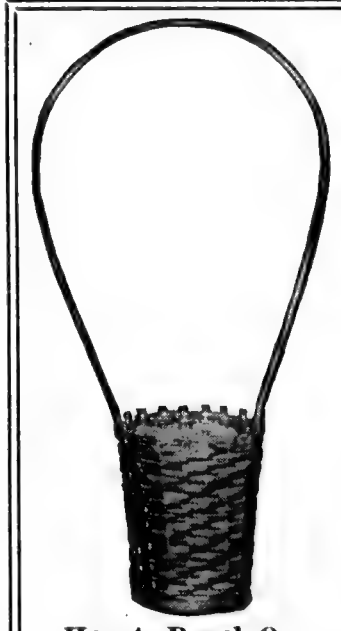
At Wellworth Farm, Downers Grove, Ill., the list of roses grown has been narrowed practically to two, Milady and Killarney Brilliant, both of which seem particularly at home there. There still are a couple of benches of White Killarney and Ward.

F. M. Johnson and A. M. Anderson, of the A. L. Randall Co., are on an eastern business trip.

Alois Frey has returned to Crown Point from a month's business trip to Los Angeles.

O. A. Tonner says that the business thus far in July would have been a credit to any other June in her business experience.

M. C. Gunterberg was called to Minnesota July 6 by the serious illness of a sister. John Sinner, who since March has been working at the greenhouses of Sinner Bros., came in to take charge of the store during Miss Gunterberg's absence.



Edward Galavan, of the A. L. Randall Co., made a flying trip to Nashville and Chattanooga during the first part of this week.

Charles Erne, who classes among the veterans in the market, says he considers the spring business to have been the best Chicago ever has known and that July and the balance of the summer look good to him.

The E. C. Amling Co. reports the opening of the aster season this week.

A. L. Vaughan and family plan to get away this week for a fortnight's trip in the Moline-Knight.

Paul Klingsporn, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, will join the procession of florists driving Moline-Knights, but will not get his car until sometime next week. The association's annual meeting of stockholders is to be held July 16, at 3 p. m., always an interesting event.

The Climax Line is a Good Line to Tie To

THE FACT that we have in the past seven years built up the largest Cut Flower Box business in the Country is our best advertisement. We strive to please and the results speak for themselves.

"WHEN BETTER BOXES ARE MADE WE WILL MAKE THEM" is still our slogan.

We manufacture and carry in stock for prompt shipment: Oxford Gray, Mist Green, Mist Tan, White Carnation and our popular Favorite grade—the latter a most satisfactory telescope shipping box. Holiday boxes in season. We make special sizes promptly and at reasonable charge, and specialize in attractive and up-to-date printing and embossing.

With our increased facilities we aim to make our service the best in our line, and if you are in the market it will pay you to wait for the "Climax" Salesman, or send for late price list and samples to nearest office: 141 Milk St., Boston; 2914 11th St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

Business has been spasmodic—a tussle between the quieting influence of summer days and the bolstering effect of large funerals.

The quality of roses has taken a toboggan all along the line, though perhaps an exception should be made of Russell and Francis Scott Key. Carnations are more than plentiful, but the warm weather has made for a reduction in the size of the blooms. Irises, both yellow and lavender, are at the height of their popularity. Sweet peas are short and small; only occasionally do first-grade blooms arrive. Delphiniums and cornflowers meet with a good sale.

Various Notes.

The Buffalo Florists' Club held its monthly meeting in the Electric building July 2, principally for the purpose of deciding on the annual outing. The entertainment committee appointed shortly will issue notices giving the date and place of the picnic. Twelve new members were added to the roll, credit for this healthy growth of the membership going to the president and those of the members who have been out recruiting.

Paul Van Lindley, of the Van Lindley Nursery Co., Pomona, N. C., was a visitor last week, as well as J. Roach, the Pittsburgher.

S. A. Anderson entertained pedestrians last week with a patriotic window, of which the feature was a "huge battleship" ingeniously done in pink and white carnations. A. E.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The scarcity of really good flowers is as marked as the scarcity of orders. There is a certain amount of business, quite as much as usual in the middle of July, and there is a little good material and more that is fair to middling. Easter lilies are in strong supply. There are lots of good lilies, enough to meet all demands and to spare. Other fine flowers are not so well off. Whenever the big buyers have something on, which happens every now and then, they have to be on the alert to secure the stock. Roses are next to lilies in strength of supply. Eastern Beauties, Russell, Prima Donna, Kaiserin and Maryland are the best. Then come gladioli, mostly outdoor grown, in all the well-known varieties. Orchids and valley are both in light supply. There are a few fine carnations besides Mrs. C. W. Ward and Matchless. Some White Enchantress and White Perfection are offered that are worth while. Early asters are not yet coming into town in any numbers. There are some fine delphiniums, lavender and white candytuft, and pyrethrums are overabundant. There are not many sweet peas and they are not of much use now.

At the Spring.

There is a really beautiful woodland scene in the handsome show window of J. J. Habermehl's Sons at the Bellevue-Stratford. The center of the window is filled by a small cascade of water flowing over rocks into a pool. The pool is filled with goldfish that feed contentedly in the foreground right in the thoroughfare, separated from it only by the plate glass of the window. Nearby are rocks and fungus-covered logs and ferns, with water hyacinths growing in the pond just as though they had come there naturally and expected to make their home right there always. Boston ferns and davallias are brightened by a few choice crotons. The window is the work of Walter Van den Hengle, the artist who arranged the famous rose garden at the National Rose Festival.

Coal.

A representative of one of our largest florists visited the coal regions of central Pennsylvania last week to see what prospects there were for a supply of fuel. He went carefully over the ground, talked with the operators and miners and used his eyes intelligently. He came to the conclusion that the prospects of getting anthracite coal are much better than the prospects of getting bituminous coal. He also believes that to get anthracite coal this season it will be necessary to pay a price. The buyer who is willing to pay, he thinks, will have no trouble in getting coal now; later it may or may not be more difficult.

They Didn't Stay Sold.

A good story is told of one especially dull summer morning, when a crowd of hot salesmen gathered for a moment at William J. Baker's. Things were bad. The usually successful salesmen, who make out big slips recording their flower sales, each admitted one after the other that he had not made a single sale so far that morning. Mr. Baker was the last to speak. He said, modestly, that he had sold five bunches of asparagus that morning. Everyone was pleased. Just at that moment a young man came in with five bunches of asparagus and a polite message that the customer's order had been canceled and he could not use the asparagus.

The Varieties at the Florex.

Eugene Bernheimer went out to North Wales this week to look over the Florex Gardens. Young plants and the carried over rose stock both look well. The rose varieties now under cultivation are September Morn, Prima Donna, Ophelia, Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Killarney, White Killarney, Mavourneen, My Maryland, Mrs. Herriot (Daily Mail), Sweetheart, George Elger and one or two more. There are 15,000 carnations, Enchantress, White Enchantress, Beacon, Ruth and another. Snapdragon, Asparagus Sprengeri and Asparagus plumosus are largely grown.

Miss Marion Faust, daughter of Henry I. Faust, of Merion, is closely following the improved early blooming Spencer sweet peas at Fordhook.

Charles A. Brookley, for many years with Frank R. Hastings, died recently after a long illness at his home in Germantown.

Robert Craig suffered a loss in the death of his son-in-law, which occurred last week.

Fred W. Cowperthwaite, Pennsylvania state vice-president of the S. A. F., has issued a strong appeal to all florists to join the national society to secure much needed action for the general welfare at this critical time. Mr. Cowperthwaite urges the importance of attending the New York meeting August 21 to 24.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There was plenty of stock last week to meet the demand, which was light. Quality was far from good and the prices were low. Roses, with few exceptions, were small and weak-stemmed. These sold as low as $2.50 per thousand. The bulk of the arrivals sold from this low figure to $1 per hundred. The few first-class arrivals sold at the usual figures.

American Beauties showed improvement in quality. Quantities of outdoor roses are arriving, mostly Crimson Ramblers and Dorothy Perkins. Jacqueminots are done. One firm handled more than 60,000 of them in one day. The average price was 50 cents per hundred. Large shipments of carnations still are arriving. The bulk sold at 25 cents per hundred July 7. The best carnations last week did not realize more than $1.50 per hundred.

Good gigas were scarce and were selling at from 50 cents to 60 cents each July 7. Other orchids were abundant and sold at low prices. Valley continues scarce and the selected brings from $5 to $6 per hundred. The end of last week found lilies scarce and good stock sold at $4 per hundred. Some shipments of fine peonies were received last week. Those in cold storage are about gone and peonies soon will be out of the market.

Loads of feverfew and sweet williams were carted to the river, there being no demand for them. Outdoor sweet peas flooded the market and the wholesale houses were crowded with daisies, coreopsis, calendulas, gypsophilas, irises and delphiniums. Retail stores are doing little business.

Club Meeting.

The special meeting of the Florists' Club, held July 9, drew an attendance of nearly 100. President Stumpp was in the chair.

Considerable discussion followed the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, participated in by F. R. Pierson, W. A. Manda, Arthur Herrington, Henry Weston and others. A motion to reconsider the action with regard to convention entertainment, proposed by W. A. Manda, was defeated. A good deal of independent entertainment apparently is planned. Reports indicate a large attendance at the convention.

A. L. Miller announced considerable space in the Grand Central Palace still available for trade exhibits and Secretary Young reported 10,000 square feet sold in the Convention Garden and 40,000 square feet remaining. He suggested an excellent opportunity for the retail florists to make artistic plantings. W. A. Manda referred to his interview with Dr. Britton, who expressed disappointment at the small space allotted by the committee and gave a promise of yearly opportunity for exhibitors desiring space in Bronx park for individual planting.

W. M. Hunt and Harry Goldberg were proposed for membership.

Letters were read from J. F. Ammann, Mrs. Maynard, secretary of the Ladies' Auxiliary, and Seward Prosper, of the Red Cross Society, the latter thanking the club for its gift of $1,000. A letter was read from F. R. Newbold, with reference to the devastation in France, suggesting America's help in restoration. Max Schling suggested that as soon as the opportunity comes the response will be wide and generous.

Secretary Young reported that resolutions of sympathy had been sent W. H. Maynard and family, in the loss of his daughter, and resolutions were ordered for G. W. Hillman.

Letters of resignation were read from F. A. Bolles and Ed. A. Manda.

It was ordered that membership without dues be continued until the close of the war for any of the club's members who were in the federal service.

Professor Hottes, of Columbus, was present and gave an interesting address.

P. W. Popp showed a vase of delphinium hybrids, which were highly commended. The exhibits of John Scheepers & Co. were given the thanks of the club and also were highly commended. These include Eremurus himalaicus and several liliums.

THE original Album of Designs was published in response to many requests from florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book that could be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it was not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it would be when ready for use. With the publication of this album it became possible to show the finished work in beautifully printed pictures. The first edition sold like hot cakes, a second and third edition went quickly. Now a fourth edition is off the press. Everything is in it—all the standard designs and many new pieces.

The Convention Garden promises to be one of the interesting features of the S. A. F. convention in August. Those who have space there are A. N. Pierson, Inc., Bobbink & Atkins, H. A. Dreer, Inc., John Lewis Childs, Arthur Cowee and B. Hammond Tracy.

The seed season is ended and many of the seedsmen and their employees are away on their vacations.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co. is making a number of improvements to its store this summer. Mr. MacNiff and family are at the seashore.

The committees in charge of the arrangements for the S. A. F. convention are meeting weekly and Secretary John Young says that they are making rapid progress. Mrs. Maynard, secretary of the Ladies' S. A. F., also is busy preparing for that society's meetings.

The Horticultural Society of New York will hold an exhibition in the Museum building at the New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park, July 14 and 15. Four of the ten classes for flowers are open to commercial growers, who also will be allowed to compete in the two classes for vegetables. The classes open to commercial growers are: Collection of outside roses; twelve vases of Japanese irises, twelve varieties; collection of flowers of herbaceous plants and collection of flowers of shrubs and trees. The exhibition is in charge of William Becker. The cash prizes are offered by the New York Botanical Garden from the income of the William R. Sands fund.

The Market.

Trade in general, and especially from the wholesaler's point of view, has been unsatisfactory. The month of June was a busy one for weddings, with a higher average than that of any previous June; but at present there is an excessive supply of stock of all kinds and the demand, while it is fair, is far from heavy enough to absorb the receipts. Large quantities of outdoor flowers arrive daily. The rainy season was most beneficial, as the stock is larger and better than usual. Long spikes of larkspur are seen in both light and dark blue. They clear well, at low prices. Gaillardias, coreopsis, sweet williams, Shasta daisies and syringas are more than plentiful and are used extensively in window displays. Quantities of America gladioli arrive daily and clear nicely. Bachelor's buttons are in fair demand, but most of the stores are glutted with outdoor roses.

The daily shipments of roses arrive in fine condition. Ophelia, Hoosier, Beauty and Sunburst apparently are the best sellers, with American Beauties moving slowly, at low figures. The supply of carnations continues to be large and there are many inferior blooms. Good stock brings $2 per hundred. There still is an oversupply of Easter lilies, the demand being weak. Snapdragons and gypsophilas are used largely in basket and vase work. Good Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are in lively demand, and the market is well taken care of. New fancy and dagger ferns sell well.

F. Bannister, of Bannister Bros., of Syracuse, and George McCallum, of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, called on the trade this week. They report good business.

P. Rylott, of Thurston road, who a short time ago purchased the Campbell Greenhouses, says that business is satisfactory. He has sent in exceptionally fine bedding stock.

Charles H. Vick and George Cramer went on a fishing trip to Conesus, N. Y., for the week end.

George Case, with James Vick's Sons, visited Detroit, Mich., July 4 and 5. He left by boat from Buffalo.

Charles Sharpe, of the Rochester Floral Co., is on his vacation. He is assisting in the erection of a large amphitheater at his home in Seabreeze, N. Y.

tions are favorable they expect to plant fifty acres more. The hardy stock is doing specially well. Cosmos, calendulas, phloxes, etc., are coming along finely. Their tractors are working both day and night. The vegetable crop looks promising, including acres of carrots, beans, potatoes and spinach.

White Bros., of Medina, are shipping good Harrisii lilies to the city market.

Miss Tessie Whitman, of Wilson's, is spending a three weeks' vacation at the summer cottage at Sodus, N. Y.

H. J. H.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business is fair for this period of the summer, but stock is so abundant that prices have reached a low level, and few high-grade blooms are available. Roses are too plentiful and the majority are short-stemmed. Carnations are at the end of their season, the few good ones obtainable being rather small. There are many Easter lilies and the receipts of outdoor stock include excellent sweet peas. Gladioli experience a good sale, despite the liberal supplies of snapdragons, rubrum lilies, gaillardias and heliopsis.

New ferns and leucothoe have a heavy call and the shipping business in greens is excellent.

Various Notes.

C. E. Ruch, of Richmond, Ind., and Charles A. Bower, of Dayton, O., each motored to this city last week.

C. E. Critchell has been having a large sale of his new leucothoe.

The William Murphy Co. had a large run on its home-grown gladioli last week.

William Mayhall has returned from St. Louis. He says the party had a pleasant trip.

Among other visitors were J. Inge, of the Charleston Cut Flower & Plant Co., Charleston, W. Va., and Joseph Marks, representing A. Henderson & Co., Chicago.

C. H. H.

Punxsutawney, Pa.—V. E. Carr, proprietor of the East End Greenhouse, says that his trade has grown so that he will double the capacity of his establishment in preparation for next season's business. Sales of Memorial day stock and bedding and vegetable plants were double those of last year. Mr. Carr says he turned down enough business to build a 50-foot addition and a 150-foot house, so he is going to increase his range just that much.

The Market.

There is little of an encouraging nature to say about the cut flower business at present. The bottom appears to have completely dropped out of business, and the wholesale markets and the stores are dull. Supplies are steadily declining, but far too many flowers are arriving for the limited demand. Outside of funeral work there is little or no demand for flowers, and these conditions may continue during the heated period. Roses continue abundant. Many are sold as low as $2.50 per thousand. Carnations continue of good quality, Matchless being specially fine, also Alice, Benora and Albert Roper. Prices rule low. Sweet peas are now all from outdoors; the good flowers sell quite well. Cattleyas are somewhat scarce, but the demand is feeble. Gladioli are abundant, but the sales are slow. Lilies are hard to move. A few asters have appeared, but they will not sell so early in the season. Peonies are of the past; it has been a short and unsatisfactory season for them. Delphiniums now are in their glory. They are unquestionably the most beautiful of our hardy perennials, all colors being exquisite, and they are fine at this season for window decorations. The bedding plant trade now is practically over for the season.

Various Notes.

William Sim, of Cliftondale, has several fine houses of Comet tomatoes from which he has just started to pick. The sweet peas have been pulled out and their place occupied by asters. Sweet Corn Early Cory occupies one field and is always a profitable crop. Seeds are started under glass.

Mrs. E. K. Farr, of Stoneham, had a successful season with sweet peas under glass, having them in flower from October until July. She still cuts fine Matchless carnations and has 30,000 plants in the field that look well. A batch of 2,500 early tomato plants tied to stakes are starting to ripen and appear promising.

James Wheeler started to plant one of his houses to yellow marguerites this week. He has had a successful season with this popular flower. The carnations are being pulled up and benches emptied and refilled this week. The plants in the field are in splendid condition.

George F. Stewart, head gardener of the Lawrence estate, at Medford, for twenty years, and a noted grower of dipladenias, cattleyas, fuchsias and many other plants, left there July 9 to take charge of the Arthur T. Lyman estate, at Waltham, Mass.

A prize exhibition of fruits will be held at Horticultural hall July 21. This was the one postponed from July 7. There will also be seasonable displays of plants and cut flowers.

Patrick Welch and family and Edward Welch and family are enjoying vacations at Old Orchard, Me.

At the Welch Bros. Co. wholesale store June business held up remarkably well, but July trade so far has been below the average. The usual shipping orders to holiday resorts are not so good this year.

The Market.

The weather generally remains cool, although there were a few warm days during the week. This condition keeps stock in fair shape and business as a whole is holding up exceptionally well. July 4 was an especially good day; the sales were much larger than heretofore. This and the quantity of funeral work that came in throughout the week helped tremendously to make the week compare favorably with the same week of any previous year.

The supply of carnations is not so large as it has been, as the growers are throwing out the stock. What stock of this nature there is, is only in fair shape, as the lateness of the season is manifest in the poorer quality of the cut. Sweet peas are on the last lap and are not moving well. The quality is poor and the prices realized are low.

PARKER'S FLOWER STORE

it is only a question of a few warm days when this stock will be of the past. The crop this season was not satisfactory, principally because the blooms were exceptionally late in arriving and then they all came at once. Lilies are still plentiful and the cut is not being handled with any degree of satisfaction. Valley was scarce again last week and, even with the light demand, there were some orders that were not taken care of.

Roses are in fine condition, although the cut is becoming smaller every day. The demand, especially for the shorter stock, has been good, and while the supply has been equal to the demand there has been little or no surplus. Orchids are moving nicely; they are of good quality. Spring stock is just about out of the market; what there is is not worth much.

A few warm days are expected to put a quietus on business in general and make vacation days more popular, although there is hardly an establishment in town which has not a part of its force on the absent list.

Various Notes.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. will hold its annual picnic at Ehler's grove, Brown Deer, Wis., July 15. Everybody had a big time last year and many preparations are being made for another blow-out. H. J. S.

A Summer Window Display.

We are now in the midst of the summer season, when the store business is dull, and in many cases, no doubt, it would be a saving to close for, say, three months; but there must be someone always on the job, as orders will be coming in for funeral work, either at home, or by mail, or telegraph.

The writer has been through many a summer season that has tried the patience almost to the breaking point. One of the things that I found hardest to do at such times was to keep out of a rut and from just letting well enough alone. Indeed, I have seen a store window fixed up and left till the spiders wove their webs on the plants. The florist who has not plenty of outdoor stock is often at his wit's end to keep the store fresh and attractive without spending too much money, and to give it the appearance that one is doing business, even if most of the patrons are out of town.

This was recalled to my mind vividly a short time ago by a church Children's day decoration. Like most churches, this one did not have much money to spend for flowers, but it did have a flower committee that was ready to go ahead and make the little the committee members had go as far as possible. The writer, as he looked upon the finished decoration Sunday morning, realized that there was a job of decorating that had cost $5 and that $40 or $50 might have been paid for one not so attractive as this.

A Tip from a Church.

Now, this column is to help those in the trade. The writer remembers many makeshifts just like this Children's day decoration that have made a hit with the people who know real floral decorating. I am going to describe this decoration, as it may be a hint that will help some fellow who is at his wit's end this summer and is disgusted with the store; is doing no business; is grouchy and does not know what is wrong with him. It is then that the work, for that is all it will take, will do him good. Every store must have a little stock each day and the thing is to have that little arranged to the best advantage. Here is where that church decoration comes in.

The basis of the whole thing came from the woods. In these days of automobiles, anyone can run out into the country and cut a good armful of scrub oak foliage. Take your time and pick out good, full branches, and be sure to get plenty of the pin variety. You will

Or, here is another idea. There will be Easter lilies coming in cheap. Who has not seen a bunch of these put together in a vase without green of any kind? The writer saw one the other morning in a window and it certainly looked ghastly. Take, for instance, this same bunch of lilies arranged in a pretty basket, or in a large vase of pin oak foliage, and you have a thing of beauty. Anything with fairly long stems can be used. Just try it for a week, for your foliage will last that long, and see how interested you will become in your work. See if keeping the store looking spick-and-span does not become a pleasure, instead of a labor.

Various Notes.

September. During their absence the business of Mary Johnston will be in charge of Miss Glenn.

July 4, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Graham gave a patriotic family dinner. The centerpiece was made of White Enchantress, Beacon carnations and larkspur, making the national colors. I asked Miss Margaret, who arranged the flowers, why she did not use cornflower for blue. Her reply was: "This is a patriotic dinner. How could we use Kaiser bloom in the decorations?" Before the party were seated, the company stood and sang the Star-Spangled Banner. Besides the immediate family there were present Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Plumer, Miss Virginia Marklay, Edw. Graham and Robert T. Paterson. The entertainment was unique and was thoroughly enjoyed. Tate.

Stock moved slowly, as nearly all the business done by retailers was in funeral work, which has been plentiful.

The extremely hot weather recently has lowered the supply of stock at the wholesale houses. However, there is some good stock coming despite the lack of rain. Carnations are soft and small and the price is low. The few fancy grades clean up daily at fair prices. Good roses, too, are scarce, although some excellent Russell, Ophelia and Hadley roses from outside shippers were seen last week.

Gladioli are selling well and good consignments are received from local growers. Sweet peas are inferior and have short stems. Easter lilies are coming in good quality and sell well. Valley is scarce. The above, with considerable outdoor stock, make up the daily supply. Good greens sell well.

Various Notes.

Edward Kalisch, manager of the retail store of the Kalisch Bros. Floral Co., says the company's farm in St. Louis county is producing quantities of outdoor stock such as sweet peas, gladioli, gypsophilas, cornflowers and gaillardias. A fine crop of asters is coming on. John Kalisch is in charge of the establishment.

The employees of Henry G. Berning are taking their vacations one at a time. They will all be back in time to let Mr. Berning make the trip to New York city to attend the S. A. F. convention in August.

Marion Uhlschmidt, manager of the Grimm & Gorly store in East St. Louis, says the rioting there did not in the least affect the store's business. The season was exceptionally good and business this summer has been up to expectations.

Jules Bourdet, state vice-president of the S. A. F., continues to work among the local florists interesting them in the S. A. F. convention in New York city next month. He says the representation from St. Louis will be large.

Henry Duringberg, head designer for Grimm & Gorly, is away on a two weeks' vacation. He would not tell where he was going and members of the firm assert that as Dan Cupid has been on his trail, there is likely to be an interesting announcement when he returns.

President Bourdet, of the St. Louis Florists' Club, has named the following as members of the new publicity committee: William C. Smith, chairman; F. C. Weber, Jr., W. J. Pilcher, Paul Reden and George B. Windler.

The Diemer Floral Co. plans several improvements to its store on Broadway this summer. Mr. Diemer says business was excellent last season.

A. J. Ellison, who has charge of William C. Smith's greenhouse establishment in Kirkwood, has everything there in splendid shape. One house has been planted to smilax and another to Boston ferns. The other houses have been prepared for carnations.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its July meeting this week, on the grounds of the Bourdet Floral Co. The nominations of officers will be made at this meeting.

with the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co. His plans for next season have not yet been made.

L. P. Jensen, E. Strehle and L. Baumann have been appointed members of a committee which will make ready the lot on Lindell avenue where will be erected the building to house the National Flower Show next April. The appointments were made by Jules Bourdet, state vice-president of the S. A. F., and were approved by Chairman Asmus of the National Flower Show committee.

St. Louis county growers are busy getting ready for next season. Most of the growers have their chrysanthemums planted and carnations will come next.

George H. Angermueller's force has been busy with shipping orders of late. Mr. Angermueller has been serving as a juror in the local courts.

Fred H. Weber spent several days last week with his family, who are staying during the summer months with Mrs. Weber's parents, in southern Illinois.

The following suburban florists visited the wholesale district last week: J. F. Ammann, Edward Denker, E. W. Guy, W. J. Pilcher, S. E. Cerny, W. J. Edwards, Thomas Kirkwood, H. W. Ude, Jr., Charles Henry, William Meier, Joseph Hauser, W. A. Rowe, Phil Goebel, Jr., and William Winter.

Fred C. Weber, Jr., has received word that his parents are enjoying the cool breezes in Wisconsin, where they are spending the summer. They will return September 1. J. J. B.

Bensenville, Ill.—The sympathy of the trade is being extended to W. F. Duntemann, whose mother died last week.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

WHAT chance will there be to get valley pips across the seas this autumn?

AUGUSTUS H. GOODWIN, of the W. W. Barnard Co., will be 74 years of age July 16. He is at his office every day.

THE seed trade will learn with regret of the death of Philippe de Vilmorin, head of the widely known house of Vilmorin, Andrieux et Cie, Paris, which occurred June 30.

The Everette R. Peacock Co., Chicago onion set dealer, has been incorporated with $100,000 authorized capital stock, the objects being to grow and deal in bulbs, plants and seeds.

THE final meeting of the creditors of the Griswold Seed Co., which has been adjudged bankrupt, will be held July 18 at the office of Daniel H. McClenahan, referee in bankruptcy, Lincoln, Neb. The meeting is called to pass on the report of the trustee, hear and allow claims not heretofore allowed, allow compensation to the attorney for the bankrupt company and to the trustee, and to declare and pay a final dividend.

WISCONSIN PEAS POOR.

"We have just spent four days in making a thorough canvass of practically the entire situation in Wisconsin," says D. D. Rowlands, president of the John H. Allan Seed Co., Sheboygan. "We have five different growing sections scattered throughout the state and on our trip we talked with at least a dozen or more of the leading canners of the state. Not one of these gentlemen expects more than sixty-six and two-thirds per cent of a crop and the majority of them expect between forty and fifty per cent of a crop. We, ourselves, will do well if we pull out with a fifty to sixty per cent of a normal crop.

"The southern part of the state has been drenched with water, thousands of acres now being under water. One canner told us part of his buildings were washed away, part of his machinery destroyed and his entire coal supply washed to points down stream. There has been no growing weather to speak of up to the present date (July 6). Occasionally one finds fields that have a good appearance from the road, the vines of good color, but closer inspection shows that these vines are fine and spindly and are not carrying their quota of pods, and the pods that are there are short and contain only two or three peas.

"We believe in the interests of correct information it would be well to state that the situation is quite discouraging today, instead of being excellent, as has been reported, and it will take exceptionally favorable weather from now straight through July and half of August to bring the pea crop of Wisconsin through with even its present reduced expectations. The season is late. In our own case, field work that usually commences between June 20 and 25 has not yet commenced, and except for one locality cannot commence for another ten days."

THE BURPEE ORGANIZATION.

The trade has known for some time that changes were being made in the Burpee organization, following the death of the founder, and inquiry brought the information that David Burpee, now active executor and general manager, would shortly issue a statement in the matter. This statement now is available and is as follows:

"Some of our friends are interested to know what changes we are making in the organization of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., so I am glad to give you a brief outline of just what we are doing.

"Everybody knows of the great difficulties the seed trade has been under for the past year or two. First, it has been next to impossible to get many seeds in from Europe, and then the demand for seeds has increased in many cases more than 100 per cent.

"For nearly three months last winter we worked day and night, but even with this twenty-four hours a day service we were unable to get orders out with our usual record of promptness.

"In regard to the shortage in seeds, of course we are doing all we can to grow more in this country. But in many cases the seeds that formerly were imported from Europe were those of root crops and other biennials of which, of course, it takes two years to produce the seed.

"It is unnecessary for me to tell you how difficult the labor situation has been. Because of the great number of munitions factories in this section, I believe man power is more scarce in Philadelphia than in almost any other well settled section of the country.

"These changed conditions having come after my father's death made it necessary for us to almost completely reorganize. Especially was this so as our cashier, A. Eldridge Brown, died only a few months after my father. When we lost Mr. Brown my brother stepped in and took full charge of the cashier's department. He has continued in that position and now is acting treasurer.

"Our Mr. Bougy, of course, has continued in charge of the bookkeeping department and W. F. Therkildson as advertising manager.

"Howard M. Earl is well known in the seed trade because of his activity with us for nearly thirty years. For a number of years he has been in close touch with the producing end of our business and has been also acting as superintendent of our buildings and warehouses. Because of the increased volume of business and the more difficult conditions under which we now operate, we have thought best to divide these responsibilities. Mr. Earl, because of his long years of experience, has been made production manager and is now directly responsible for the economic management of all our farms, the placing of contracts, the purchase of stock from reliable sources, the inspection of crops and the conduct of trials both to prove the viability and pureness to type of everything sold by W. Atlee Burpee & Co. In this connection George W. Kerr coöperates as superintendent of the trial grounds and as sweet pea expert.

"W. Scott Carroll is now superintendent and has charge of all our operating departments, including the storage and handling of all seed after it reaches the Philadelphia warehouses.

"So our organization stands today, with myself as active executor and general manager; W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., acting treasurer; Howard M. Earl, production manager; W. F. Therkildson, advertising manager; W. Scott Carroll, superintendent."

M. Therkildson states that for the first time in the history of the House of Burpee they have issued a midsummer catalogue. He states that "with the increased planting of sweet peas in the fall, and also to advise our many customers as to succession planting, and the things that may be planted after the first part of July, we are sending out

WHY THIS UNUSUAL ACTION IS TAKEN AT THIS TIME

Randall Japanese Lily Bulbs are superior and positively will produce. They are the select product of Japanese bulb-growing industry, and are sold through a reputation of quality. We are not only willing to back up this assertion, but we are going to do so right here and now.

Practically every dealer who has bulbs to sell has told you they are the best. Sold only on quality, not price. They know you realize that an inferior bulb is a poor investment at any price. But you cannot know what the bulbs are until you have bought them.

Therefore we are going to give you the opportunity of knowing exactly what our bulbs are like, and prove to you before you place your fall order that our claim of quality is justified.

THE OFFER

FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

We have only 200 cases of cold storage Lily Bulbs on hand and are, therefore, obliged to limit our offer to any one grower to not more than 5 cases, so that a larger number may take advantage of the offer.

These bulbs are 7/9 Giganteum. Packed 300 to the case, and ready for immediate delivery.

Only 1 to 5 cases to the customer and orders taken subject to stock unsold.

this book to a select list of slightly more than 200,000. We have added a few varieties of perennials, and such American grown bulbs that we are sure of delivery. Particular attention has been directed to the growing of root crops for winter use. Twenty pages are devoted to sweet peas, together with some general instructions as to how to sow in the fall, and the advantage of fall sowing."

THE HARRISII CROP.

Under date of June 20, Consul Carl Loop, of Hamilton, Bermuda, wrote as follows of the Harrisii bulb crop now about to move:

"According to a special report furnished by the Director of Agriculture of Bermuda, the acreage under lily bulb cultivation is probably a little larger this year than last. It appears that on account of the dullness of the market last season a number of the growers were not able to dispose of all their bulbs, which have been used for replanting this year. The fields of careful growers appear to be in good condition, and if there is sufficient rainfall between now and the time of gathering the bulbs, the crop should be above the average of recent years, and equal, perhaps, to the good crop of last year."

of carrot seed and a normal crop of all varieties of lettuce seed. Onion seed is in fine condition, not showing any damage from the hot weather so far. The crop of beet seed does not promise so well. Many of the plants did not make seed and the stalks are being plowed up. Sweet peas in bloom have been so badly damaged by the heat and aphis that no seed at all will be harvested in some places.

Carl Hoag, with the Hallawell Seed Co., San Francisco, is spending his vacation in the Santa Clara valley.

W. F. Pitts, of the W. F. Pitts Seed & Nursery Co., anticipates a big fall planting and is making preparations accordingly. He plans to devote more and more attention to export business, as his efforts in this direction have met with good success.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Ant. C. Zvolanek, Lompoc, Cal.—"Florists' List of Winter-Orchid-Flowering and Other Sweet Pea Seed." Besides an assortment of standard varieties, this 8-page catalogue offers ten Zvolanek novelties. The booklet also contains a "special war offer of ready-made orders, put up as soon as harvested, each order comprising such varieties as most customers usually require."

John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, Ill.—"Personal Conservatories," an especially handsome and artistic catalogue, printed with brown ink on cream-tinted paper and bound in a tastefully designed, embossed blue cover, with an equally pleasing inner cover in a harmonious shade of gray. As the title indicates, this 32-page book is devoted principally to conservatories built by the company on private estates. The illustrations comprise interior and exterior views of the houses and diagrams of cross sections. Sashes, coldframes and Moninger boilers also are listed. At the end is an article on "Indoor Gardening," by W. J. O'Carroll, botanist and head gardener at the University of Chicago.

Arthur T. Boddington Co., Inc., New York, N. Y.—"Boddington's Midsummer Garden Guide," a 24-page, illustrated catalogue of pot-grown strawberry plants, bulbs for fall planting, seasonable seeds and sundries. In seeds the principal lines listed are pansies, sweet peas and "hardy perennial and old-fashioned flowers that can be produced from seed sown in summer and fall."

Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Illustrated wholesale summer catalogue of bulbs, roots, seeds, strawberry and vegetable plants, hydrangeas for forcing, hardy perennial plants, hardy climbers, fertilizers and sundries; forty pages and colored cover. Among the special offerings that are featured by means of green inserts are pot-grown roses and perennial flower seeds. Significant of the present peculiar market conditions is the frequent occurrence, in the farm seed list, of such phrases as, "Prices vary. Quotations will be made on application."

Delphi, Ind.—Harry P. Myers has sold an interest in his greenhouse establishment to Edwin Baum and July 2 Myers & Baum, the new firm, took over the business. The firm is adding a third greenhouse to its range. It is 36x100, of John C. Moninger Co. construction. Materials are on the ground ready for erection. With this addition, Myers & Baum will have 12,000 feet of glass. Mr. Myers says business was good last season, much better than he expected.

Marion, Ia.—A severe winter that killed much outdoor stock was followed by a slow spring season, but now and then there have been pleasant things to clear away the blues, according to L. W. Alt.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Fresno, Cal.—Fire destroyed the greenhouse of W. W. McAvoy June 22, the blaze starting from the embers of a brush bonfire. The loss is placed at approximately $1,000.

Seattle, Wash.—In the professional class of exhibits at the Seattle rose show June 25, prizes were awarded to the Lindley Nurseries for the best exhibit of roses; Thomas Wylie for the best general exhibit and Aabling & Boyce for the most artistic exhibit.

PALMS ON THE PACIFIC.

The Pacific northwest has looked to the east for its palms, eastern houses shipping large quantities to Oregon and Washington, but the development of the trade in those states is resulting in the building up of stocks of decorative plants. A glimpse of one of these is afforded by the accompanying illustration, prepared from a photograph made at the establishment of Rahn & Herbert Co., Clackamas, Ore.

In the Palm House of the Rahn & Herbert Co., Clackamas, Ore.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

With cooler weather, stock is better than it was a week ago. It is difficult, however, to procure enough good carnations to supply the demand, and the majority of the roses are not up to standard. In both instances first-class flowers clear readily, at rather stiff prices. In view of the wide assortment of other stock, poor carnations and roses are hard to move at any figure. Quantities of sweet peas are disposed of daily, but the last of the crop is in sight. The gladiolus is the flower most in evidence now, but the demand keeps the large cut from accumulating and there is little fear that the supply will become burdensome. Double coreopsis is offered in large quantities and some of the retailers report that it is selling better than the single. A new light pink scabiosa is having an excellent sale.

Other outdoor flowers demanding a good share of attention include gaillardias, sweet williams, larkspurs, candytuft, snapdragons, daisies, etc. Goldenrod has made its appearance. A few rubrum lilies have been seen, but not enough to make much impression on the market; auratums are fairly plentiful. Easter lilies are in lighter supply and probably will not last much longer. The quality has held up unusually well this year, and so has the demand. The valley situation has improved somewhat, both with regard to quantity and quality, but it is still difficult to get enough good cattleyas to meet all requirements. The cut of gardenias is easily disposed of. The new dagger and fancy ferns are being well received. Asparagus is rather scarce, but there is plenty of adiantum. In flowering plants there is a good call for Canterbury bells, gloxinias and Appleblossom primroses.

Red, white and blue flowers of all kinds were in particularly strong demand the first four days of July. The florists were called upon to make up dozens and dozens of baskets and bouquets of which the patriotic color scheme was the principal feature.

Various Notes.

M. Domoto, of Domoto Bros., has assumed his duties here after spending two weeks in Los Angeles and vicinity, where he combined busines with pleasure. He reports business seasonably good.

J. Onishi, of the United Flower & Supply Co., expects to have a fine cut of asters by the middle of this month. He says the acreage devoted to this flower is unusually large this year and that the crop is in splendid condition. The heavy planting is due largely to the fact that several Japanese growers gave up sweet peas this season for asters.

Richard Diener is sending down a nice cut of hybrid gladioli from his place at Kenfield.

N. F. Baldocchi, of Podesta & Baldocchi, is expected back at the store soon, after an absence of three months for the benefit of his health. When he gets back in harness, Victor Podesta plans an automobile trip to Lake Tahoe and the Yosemite. In checking up the books for June, Mr. Podesta was pleased to find a nice increase in business over the corresponding month last year. He reports an unusually brisk demand for gladioli, which, in his opinion, are particularly fine this season.

Frank Claverie reports business good. He is having a new line of vases made.

O. Lundberg, proprietor of Lundberg's, on Polk street, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation in Placer county.

His store is being rearranged to excellent advantage. Space formerly occupied by a concern handling art goods has been added to the salesroom.

W. Kirkman, Jr., president of the Kirkman Nurseries, Inc., Fresno, Cal., was a recent visitor.

Manuel Rolleri, of San Bruno, Cal., is sending in fine Boston ferns.

Mrs. Klein, who has charge of the Darbee business during the absence of the proprietress, is well pleased with the volume of business being done. The latest cards received from Mrs. Darbee were from Grant's Pass, Ore., telling of a delightful trip.

Albert O. Stein left for Stockton, Cal., for a week-end trip. He had a large wedding decoration in that city. W. Scanlon, of the force, left for Los Angeles July 2 for a two weeks' vacation. Norman Marcus, who has been with this establishment for some time, gave up his position the first of the month to prepare for active service in France. Patrick Orr is back after a month's absence, which turned out differently than he had planned. Instead of an extended trip in the east, he buried his father.

MacRorie & McLaren have renewed their contract for a year with Tait's restaurant, one of the largest accounts of the kind for cut flowers on the Pacific coast. Daniel MacRorie and his family spent the week end at Santa Cruz. Donald McLaren and Walter Hofinghoff made a short trip to Sacramento last week, paying a visit while there to Mark Ebel.

Charles Stappenbach has been spending his vacation at Santa Cruz. His brother reports business good for the "quietest time of the year."

The Art Floral Co. had an elaborate Fourth of July window display. In one window was a large flag of red, white and blue flowers, and in the other was a shield and red, white and blue baskets. Spot lights were installed in the windows to bring out the colors.

David Lichtenstein, the Terminal Florist, is getting full benefit of the heavy summer travel through the Ferry building. He caters to this trade by keeping bouquets made up for the convenience of people hastening to catch boats.

C. S. Quick, secretary of the Dahlia Society of California, is making a tour of the northwest, the principal object of which is to invite growers of that section to participate in the Dahlia show which will be held at the Palace hotel in this city September 4 to 6.

The Market.

The holiday feeling is in the air and the mountains, streams and beaches are more thought of and talked about than flowers. With it all there has been a fair demand, principally for wedding and funeral work. The shipping business has diminished until there is little doing, and if there were good business, the quality of much of the stock is such that most of the long-distance shipments would be out of the question. Gladioli are good again, having withstood the heat well, but most of the outdoor stock is valueless. Sweet peas are more plentiful, but not particularly good. Other flowers are fairly good, but meet with little demand.

Various Notes.

Broomall's dahlia farm, at Eagle Rock, is sending in some good flowers of the true Golden West, a flower paler in color than some others sent out under this name, but with stiffer stems and of good lasting qualities. Mr. Broomall was the originator of this and many other fine dahlias.

Robert Newcomb, representative of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, arrived in this city June 29. He reports good business on his trip out and says he is going to spend a day or two with his folks in San Dimas before laying siege to Los Angeles.

Miss Kate Parsons, of Fresno, made a trip to Los Angeles this week, partly on account of the illness of her sister, but also to look up stock. She reports business as being exceptionally good for the heated term.

A. F. Borden, of the Redondo Floral Co., has been taking a few days off finishing up the home gardening that he started early in the year. Albert Knopf is going to start out later and build himself a summer cottage on his lemon ranch in Orange county. Mr. Knopf says he is not a good carpenter. If the boards are cut to fit he can use the little hammer, but not for knocking the other fellow.

Fred Sperry, of the L. A. Floral Co., took a short vacation over the Fourth.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Fresno, Cal.—Fire destroyed the greenhouse of W. W. McAvoy June 22, the blaze starting from the embers of a brush bonfire. The loss is placed at approximately $1,000.

Seattle, Wash.—In the professional class of exhibits at the Seattle rose show June 25, prizes were awarded to the Lindley Nurseries for the best exhibit of roses; Thomas Wylie for the best general exhibit and Aabling & Boyce for the most artistic exhibit.

PALMS ON THE PACIFIC.

The Pacific northwest has looked to the east for its palms, eastern houses shipping large quantities to Oregon and Washington, but the development of the trade in those states is resulting in the building up of stocks of decorative plants. A glimpse of one of these is afforded by the accompanying illustration, prepared from a photograph made at the establishment of Rahn & Herbert Co., Clackamas, Ore.

In the Palm House of the Rahn & Herbert Co., Clackamas, Ore.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

With cooler weather, stock is better than it was a week ago. It is difficult, however, to procure enough good carnations to supply the demand, and the majority of the roses are not up to standard. In both instances first-class flowers clear readily, at rather stiff prices. In view of the wide assortment of other stock, poor carnations and roses are hard to move at any figure. Quantities of sweet peas are disposed of daily, but the last of the crop is in sight. The gladiolus is the flower most in evidence now, but the demand keeps the large cut from accumulating and there is little fear that the supply will become burdensome. Double coreopsis is offered in large quantities and some of the retailers report that it is selling better than the single. A new light pink scabiosa is having an excellent sale.

Other outdoor flowers demanding a good share of attention include gaillardias, sweet williams, larkspurs, candytuft, snapdragons, daisies, etc. Goldenrod has made its appearance. A few rubrum lilies have been seen, but not enough to make much impression on the market; auratums are fairly plentiful. Easter lilies are in lighter supply and probably will not last much longer. The quality has held up unusually well this year, and so has the demand. The valley situation has improved somewhat, both with regard to quantity and quality, but it is still difficult to get enough good cattleyas to meet all requirements. The cut of gardenias is easily disposed of. The new dagger and fancy ferns are being well received. Asparagus is rather scarce, but there is plenty of adiantum. In flowering plants there is a good call for Canterbury bells, gloxinias and Appleblossom primroses.

Red, white and blue flowers of all kinds were in particularly strong demand the first four days of July. The florists were called upon to make up dozens and dozens of baskets and bouquets of which the patriotic color scheme was the principal feature.

Various Notes.

M. Domoto, of Domoto Bros., has assumed his duties here after spending two weeks in Los Angeles and vicinity, where he combined busines with pleasure. He reports business seasonably good.

J. Onishi, of the United Flower & Supply Co., expects to have a fine cut of asters by the middle of this month. He says the acreage devoted to this flower is unusually large this year and that the crop is in splendid condition. The heavy planting is due largely to the fact that several Japanese growers gave up sweet peas this season for asters.

Richard Diener is sending down a nice cut of hybrid gladioli from his place at Kenfield.

N. F. Baldocchi, of Podesta & Baldocchi, is expected back at the store soon, after an absence of three months for the benefit of his health. When he gets back in harness, Victor Podesta plans an automobile trip to Lake Tahoe and the Yosemite. In checking up the books for June, Mr. Podesta was pleased to find a nice increase in business over the corresponding month last year. He reports an unusually brisk demand for gladioli, which, in his opinion, are particularly fine this season.

Frank Claverie reports business good. He is having a new line of vases made.

O. Lundberg, proprietor of Lundberg's, on Polk street, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation in Placer county.

His store is being rearranged to excellent advantage. Space formerly occupied by a concern handling art goods has been added to the salesroom.

W. Kirkman, Jr., president of the Kirkman Nurseries, Inc., Fresno, Cal., was a recent visitor.

Manuel Rolleri, of San Bruno, Cal., is sending in fine Boston ferns.

Mrs. Klein, who has charge of the Darbee business during the absence of the proprietress, is well pleased with the volume of business being done. The latest cards received from Mrs. Darbee were from Grant's Pass, Ore., telling of a delightful trip.

Albert O. Stein left for Stockton, Cal., for a week-end trip. He had a large wedding decoration in that city. W. Scanlon, of the force, left for Los Angeles July 2 for a two weeks' vacation. Norman Marcus, who has been with this establishment for some time, gave up his position the first of the month to prepare for active service in France. Patrick Orr is back after a month's absence, which turned out differently than he had planned. Instead of an extended trip in the east, he buried his father.

MacRorie & McLaren have renewed their contract for a year with Tait's restaurant, one of the largest accounts of the kind for cut flowers on the Pacific coast. Daniel MacRorie and his family spent the week end at Santa Cruz. Donald McLaren and Walter Hofinghoff made a short trip to Sacramento last week, paying a visit while there to Mark Ebel.

Fred Sperry, of the L. A. Floral Co., took a short vacation over the Fourth.

At the California Cut Flower Co. store some excellent gladioli are being shown and the roses, as usual, are extra fine.

Arthur Howard, of Howard & Smith, stole a march on his friends recently when he said hé was going away for a ten days' trip to Catalina. This he did, but first of all—June 14, to be exact—he was married to Mrs. Minnie Plunkett, and the trip was a honeymoon.

S. Murata & Co. report a falling off in out-of-town shipments.

H. R. Richards.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Business is stagnant, there being few funerals, social affairs or other means of moving stock, which is abundant. Auratum lilies now are more prominent and more useful. English and Japanese irises are plentiful and make fine window displays.

The National Educational Association is holding its annual convention here this week and there has been much stock used for decorative purposes.

The Floral Society held its annual picnic July 4 at Schnorr's park, near Oregon City. The attendance was not so large as last year, but everyone had a good time. There were races, games, dancing and plenty to eat. Otto Panzer tried to catch some trout, but when he had a large one hooked, he remembered that his license was not in his pocket—so he says—and let the fish go. The picnickers extended their thanks to August Zitzewitz, the chairman of the committee in charge of the affair, for making the outing so pleasant.

James Forbes and R. W. Scott motored to the Tillamook beaches July 4.

Charles Welby, who has been interested in the Swiss Floral Co., has severed his connection with the company. J. G. Bacher is now in charge of the company's affairs.

Julius Broetje is planting a pond with water lilies of the red, pink, blue and yellow varieties. At present he is bringing in a large supply of the whites, which find a ready sale. W. G. W.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

Business is not quite so brisk as it was last week. The staple stock is plentiful and only choice carnations find a sale in box orders. Peonies are abundant, but their quality is not up to the standard. Many fine plants undoubtedly were blighted by the late frost. Good peas are now more than sufficient for the demand; outdoor-grown peas are just starting to bloom. Outdoor roses are at their best. The cool, late season has brought out perfect blooms; in fact, it is difficult to tell them from greenhouse-grown stock. Delphiniums are now quite plentiful, with the demand good.

There is an increased demand for old-fashioned flowers and perennials. Funeral and decorative work continues in a satisfactory manner, but counter sales have dropped off to some extent, probably on account of the large stock of outdoor roses.

Various Notes.

Henry Benthien has shipped some of the finest peonies grown locally this season. He also has a fine lot of delphiniums and Canterbury bells.

Van Slyke & Seamons are busy with the new benches and young mum plants. They are shipping a fine lot of cukes to the town every day.

The annual rose show June 29 and 30 proved to be one of the finest displays of roses ever made in the northwest. Of over 5,000 roses exhibited in the prize booths, the nine best of any variety were Caroline Testout.

James Simpson is benching his poinsettias and starting out a new lot of roses.

The Tacoma Floral Co. is clearing out the last of a fine crop of Canterbury bells.

Nurserymen are looking forward to a big time at the annual convention of the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen, to be held here beginning July 17. Arrangements have been made to accommodate any number of visitors. The Tacoma hotel has been chosen as headquarters. B. G.

FISCHER'S SPLENDENS

A MAGNIFICENT LAVENDER FREESIA

The only commercial colored Freesia in the world, not to be compared or judged in the same class with any other colored Freesia. It stands alone for size, strength, beauty and fragrance. The flowers are very large, with long, heavy stems with foliage reaching well up the stems, and are highly fragrant.

It is a Freesia that will stand the test of time and will be grown by all florists when stock can be offered at commercial prices. Was awarded a Certificate of Merit at the Pasadena Flower Show.

Stock is limited; send in your orders as soon as possible. Is offered in two shades of color, a bluish lavender and a reddish lavender. Only good sized, flowering bulbs are offered. PRICE: Per dozen, $3.50; per 100, $20.00.

METHODS OF PROPAGATION.

[This is the third installment of extracts from a paper read by T. D. Hatfield, of Wellesley, Mass., at a meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The fourth will appear in an early issue.]

Carnation Sports.

In fixing carnation sports it is necessary to go through much the same experience. A cutting or two may be obtained from the shoot that produces the sport, but in order to obtain a greater increase resort must be had to leaf eyes. As, however, all sports are bud variations, still other sports are liable to occur.

Propagation of any particular plant means the perpetuation of that plant in another individual. Every new plant raised in this way is a part of the original and just as old; it is the same plant. In connection with this fact it should be noted that when a carnation gets ready to sport, it frequently sports in several places at the same time. So well is this fact known by judges that when a sport is put before them for certification the award, if considered, is generally withheld until it is found if the sport has appeared elsewhere.

Propagation by Layering.

Layering is nature's favorite way. She does it quite openly. To get a plant on its own roots is a good way, and in some cases, if not the only way, it is the best and most practical way. Rhododendrons cannot well be rooted from cuttings. I do not say it is impossible, for what one cannot do another may, but for most people it is impracticable to root rhododendrons from cuttings. They can be layered, though it may take two years to do it. Layering for rhododendrons is, in my opinion, best for this country, and, in the opinion of at least one noted grower, is best for any country.

In foreign countries the most easily workable stock for grafting rhododendrons is ponticum, a plant of uncertain hardiness in itself here. It is well enough to use it for a stock if grafted low enough so that the scion gets on its own roots, but it is uncertain and short-lived as a stock. The result is that when we import rhododendrons, unless we get layered plants we get something not dependable.

As a rule, plants that will not layer are difficult to root from cuttings. I have never seen pines, hemlocks or firs layer naturally, or even artificially, nor have I been able to root them from cuttings. As I said before, nature often shows the way and we frequently find hydrangeas, loniceras, deutzias, forsythias, viburnums, currants, gooseberries and grape vines rooting wherever they happen to strike the ground. With this hint, man goes nature one better by making cuts in the stem, bending the branch to the soil and covering it with prepared loam.

Formerly carnations were rooted mostly by layering. We had not become acquainted with the expeditious methods now in use in this country, where they are rooted by tens of thousands from cuttings.

Grafting and Budding.

Grafting has been said by one notable authority to be a makeshift at best. I will not venture to disagree with that authority. It is a valuable makeshift, nevertheless. In this, as in all other methods of propagation, nature has shown the way and examples of natural grafting, while not numerous, are still common enough to have come within the observation of most gardeners and others interested in horticulture. With few exceptions, plants would prefer to be on their own roots and they make strenuous efforts to get there if given a chance.

Nevertheless, grafting is indispensable and few processes have added more to the material welfare of mankind. We should be in a poor way for apples, plums, peaches, pears and apricots, not forgetting lemons and oranges, if we had to depend on other methods.

There are various methods of grafting and budding, but all depend on one thing and that is the union of the cambium layers of stock and scion. The cambium layer lies between the bark and the wood. It is here all annual growth is made. It is the center of the plant's activities, the life center. A tree may be perfectly hollow and live so long as the cambium is uninjured.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-president, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.; Secretary and Counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia..

It is a quite general report that shrubs did not sell so well this spring as usual. The gardening enthusiasm was centered on potatoes and other comestibles.

The nonarrival of the spring shipments of bay trees and boxwoods cut down the spring sales of a number of dealers so much that increased sales in other lines do not make the season compare favorably with last year.

THE NEW VICE-PRESIDENT.

J. R. Mayhew, of Waxahachie, Tex., who was chosen vice-president of the American Association of Nurserymen at the convention held in Philadelphia June 27 to 29, has been engaged in the nursery business in Texas since 1891 and for a number of years has been prominent in southern nurserymen's associations. Before his elevation to the office of vice-president, Mr. Mayhew had served on the executive committee of the American Association two years; had held a like position with the American Nurserymen's Protective Association; had served as president of the Texas Nurserymen's Association for three years and was elected president of the Southern Association of Nurserymen in 1913.

Mr. Mayhew was born in Madison county, Alabama, May 12, 1869. He was educated in the schools at Huntsville, Ala., and in 1891 went to Texas, where he engaged in the nursery business until 1900, when he moved to Waxahachie. There he established the Waxahachie Nursery Co., in 1901, and since its incorporation has been its president and general manager. Consequently, Mr. Mayhew brings to the asociation the knowledge gained by many years in the nursery business and the experience obtained as an official of similar, though smaller, associations.

In politics Mr. Mayhew is a Democrat and has served the party as a delegate to district and state conventions and was a delegate to the national convention at Baltimore in 1912, when President Wilson was nominated the first time. Mr. Mayhew is prominent in the affairs of the Presbyterian church and is the ruling elder of the Waxahachie congregation. He also is vice-chairman of the board of trustees of Trinity University, the Presbyterian college of Texas. He was married in 1899.

J. R. Mayhew.

A. R. N. P. A. ELECTION.

At the annual meeting of the American Retail Nurserymen's Protective Association, held in Philadelphia during the annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen June 27 to 29, the following officers were elected:

President—M. R. Cashman, Owatonna, Minn.

Vice-president—B. J. Greening, Monroe, Mich.

Secretary-treasurer—E. M. Sherman, Charles City, Ia.

A. N. P. A. ELECTS OFFICERS.

The American Nurserymen's Protective Association held its annual meeting in Philadelphia June 28 and re-elected its officers with the exception of Irving Rouse, Rochester, N. Y., who resigned as president, and Harry Simpson, Vincennes, Ind., the vice-president. The officers of the association are:

President—J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.

Vice-president—C. C. Mayhew, Sherman, Tex.

CEMETERY MEN'S CONVENTION.

The thirty-first annual convention of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents will be held at Barre, Vt., August 28 to 31. A most interesting program has been prepared and the entertainment has been carefully arranged for the purpose of illustrating the special features of the business sessions.

The local committee is making hotel reservations for a large attendance, but in order to facilitate its work it will be necessary that everyone expecting to attend the convention advise the committee of the fact, and of the number of persons in each party, as the hotels are making the reservations through the committee only. W. B. Jones, Sec'y.

WHITE PINE BLISTER RUST.

In an effort to locate all plantations and private plantings of white pine in the United States in order that more effective measures may be taken to prevent the spread of the destructive white pine blister rust, the United States Department of Agriculture, in coöperation with the states, is making a survey of the planted white pine and white pine nursery stock of the country.

In this work the department and its collaborators are desirous of receiving the coöperation of all tree lovers, all forest owners and all organizations such as the Boy Scouts, which are working for the public welfare.

All persons interested in saving white pines, the department states, can help by sending a postcard to the Office of Forest Pathology, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., giving the location and owner of any white pines known to them which were grown from nursery stock and the approximate number and height of the trees. Both the writer and the owner will be sent a copy of Farmers' Bulletin 742, "The White Pine Blister Rust." This publication has colored illustrations of the rust and descriptive matter, which will make it possible for the reader to recognize the disease if it has become developed in his neighborhood.

This rust, a disease of the five-needled or white pines, is known to be dangerous to the white pine forests in Europe. It invaded this country between 1904 and 1912 in shipments of nursery stock, mostly from Germany. Between these dates probably 10,000,000 small white pine trees were imported, most of them coming to the New England states. Many shipments, however, are known to have been made to the states of Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Minnesota, and to have been sent out by nurserymen to parks, cemeteries and private planters.

A peculiarity of the rust parasite is that it has two classes of hosts, white pines and species of ribes; that is, currants and gooseberries. So far as known the disease can not pass from pine to pine, but must pass from pine to the currant or gooseberry, and then back to the pine. On the pines the disease takes the form of a blister or canker and has been found on main stem, branch and twig. On the currant and gooseberry the rust forms small orange spots or minute orange or brown hair-like projections on the under side of the leaf. The life history of the organism causing the blister rust is similar to that causing the cedar apple rust, which spreads from the red cedar to the apple leaf, and to that causing the wheat rust, which spreads from the barberry bush to the wheat plant.

The blister rust was first found in this country on currants in 1906, but it did not again make its appearance until 1909.

The Annual Summer Show.

The Newport Horticultural Society and the Newport Garden Association held their joint annual exhibition last week at the Lafayette. The show had been postponed from the dates originally set because of the backwardness of the season. Although the opening day, July 3, was stormy, many persons were present to witness what many thought to be the best arranged show the societies have ever staged. Much credit is due the committee for the beautiful arrangement.

It is the first time that the show has been held at the Lafayette, and it proved an admirable place for such an exhibition. At the entrance flowers and plants were on sale by K. Christensen. The proceeds, as well as those from the exhibit, were donated to the Red Cross. Bruce Butterworth, James McLeish and Richard Gardiner were the judges. The committee of the society was James Bond, James Robertson, Bruce Butterworth, William MacKay and Fred P. Webber.

The leaders in the number of prizes won were Daniel Hays, gardener to Mrs. French Vanderbilt, and Andrew Dorward, gardener to Mrs. T. J. Emery. Among the other prize-winners were James Boyd, gardener to Vincent Astor; James Robertson, gardener to T. O. Richardson; J. B. Urquhart, gardener to Gov. R. L. Beeckman; Hugh Williamson, gardener to W. W. Astor; C. M. Bogholt, gardener to Miss F. Foster; T. Sullivan, gardener to Mrs. S. Webster; William MacKay, gardener to H. A. Various Notes.

Oscar Schultz reports an unusually brisk business thus far this season.

James Bond, who has been superintendent of the Brooks estate for several years, has gone to Port Washington, N. Y., to take charge of the Guggenheimer place, Castle Gould, succeeding William Vert.

William Gray was a recent business visitor to Boston.

D. W. Jones, scientific assistant in the United States Department of Agriculture, has been in Newport investigating the recent increase in the growth of the European earwig, which since its discovery here in 1911 has become a serious pest. W. H. M.

The Market.

The depressing effect of summer on business now is manifest, but there is enough activity to take up the better grades of stock. There seem to be cheap roses without number, and most of them make their exit via the ash can or street stand. Russell seems to stand head and shoulders above any other variety in the matter of popularity.

The main item of the market at present is gladioli, of which the quality is most satisfactory. Gypsophilas and candytuft move well in funeral work. Asters put in an appearance last week.

Various Notes.

A house 36x100 recently completed by A. F. Barbe has been planted to roses in prime condition, and the benching of carnations is scheduled for this week. Mr. Barbe believes in starting off the new stock as early as possible.

A. Elberfield is producing a large batch of extra fine outdoor flowers, but, then, Mr. Elberfield uses 5,000 gallons of water daily to irrigate his patch. Mr. Atkins, who has been employed by Mr. Elberfield for ten years, has resigned his position to go to Florida.

ASTERS AND SNAPDRAGONS

ASTERS, strong 2½-inch pots, well established—Late Branching, deep crimson; Late Branching, lavender; Late Branching, purple; Late Branching, white; Queen of the Market, white, shell-pink, rose-pink; Crego, Giant Lavender, from 2½-inch pots, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

SNAPDRAGONS—varieties: Salmon-pink, Giant White, Golden Queen, Giant Yellow and Defiance, red.

These plants have been pinched back and are well branched and strong, from 2½-inch pots $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. 250 sold at 1000 rate.

1012 WEST ONTARIO STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

T. J. Noll is elated over the way business has panned out so far this year. Fall supplies of baskets and ribbons are being stocked, in anticipation of good times to come.

Large receipts of good roses at the Henry Kusik house do not have to wait long for buyers, according to the men on the floor.

Funeral orders last week had the Arthur Newell staff stepping lively, what with one man short and a large out-of-town commission.

W. J. Barnes is rapidly whipping his houses into shape for the fall business. Begonias of the Barnes brand take well with the buyers.

It should be reported that the large decorative order for the Muehlebach hotel, July 21, was captured by the W. L. Rock Flower Co. Mr. Carter, lucky man! is hunting, fishing and autoing in the Wisconsin woods.

The Market.

Considering that we have passed the Fourth of July, the florists' business in Washington is the best on record. Usually the city is nearly deserted by this time of the year and there is little doing, except in funeral work, until the officials and the society people return from their vacations. This year, however, official Washington is on the job; not only that, but the number of government employees is being greatly increased by the employment of men from other parts of the country. Many of these are persons of means and there is much entertaining going on. None of the affairs is large or elaborate, but most of them call for flowers. The result is that the retail stores are having an excellent run of small sales.

The supply of stock, while adequate for the demand, is not excessive. It is of the usual summer character.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club of Washington is planning to send a large representation to the S. A. F. convention, probably joining the conventionists of Baltimore in the trip to New York.

The growers have practically finished the planting of roses and chrysanthemums, and the planting of carnations is about to begin. There has been some reduction in the quantity of mums planted hereabouts and probably not so many carnations will be benched as last year, additional space being given to roses.

Peoria, Ill.—C. Loveridge is preparing to remove from his old location on Jefferson street to a building on Main street purchased by him in 1916, which he is preparing to remodel. He will have a space 28x78, with all the fixtures of the most modern type. When Mr. Loveridge gets into his new building there will be four flower stores in one block on Main street, but this is a live town of 82,000 inhabitants and all the florists do good business.

GERANIUMS

Geraniums are more the people's flower today than ever, and next season they will be in still greater demand.

Geraniums are the Christmas, New Year, Easter, Birthday, and every other day flower. Now is the time to secure stock for Winter and Christmas flowering, or to grow on for stock.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

HEAT FROM EXHAUST STEAM.

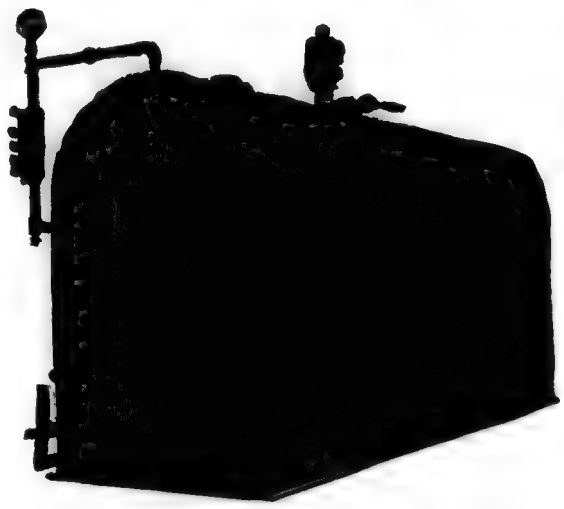
We have a heating problem which we wish to submit and we shall appreciate an answer from your expert as early as possible. Our greenhouses adjoin an electric light plant. The exhaust steam from this plant would heat our entire range, which consists of four houses, each 26x150 and seven feet high to the eaves. The electric light company wishes to meter this steam to us. What rate would have to be paid for the exhaust steam to make it cost practically the same as with our present steam heating system?

D. B. G.—S. D.

The comparative cost of heating greenhouses with exhaust steam, as proposed, will depend largely, of course, upon the price of coal. In most cases the rates have a sliding scale, per thousand pounds of condensed water, of from 50 to 60 cents when coal costs $2.50 per ton to 90 cents when the same coal is $6 per ton. Though this is more than it would cost to supply the coal, considerable allowance can be made for the saving in firing, removing ashes, etc.

A SMALL CARNATION HOUSE.

I have just completed a small greenhouse and want some advice about the piping and heating of it. I intended to use it for vegetables, but have decided now to bench it for carnations and other flowers and add a lettuce house later. The house is 21x31, of Moninger semi-iron construction, and runs north and south, with the boiler room at the north end. There is top and side ventilation on the east side. The house stands on a concrete foundation and is twelve feet high to the ridge and six feet to the eaves, with five feet of glass in the west wall. My plan was to use 2-inch pipe throughout, installing two 2-inch overhead flows and ten 2-inch returns.



K. G.—Kan.

For a carnation house 21x31, with a ventilator in the east wall and five feet of glass in the west wall, and having 1,250 to 1,400 square feet of glass, we would recommend between 300 and 350 square feet of radiation, depending upon the exposure and the actual amount of glass.

The suggested plan of using two 2-inch flow pipes and ten 2-inch returns

NO TUBES TO CLEAN

Kroeschell Water Tube Steam Boiler

Wouldn't you be surprised if some morning you picked up your florists' trade paper, and while turning the front cover, you see a double page advertisement announcing that Kroeschell Bros. Co. will from this moment on build and erect greenhouses—big 30-50-80 footers in width, even twice as long and again as wide as any of the greenhouse companies, who have specialized in this class of work for more than a decade?

Wouldn't you wonder and wonder if we claimed that our greenhouses were built stronger and better, because of some fandangled feature of construction, whereby we made an old-time, obsolete type of house just a little different in order to be different for sake of a talking point? WELL, YOU NEED NOT WORRY, we are not going to do anything of the kind.

Our business (established 1879) is to build boilers of all types, from the smallest house heater to the largest 600 H. P. Water Tube Steam Boilers. We do not claim that we are wizards at designing freak boilers. Our practical experience—engineering knowledge and reputation would not permit this.

For thirty-eight years, we have confined our entire efforts to the designing and construction of high grade boilers, and during this time have served the florist trade of this country and foreign countries to the full satisfaction of every one of our customers.

The famous Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler has made a wonderful record for greenhouse heating, because of its practicability—high efficiency and unequaled fuel economy.

Men who know boilers—authorities on boiler construction—admit that our Hot Water Boiler and the Kroeschell Water Tube Steam Boiler are positively the best hot water and steam units ever designed for greenhouse heating.

The high efficiency of the Kroeschell is due to its immense direct self-cleaning heating surface (a very small proportion of flue surface is used)—the thin vertical waterways—the large combustion space—long fire travel (longer than any other boiler)—its perfection of construction—honest and "true blue" rating.

These qualities combined with the workmanship and material are an inspiration to every boiler maker—it sets the standard for all other boilers.

As stated before, do not worry about our going into the greenhouse building business—we will continue as boiler makers, to build only the highest grade of boilers. We will strive to make them better all the time.

The Burnham Tubular Boiler does away with brick setting expense It reduces chimney costs Cuts down tube replacing expense

BEAR in mind that the cost of setting bricked-up boilers often adds half as much again to the cost of the boiler.

The Burnham requires no bricking-up. The only masonry needed is the foundation for the ash pit, and rear support to rest on.

High chimneys run into money fast. The Burnham, because of its extra large flues and high perfection of combustion, will work to its full capacity with a lower chimney than any tubular boiler we know of.

Because all the tubes are made from only high grade charcoal iron, they will outlast all steel or ordinary iron tubes.

Replacing tubes runs into money fast. Replacing in the winter is dangerous and particularly expensive.

The Burnham Charcoal Iron Tubes last.

As for the direct coal economy facts about the Burnham Tubular, send for the circular, or get in touch with any one of our nine Sales Offices that is nearest to you.

If you want to talk it over carefully with us, say when and where and we will be there.

The boiler is made at our factory, Geneva, N. Y.

Send for circular fully describing and illustrating it.

would not supply more than 250 square feet of radiation, unless a considerable amount of piping is placed upon the end walls. We would prefer to use three 2-inch flow pipes, placing one on each plate and the other two feet below the ridge. Unless the house is considerably exposed, we would only use four 2-inch pipes in each of the wall coils, and four others distributed under the middle bench and connected with the overhead flow pipe.

COAL OR FUEL OIL—WHICH?

I am using a Johnston steam boiler, with a grate surface 30x38 inches and a rating of 2,275 square feet. Last winter I burned sixty-four long tons of New River bituminous coal in heating two houses, with an area of 10,000 square feet of glass, to a carnation temperature, in northern Massachusetts. I should like to get a little information concerning the approximate quantity of fuel oil that would be necessary to heat the same houses. I have a tank with a capacity of 2,500 gallons, which I can use for storage purposes. What apparatus would I need? J. E. S.—Mass.

The comparative economy in using coal and fuel oil for heating purposes will depend largely, of course, upon the quality and cost of these fuels. As a rule, we may consider that a good grade of coal furnishes 14,000 heat units and there would perhaps be 19,000 units in fuel oil per pound, or, in other words, the oil is worth about one-third more per pound than coal. This, of course, does not begin to equal the difference in cost, but there will be a large saving in the cost of firing, removing ashes, etc., if oil is used as the fuel.

Aside from the necessary piping and a special burner for the oil, a steam jet to spray the oil must be provided.

THE PIPING AND THE STACK.

Kindly tell me how to arrange the piping in my three greenhouses, as the present arrangement is not satisfactory. One of the houses is 17x150; the other two are each 14x150. They are connected, with no walls between. The side walls are seven feet high and contain three feet of glass. The houses run east and west and the west gable end is exposed. The boiler, a No. 5 Kroeschell, is in a shed at the east end and is below the level of the greenhouse floors. I wish to maintain a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. Here, in northern Indiana, the outside temperature may drop as low as 12 degrees below zero. I have a considerable quantity of 1-inch, 1½-inch and 2-inch pipe which I should like to use. I also have a 4-inch pipe which might be used for one flow the length of the house.

What size of chimney should I erect? I intend to build it of brick. In stating its width, please give both inside and outside measurements. F. W.—Ind.

To heat the house 17x150, which, as we understand, has three feet of glass in one wall, to a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 12 degrees below zero, we would place the 4-inch flow on the outer wall and also use two 2½-inch flows, placing one of them on the other plate and the second under the ridge. Eight 2-inch returns will be required. Three should be connected with the 4-inch flow, three with the flow under the ridge and two with the other 2½-inch flow.

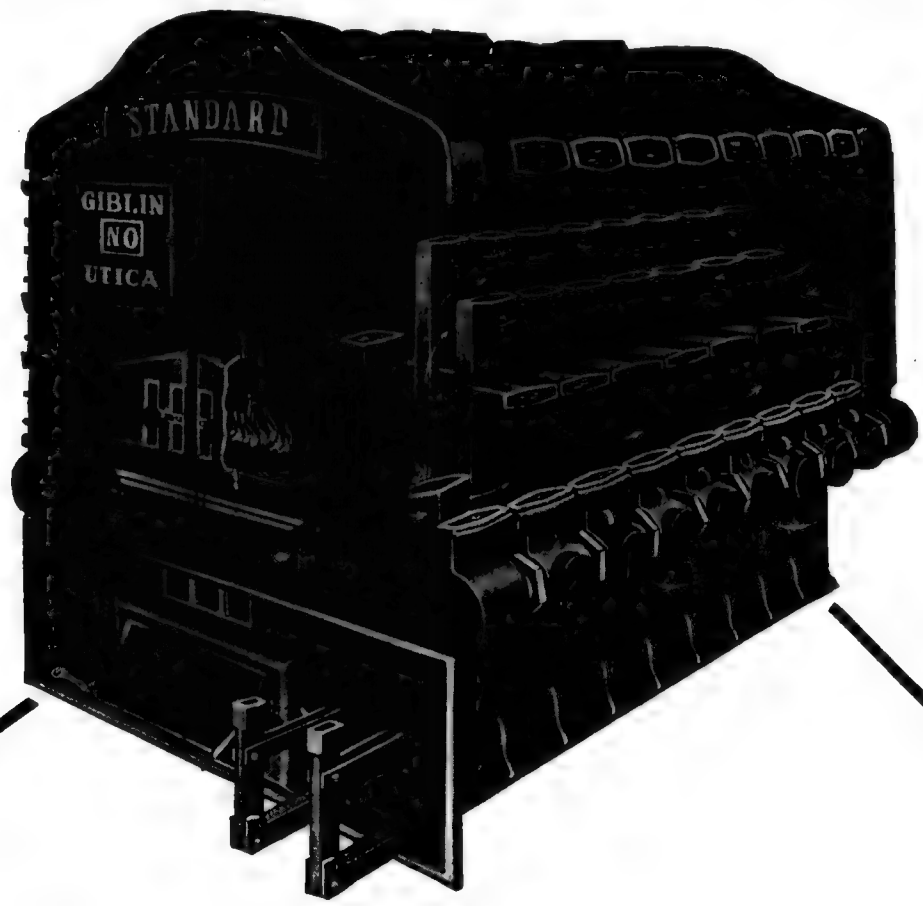
For the other houses we would use three 2½-inch flows and either seven 2-inch or nine 1½-inch returns. We would not use 1-inch pipe for houses 150 feet in length and would prefer not to use 1½-inch pipe; neither would we use 2-inch pipe for flows in houses of that length.

The three houses contain about 9,000 square feet of glass and for this area we would suggest that the chimney be about twelve inches in diameter inside, which, with 8-inch walls, will make it twenty-eight inches square outside.

A chimney of the foregoing dimensions is all that would be necessary for the three houses described, but if additional houses are to be erected and the full capacity of the boiler utilized, provision should be made for this and a chimney sixteen inches wide inside should be erected. This will make it thirty-two inches square outside, unless it is more than thirty feet in height, in which case it will be well to build the wall of three tiers of bricks for the first ten feet, making it forty inches square at the base.



Unless the chimney is on the windward side of a building or trees, thirty feet will generally answer as its height, although its capacity can be increased by adding to its height.

The Market.

Market conditions during the first week of July were normal for this time of the year. There is enough stock to satisfy the demand, but the quality of most of it is mediocre. Business is fair, with wedding and funeral work to uphold the demand.

Roses are holding up well under the hot weather. Summer American Beauties are of good quality, and of the others Russell, Sunburst, Shawyer and Kaiserin are the best varieties. Valley is extremely high-priced and hard to procure, and as a result many substitutes are used. Callas and Easter lilies are not so plentiful as a few weeks ago, but the supply nevertheless is adequate. Sweet peas are flooding the market.

Carnations probably have suffered more than any other flower from the intense heat, and a few weeks will see the finish for the season. Snapdragons are of fair quality and meet with a good call. Gladioli at present are scarce and the prices are high. There are many outdoor flowers, and all of them serve a good purpose one way or another. Green goods of all seasonable kinds are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Miss Catherine Vesey has returned from a month's visit to New York and other eastern points.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Freese, of the New Haven Floral Co., have gone on a vacation to Detroit.

Some excellent gloxinias are being shown at the Doswell Floral Co. store. The company had a good run of funeral work last week.

A. J. Lanternier & Co. report a good week of funeral work and several large wedding orders booked in advance.

Frank J. Knecht & Co. are busily engaged in replanting roses. Mr. Knecht is going to Indianapolis this week to attend the Indiana association meeting.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey report the demand normal. W. J. Vesey, Jr., has returned from a motor trip to Indianapolis.

The marriage of Judge W. J. Vesey to Miss Grace Waters took place Friday noon, July 6. Judge and Mrs. Vesey left at once for Atlantic City and New York, and will spend some time at Cumberland Gap, where Judge Vesey will attend to business matters. After the trip they will reside at the Vesey homestead.

George W. Flick is spending a week at Toledo, O., the guest of his aunt, Miss C. B. Flick.

Among the florists closing their stores Saturday evenings and all day Sunday are A. J. Lanternier & Co., the Flick Floral Co., the Doswell Floral Co., Markey Bros. and E. Wenninghoff.

The Flick Floral Co. is devoting one large house to tomato plants this year.

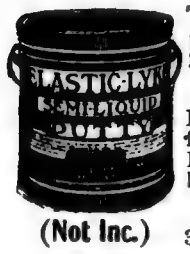
The Market.

There are plenty of good flowers to take care of the demand, which, with the coming of real summer weather, has dropped to almost nothing. Carnations still are fair and many are arriving. They will soon be scarce, as the growers already are planting. Asters as yet are not plentiful, but soon will be coming in quantities. Lilies are good, but Beauties are showing the effects of the hot weather. The local supply of sweet peas is gone, but some good ones are being shipped in.

Various Notes.

Gilbert Ludwig is receiving congratulations on the birth of a son.

Bessie Stuart Campbell still is with us and arrangements are being made for her to deliver a lecture on "Roses and Their Influence on Character," at the Wiliam Penn hotel. Clarke.



The Club Meeting.

The placidity of last week's meeting of the Pittsburgh Florists' and Gardeners' Club was broken by a tilt between two of the members as to the skill of Pittsburgh's gardeners compared with the skill of gardeners of other cities. During the verbal battle one fact of force was brought out: "The average man goes abroad to see hurriedly, excitedly and expensively things which are right under his nose."

So, to live up to the idea quoted, and to settle the dispute, the members decided to visit the several gardens, public and private, in the residential east end district, within the next few days; a committee was delegated to plan the route, transportation and commissary of the expedition, which is sure to be both enjoyable and instructive. Invitation cards will be sent to all interested.

On the exhibition tables were some good Spencer sweet peas from Sewickley Heights and a splendid collection of herbaceous perennials and lilies from Dixmont. A vote of thanks was extended the exhibitors, Carl Becherer and William Thompson.

Burlington, Wis.—The Burlington Floral Co. soon will open a new store in the business section here. The company has filed articles of incorporation at Racine. The capital stock will be $25,000. The purpose of the incorporation is to enlarge the business by the addition of a retail store.

Myers & Company, well-known florists of Bluffton, Indiana, write as follows:

Regarding the line of Fertilizer you offer The Greenhouse Trade, will say we have used it the past season with very gratifying results. My only regret is that we did not begin using it sooner. We used it on the carnations, greens, etc., as per your instructions, and have never cut as many or as nice stuff as this season. We also used it on the roses, and the crops of Ophelia beat anything around here. Our soil is a very heavy clay and your line of Fertilizer just fills the bill exactly, when used with plenty of manure in the soil.

The Market.

Lilies and gladioli have been the leading sellers in the market, the demand for these having been uncommonly heavy. An enormous quantity of lilies has been moved, thanks to the demand occasioned by a good run of funeral work. Roses have been plentiful and popular at $2 to $6 per hundred. A few carnations are still making their way to the market, but they are of such inferior quality that they are given little consideration.

Snapdragons are in adequate supply and used extensively. They bring $1 and $2 per hundred. Outdoor hydrangeas, phloxes, feverfew and dahlias are newcomers. Gypsophila has had an exceptionally good demand.

The few potted plants available have met with a ready sale. Ferns, begonias and gloxinias are the most important of these.

Various Notes.

Judge Conner, of Wabash, visited the trade last week.

Hartje & Elder produced a fine lot of sweet pea seeds this year.

The Bertermann Bros. Co. and the Circle Flower Store had most attractive patriotic windows July 4.

Eldon Weygandt has been cutting gladioli of exceptional quality.

Mrs. Herbert Weiss underwent an operation last week for appendicitis.

Allan Humason, of Chicago, visited the trade this week. A. T. Hey, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, also was here last week, as well as Mr. Young, of the Young Tool Co., Casey, Ill.

Henry W. Rieman has sold his establishment to his two sons, Frank and Harry, and retired from the business.

H. G. Evans, of the Gasser Co., Cleveland, has been visiting friends in the city.

William Webber, gardener for the Central Hospital for the Insane, died July 2, at the age of 56 years. He at one time was in the employ of the Bertermann Bros. Co. for six years, but during the last twenty years he was florist at the hospital. Mr. Webber is survived by his wife and one son.

AN UP-TO-DATE GREENHOUSE must be lasting, secure, efficient, properly ventilated

It must be constructed in accordance with the rules which have been approved by knowledge and experience. We have been in the greenhouse manufacturing business for a good many years and our experience is at your disposal. Whether you intend to build your first house or plan an addition, we believe that our suggestions will be of interest to you. Our material is strictly first-class both in grade and workmanship. Our new "Leak-Proof" Gutter is bound to give you satisfaction. Our prices are reasonable. We use only the best grade of Louisiana Red Cypress.

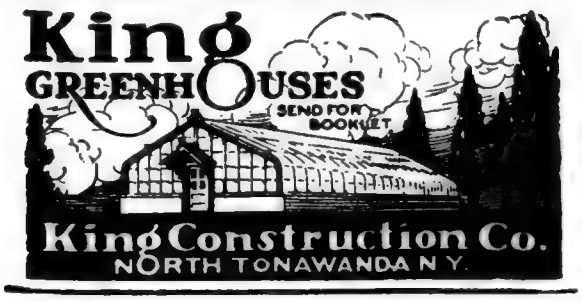
METROPOLITAN EFFICIENCY BORN OF EXPERIENCE

We have been in the greenhouse building business for almost half a century, and have encountered and overcome almost every known difficulty attendant to greenhouse erection, heating and ventilation.

Our organization is keyed right up to the acme of efficiency and renders a service which is far above the average, when speed, economy and practicability are sought.



PUT YOUR GREENHOUSE PROBLEMS UP TO US.

We go anywhere in the U. S. to submit plans and prices.

IN GREENHOUSE CROPS

Profits in the greenhouse business are larger than ever. What does it matter if the original investment is a trifle greater? It's the percentage of profit that counts after all.

Before the advance, we contracted for a big supply of Louisiana Red Cypress lumber. We are therefore still in a position to make you exceedingly attractive prices on strictly guaranteed greenhouse work. Write immediately — before you misplace this address.

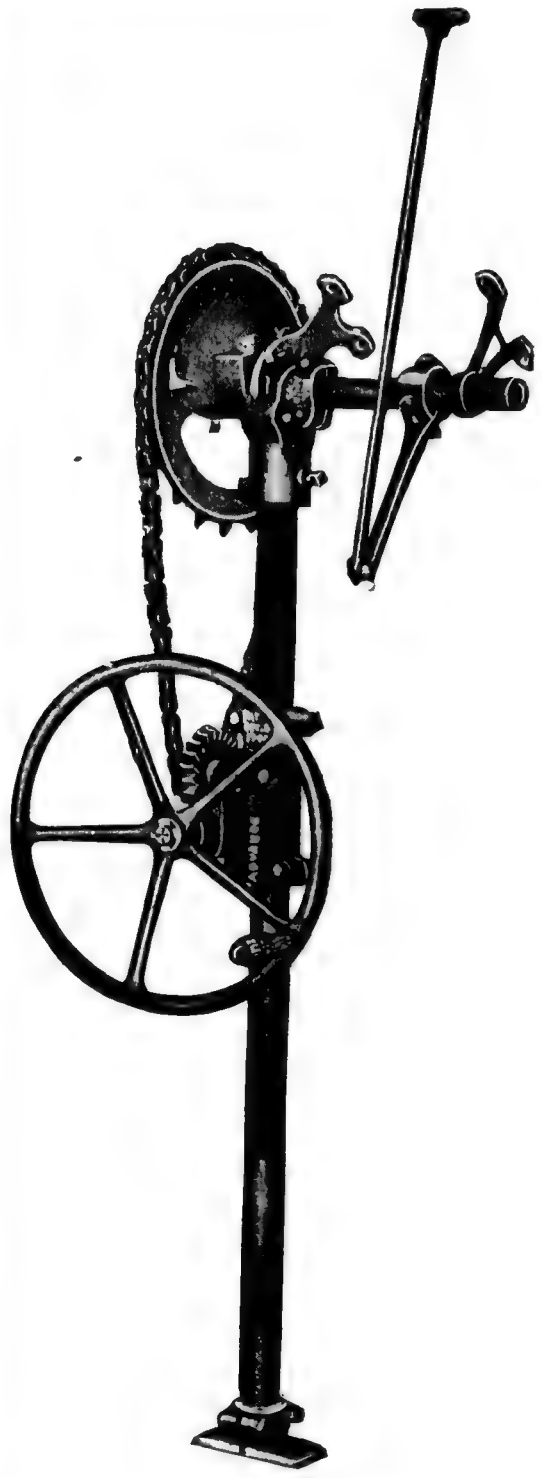
FLOWERS TO FOLLOW MUMS.



Will you suggest some plants or flowers for cutting which we can sow now and have in bloom before or at Christmas time? We want something which can be brought in about the time the early mums are gone, about November 5. We have coldframes and hotbeds in which we can keep them up to that time. K. F. C.—O.

There is too little time between the first week of November and Christmas to plant out and get any crop in flower. The sunlight is steadily diminishing during that time and plants would not make much growth in the period between the clearing out of one crop and the time the flowers are wanted.

Seeds of snapdragons can be sown now. The intermediate strain is the best. These can be grown in pots and would give some flowers when wanted. Calendulas, if sown early in September and benched as soon as space is available, would also give some flowers. Such stocks as Beauty of Nice and White Column should be sown now, kept in pots and benched in early October. Bachelor's buttons, if sown now, planted outdoors in nursery rows and lifted and benched to follow the earliest mums, would give some flowers. Sweet peas would need to be sown early in September and planted out early in October to give Christmas flowers, using the grandifloras, like Christmas Pink, for the earliest blooms. Mignonette should be sown in July to give satisfactory Christmas spikes.

You would do better with any of the plants named by growing and flowering them in pots rather than benching them with the idea of getting a Christmas crop. Few annuals can be made to bloom satisfactorily during the short winter days. C. W.

Ripon, Wis.—The greenhouses operated by H. L. Clapp for the last twenty-three years have been acquired by Brown Bros., owners of a range at Fond du Lac.

There is no substitute for Advance Ventilating Apparatus and Greenhouse Fittings.

Let us explain WHY you should equip your greenhouse with our materials. Our Sash Operating Device is absolutely safe at all times, for it is a self-locking mechanism and absolutely correct in every detail. It is made of the best materials and will last forever. Besides these features, it is easy to operate and very easy to install.

Our Greenhouse Fittings are all cleverly designed and are exceptionally neat and strong. You should use them for the best results.

Our catalogue thoroughly illustrates and describes our entire line of materials and we suggest that you write us for one of these catalogues today. It will be mailed to you promptly, and upon arrival look it over carefully, noting especially the finer points in design and construction.

Remember that we do business on the single price basis to each and every customer. This method assures you of a fair and square transaction, and we guarantee dollar for dollar values. Our co-operation with our customers is of value and we suggest that you write us today, explaining your troubles and ideas on permanently fixing the difficulties. Remember just a card brings our catalogue.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

THE MOST FAMOUS WOMAN FLORIST

Probably no one is better known in the trade in Boston and New England than Mrs. Gill, of Medford, Massachusetts' most famous woman florist. For more than fifty years she grew flowers. Now, at 87 years of age, she is confined to her home, but is none the less interested in the florists' business.

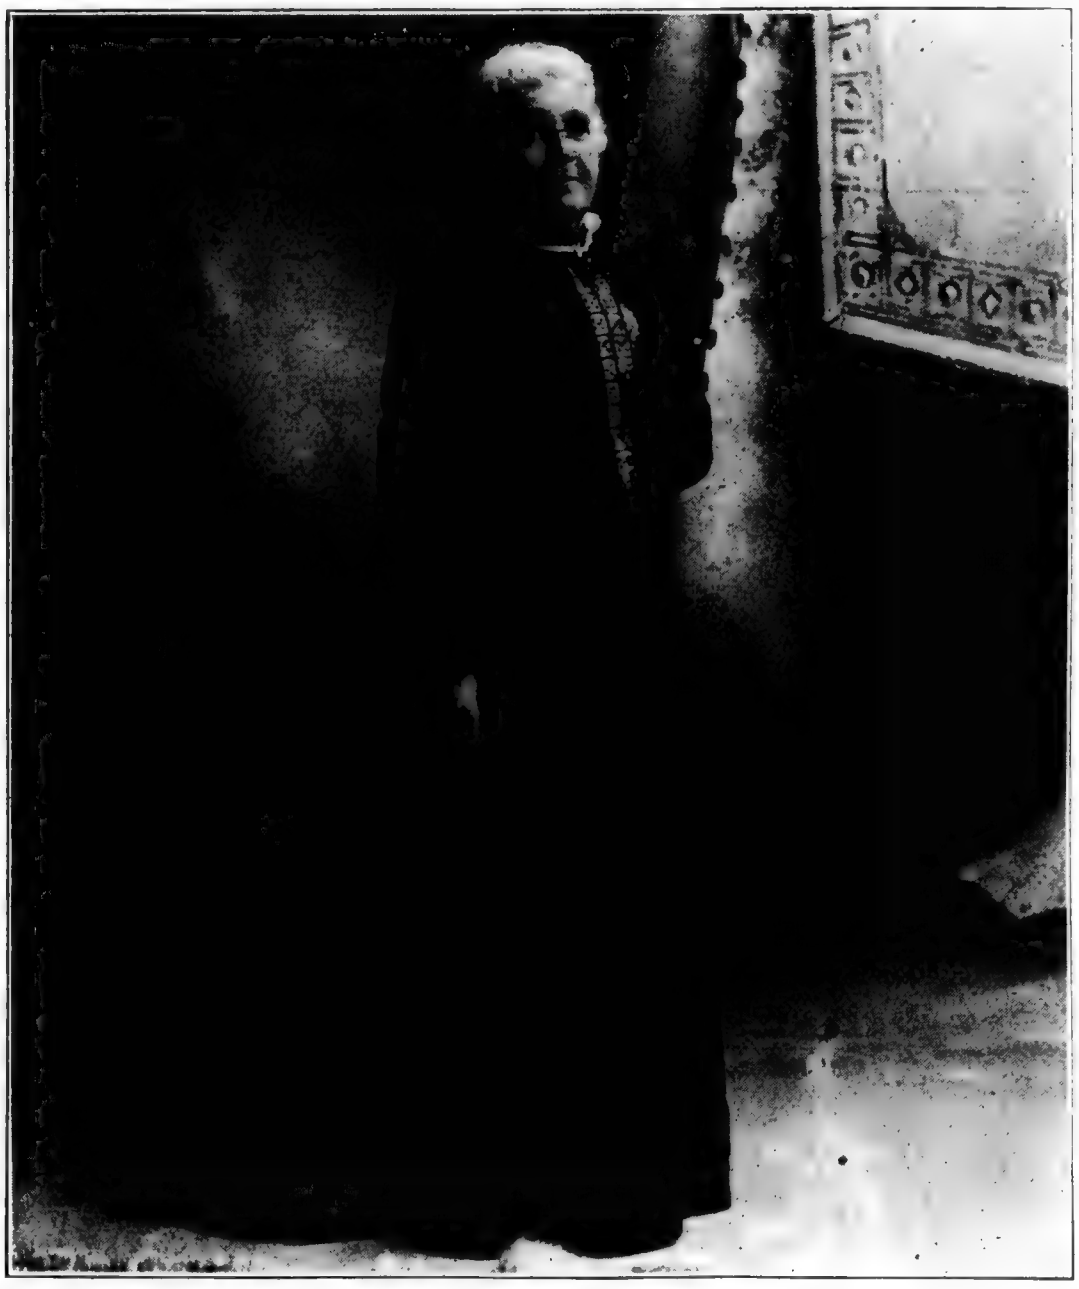
THAT the greatest measure of success comes to him who is in love with his work is exemplified in the career of Mrs. Ellen M. Gill, of Medford, Mass. For more than forty-five years Mrs. Gill grew flowers for the Medford and Boston markets. Now, although confined to her room by the infirmities of age—she was 87 years old June 28—Mrs. Gill still is intensely interested in the florists' profession and confidently expects that she will recover her strength sufficiently to again visit Horticultural hall, Boston, where she was a regular exhibitor for half a century.

Probably no one interested in the growing of flowers and plants and in the societies that are promoting the production of good stock, is better known in Boston and New England than Mrs. Gill. Beginning as an amateur in 1860, her success with flowers was so great that she gradually enlarged her activities until 1870, when she built the first of her four greenhouses at Medford and began to grow for the market.

First with Freesias.

Mrs. Gill is said to have been the first grower to supply the Boston market with freesias. She also was among the first to produce violets indoors and in coldframes, which stock she sold to Boston retailers. Novelties appealed to Mrs. Gill and many varieties of new stock that appeared in the Boston stores came from her greenhouses.

Such was her success as a pioneer grower and exhibitor that on both her seventieth and eightieth birthdays the Massachusetts Horticultural Society gave receptions in her honor and on the latter date she was made a life member. She also has been elected an honorary member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, and of the Ladies' Society of American Florists.



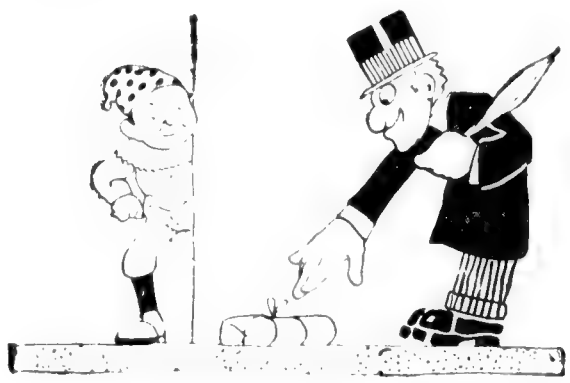
A Native Bostonian.

Mrs. Gill was born in Boston June 28, 1830, a member of the Bowditch family, which traced its ancestry from John Alden and Richard Warren of the Mayflower time. In 1849, when she was 19 years old, she married George Gill. They began their married life at Melrose and moved to Medford in 1854. It was there that her natural ability to grow flowers first had an opportunity to express itself and when, in 1860, she and her husband purchased what is now the family home and greenhouse range at 28 Ashland street, that opportunity became greater and she improved it.

In a short time the half-acre of ground about this home became noted for its flower gardens. Year after year Mrs. Gill gained greater fame as a grower and in 1865 she was admitted to membership in the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and sent some of the products of her garden to the society's exhibitions.

It was to enable her to grow higher class stock that, in 1870, Mrs. Gill built the first of the four greenhouses upon her place. That, too, was the beginning of her long career as a commercial grower.

After experimenting with what was at that time expensive stock, Mrs. Gill discovered that commercial success lay in specialization in stock that was in demand. She threw out her mixed stock of stephanotis, allamanda, lapageria and other plants of a like character and began to grow roses, carnations and callas. Violets, too, Mrs. Gill discovered, could be grown at a profit, although few florists grew them at that time.



Mrs. Ellen M. Gill, America's First Woman Florist.

Boston's Best Violets.

Mrs. Gill delights in telling anecdotes regarding her early career as a professional grower. A neighbor, seeking violets in a Boston store, remarked that she could not buy the flowers in her home town of Medford.

"Madam," replied the florist, "the best violets I sell come from Mrs. Gill, of Medford."

Another time a neighbor remarked that she had seen an odd flower in a window in Boston and suggested to Mrs. Gill that she ought to see it and add it to her collection. Mrs. Gill had the satisfaction of telling the neighbor that she was the first to grow the flower for the Boston market and had sold the stock described to

Boston's Best Violets.

Mrs. Gill delights in telling anecdotes regarding her early career as a professional grower. A neighbor, seeking violets in a Boston store, remarked that she could not buy the flowers in her home town of Medford.

"Madam," replied the florist, "the best violets I sell come from Mrs. Gill, of Medford."

Another time a neighbor remarked that she had seen an odd flower in a window in Boston and suggested to Mrs. Gill that she ought to see it and add it to her collection. Mrs. Gill had the satisfaction of telling the neighbor that she was the first to grow the flower for the Boston market and had sold the stock described to the florist who was exhibiting it as a part of his window display.

As business grew Mrs. Gill enlarged her greenhouse establishment until she had four houses, none of which was so large as is now commonly built. Besides the calls for stock for Boston trade, the people of Medford began to depend upon Mrs. Gill for their flower wants. She had a natural instinct for flower arrangement and for many years made up funeral designs, wedding bouquets and decorations and baskets for other occasions.

Freesias proved to be one of Mrs. Gill's most profitable crops. Before this stock was generally known to the Boston market, a friend gave Mrs. Gill some of the bulbs. She was successful as a grower of freesias and sold the first blooms in Boston. She also did a considerable business in the bulbs.

Enjoyed Her Garden.

Marechal Niel was the first hybrid rose Mrs. Gill grew indoors, but other varieties later were added. But it was her outdoor stock, which might be termed her first loves, that Mrs. Gill usually spoke of with the greatest interest. In describing her place she said:

"My garden has given great pleasure to me and others also, being, as you might say, an old-fashioned one, planted in no formal style—just a profusion of bloom, a mingling of color.

"I have many peonies, some of the famous Richardson seedlings, 300 or more hybrid rose bushes, phloxes, delphiniums, irises, poppies, lilies of the valley and such annuals as asters, salvias, mignonette, cosmos, salpiglossis, centaureas and a collection of hollyhocks and dahlias, besides. I would advise anyone who has a garden to cultivate the yellow Scotch rose. The one in my garden was on the place when I went there fifty-five years ago."

Besides cut flowers, Mrs. Gill grew pot plants for the spring trade. Much of her stock was sold in Medford, but considerable found its way into the Boston market. For many years the men employed by Mrs. Gill would make two or three trips a week to Boston with a wagon-load of plants, which were sold in the market near Faneuil hall. Cut flowers Mrs. Gill usually handled personally and during several years she was a well known figure at her stall in the Boston market, besides supplying several retail stores.

Greenhouses Invaded by Deer.

Growers who have lost glass by either hail or wind will appreciate an odd experience of Mrs. Gill's many years ago. A wild doe ran through two of her greenhouses, doing considerable damage to a bed of violets and breaking so much glass that the $50 paid her by the Great and General Court of Massachusetts came far from recompensing her for the damage done.

Of the florists' business, Mrs. Gill said: "The pleasure of raising flowers is not alone for one's self. No more acceptable gift for the sick, the sorrowing or the poor can be sent than a bunch of posies."

So long as she was able to attend to it herself, Mrs. Gill twice each week contributed flowers to the Flower Mission of Boston, which distributed them among the hospitals and unfortunates in that city. Her daughter continues the work.

Mrs. Gill was active in the business until fourteen months ago, when her health forced her to give up the work. Since that time she has been under the care of a nurse and has passed the cares of her business to others. She still enjoys flowers in her room and has gracefully yielded to the idea that she is old and must be taken care of.

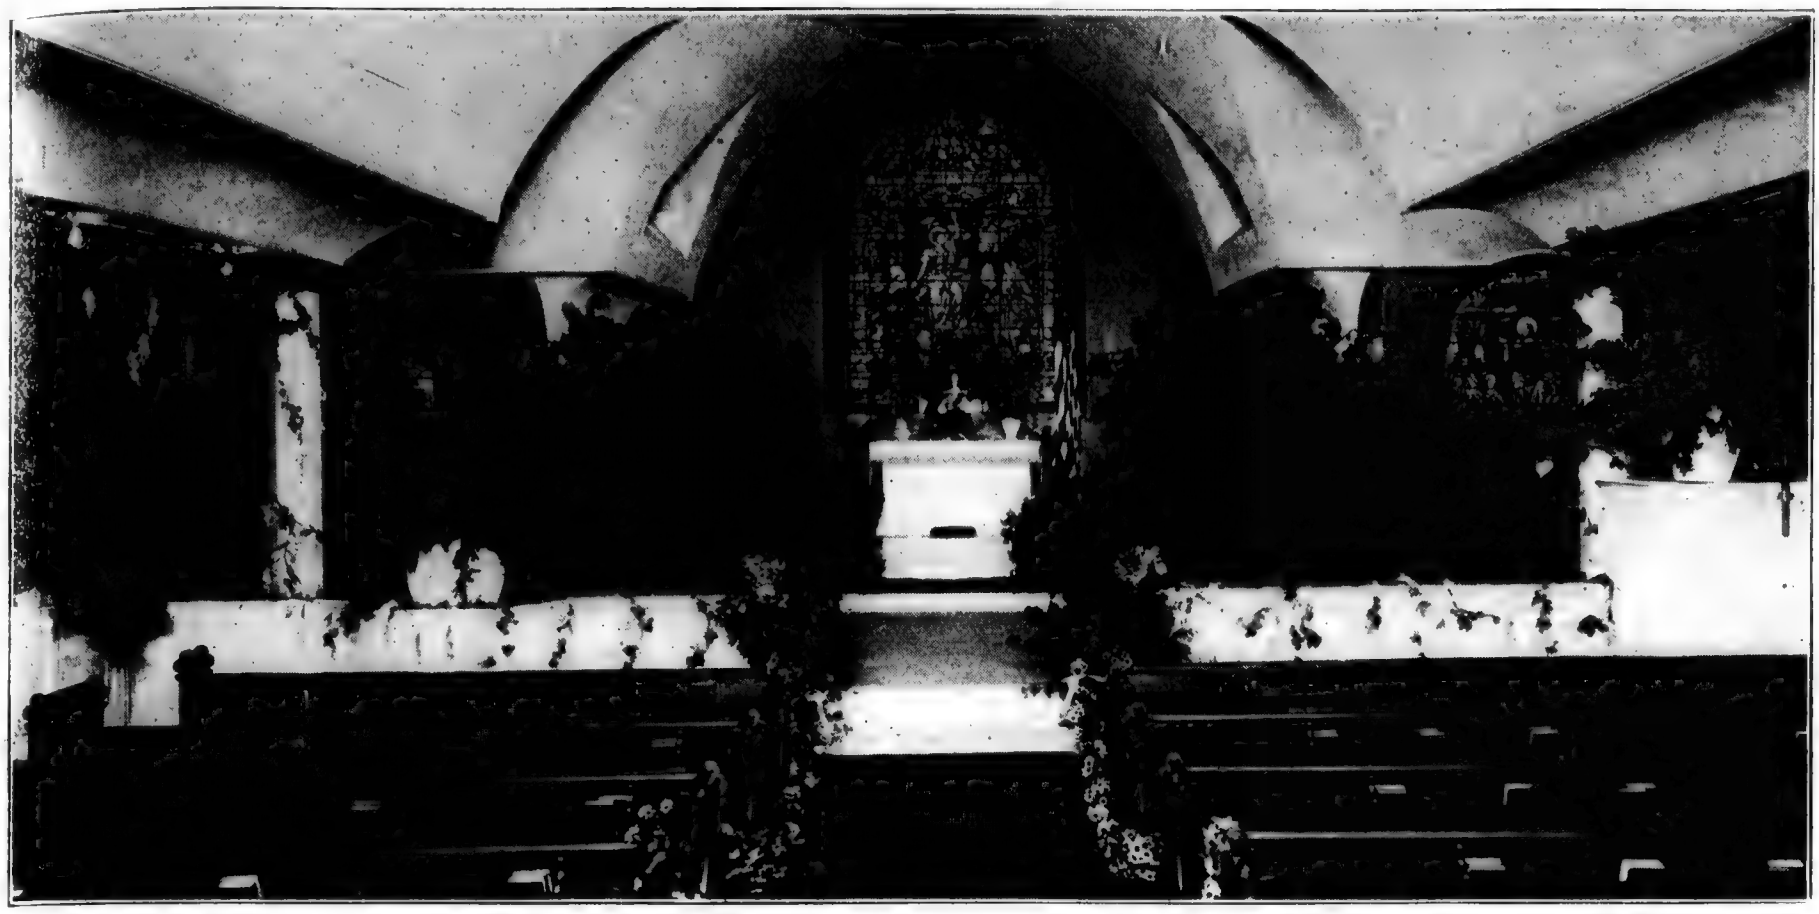
QUINN'S BIG WEDDING ORDER.

One of the largest wedding decoration orders of the season in the neighborhood of Boston was filled during the first week of July by Stephen J. Quinn, of Chestnut street, Brookline, for the wedding of Miss Martha E. Rueter and John G. Hepburne, at the First Unitarian church.

The church, which is massive in architecture and was built in revolutionary times, was completely transformed into a bower of flowers and foliage. The chandeliers were covered with flowers and foliage arranged in ball shapes. The walls, aisles and chancel were decorated with peonies, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, spiræas, palms, bay trees and laurel roping. The rear of the church, as is shown by the illustration on page 11, received the same treatment. More than 1,000 peonies and 1,000 yards of laurel roping were used.



The floral decoration at the bride's home in Jamaica Plain was even more elaborate. There the flowers used were roses with asparagus and Lygodium scandens. A large tent on the lawn was festooned with laurel, while tastefully arranged on the grass were bay trees, laurels and aucubas, making a veritable forest.

Mr. Quinn's artistic work received much commendation from both his customers and their guests.

LICENSES FOR FLORISTS.

I would like to ask through the columns of The Review whether any of the florists of the state of Missouri are paying a license fee for the privilege of doing business in their respective cities; also, what such license is. I always was under the impression that florists who grow their own stock in this state could not be made to pay a city license. I would like to know more about this license business before I pay the city license demanded from the florists here. What do the florists who buy and sell flowers, who operate cut flower stores in the cities in this state, have to pay in the way of a city license? C. H. G.—Mo.

A city's authority to impose license restriction is given by its charter, but in a general way it may be said a city may institute any reasonable restrictions and fees upon the favorable vote of a designated percentage of the city council. There are certain lines of business which long have been recognized as subject to special regulation by license, but the florists' business is not among them and it is not customary, in Missouri or in any other state, to require florists to procure a special license to do business. As the money needs of cities have increased, however, many cities have assessed a tax in the form of a license fee on the businesses of the community; it applies to the hardware merchant, the clothier and the department store as well as the florist and the latter has no special complaint unless the fees are inequitable.

There is another kind of license, however, usually imposed at the request and in behalf of the merchants who pay taxes year after year—it is to keep out the peddlers and itinerant merchants who are here today and gone tomorrow. Such licenses bear upon the florist in accordance with the character of the business he does; if he has a permanent retail store he is almost certain to approve of them, but if his place is outside the corporate limits and he is classed among the peddlers he is apt to look upon such restrictions as interfering with the rights of a freeborn American citizen.

A GIRL'S SUCCESS.

Miss Florence Cadieux is only 22 years of age, but she is making a name for herself in the trade in New York. After serving for two years as artist and decorator for one of the firms on Twenty-eighth street, she set up for herself under the name of the Cadieux Co. Combined with natural ability as a decorator she has the capacity for obtaining business and putting it through to a successful finish.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Kelly Floral Co. has gone into the hands of a receiver. Jules Bourdet, F. A. Windler and August Hummert were named appraisers of the property. The appraisement was made July 16. No report as to the assets or liabilities of the company has been issued.

Fall River, Mass.—J. L. Potter and J. H. Sullivan, commissioners for the estate of the late George L. Freeman, widely known among orchid growers, have filed a return in Probate court showing liabilities of $3,204.09. The account of the administratrix shows no assets for distribution.

WINTER FLOWERS FROM SEED.

I would like to know what to sow in my benches so as to have blooms during January and February. When should the seed be planted? I was thinking of stocks, snapdragons and mignonette, but perhaps you can suggest something better.

C. F. R.—Ore.

Mignonette started now will begin to flower late in October. Snapdragons will give their first crop about Christmas. Sow seeds of the intermediate varieties. They will bloom until the following summer, as will the mignonette. Calendulas sown about September 1 will prove to be a good crop. Such stocks as White and Pink Column and other forcing varieties sown next month would also come in at the time mentioned. Sweet peas, if you have head room for them, are fine winter bloomers. Use the winter-blooming Spencers. The hybrid dimorphothecas may be started in early October for flowering about February 1. Annual larkspurs sown in August will also start to bloom at the same time. Most of these plants like a temperature of 50 degrees at night, but mignonette prefers cooler treatment, so give it the coolest part of the house.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

QUINN'S BIG WEDDING ORDER.

One of the largest wedding decoration orders of the season in the neighborhood of Boston was filled during the first week of July by Stephen J. Quinn, of Chestnut street, Brookline, for the wedding of Miss Martha E. Rueter and John G. Hepburne, at the First Unitarian church.

The church, which is massive in architecture and was built in revolutionary times, was completely transformed into a bower of flowers and foliage. The chandeliers were covered with flowers and foliage arranged in ball shapes. The walls, aisles and chancel were decorated with peonies, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, spiræas, palms, bay trees and laurel roping. The rear of the church, as is shown b the illustration on page 11, receive the same treatment. More than 1,00 peonies and 1,000 yards of laurel rop ing were used.

The floral decoration at the bride' home in Jamaica Plain was even mor elaborate. There the flowers used were roses with asparagus and Lygo dium scandens. A large tent on th lawn was festooned with laurel, whil tastefully arranged on the grass were bay trees, laurels and aucubas, making a veritable forest.

Mr. Quinn's artistic work received much commendation from both his cus tomers and their guests.

LICENSES FOR FLORISTS.

I would like to ask through the col umns of The Review whether any of the florists of the state of Missouri are paying a license fee for the privilege of doing business in their respective cities; also, what such license is. I always was under the impression that florists who grow their own stock in this state could not be made to pay a city license. I would like to know more about this license business before I pay the city license demanded from the florists here. What do the florists who buy and sell flowers, who operate cut flower stores in the cities in this state, have to pay in the way of a city li cense? C. H. G.—Mo.

A city's authority to impose license restriction is given by its charter, but in a general way it may be said a city may institute any reasonable restrictions and fees upon the favorable vote of a designated percentage of the city council. There are certain lines of business which long have been recognized as subject to special regulation by license, but the florists' business is not among them and it is not customary, in Missouri or in any other state, to require florists to procure a special license to do business. As the money needs of cities have increased, however, many cities have assessed a tax in the form of a license fee on the businesses of the community; it applies to the hardware merchant, the clothier and the department store as well as the florist and the latter has no special complaint unless the fees are inequitable.

There is another kind of license, however, usually imposed at the request and in behalf of the merchants who pay taxes year after year—it is to keep out the peddlers and itinerant merchants who are here today and gone tomorrow. Such licenses bear upon the florist in accordance with the character of the business he does; if he has a permanent retail store he is almost certain to approve of them, but if his place is outside the corporate limits and he is classed among the peddlers he is apt to look upon such restrictions as interfering with the rights of a freeborn American citizen.

A GIRL'S SUCCESS.

Miss Florence Cadieux is only 22 years of age, but she is making a name for herself in the trade in New York. After serving for two years as artist and decorator for one of the firms on Twenty-eighth street, she set up for herself under the name of the Cadieux Co.

Combined with natural ability as decorator she has the capacity for obtaining business and putting it through to a successful finish.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Kelly Floral Co. has gone into the hands of a receiver. Jules Bourdet, F. A. Windler and August Hummert were named appraisers of the property. The appraisement was made July 16. No report as to the assets or liabilities of the company has been issued.

Fall River, Mass.—J. L. Potter and H. Sullivan, commissioners for the estate of the late George L. Freeman, widely known among orchid growers, have filed a return in Probate court showing liabilities of $3,204.09. The account of the administratrix shows no assets for distribution.

WINTER FLOWERS FROM SEED.

I would like to know what to sow in my benches so as to have blooms during January and February. When should the seed be planted? I was thinking of stocks, snapdragons and mignonette, but perhaps you can suggest something better.

C. F. R. —Ore.

Mignonette started now will begin to flower late in October. Snapdragons will give their first crop about Christmas. Sow seeds of the intermediate varieties. They will bloom until the following summer, as will the mignonette. Calendulas sown about September 1 will prove to be a good crop. Such stocks as White and Pink Column and other forcing varieties sown next month would also come in at the time mentioned. Sweet peas, if you have head room for them, are fine winter bloomers. Use the winter-blooming Spencers. The hybrid dimorphothecas may be started in early October for flowering about February 1. Annual larkspurs sown in August will also start to bloom at the same time. Most of these plants like a temperature of 50 degrees at night, but mignonette prefers cooler treatment, so give it the coolest part of the house.

WIND STORM AND HAIL

NEW MUTUAL INSURANCE.

All Plans Completed.

On page 18 of The Review for July 12 there is an article with regard to the president of the S. A. F. having appointed a committee to investigate wind storm insurance and report on it at the New York convention. To make matters clear I would like to state a few facts concerning the movement started in Indiana, as I am certain the trade will be interested in knowing how far the details have been worked out.

First of all, we want the readers of The Review to get fixed firmly in their minds that the movement begun here in Indiana is a real live issue. It has assumed concrete form and there is no longer any doubt as to its final success. The State Florists' Association of Indiana has assumed the responsibility and is backing it with its money and influence, acting as trustee until we have perfected the new organization.

Good Lawyers On It.

One of the most expert firms of insurance lawyers in this section, Pickens, Moores, Davidson & Pickens, Indianapolis, has been engaged to draw up the constitution and by-laws along with the policies and other documents. In fact, most of this work has been done and we shall be ready to solicit insurance in a few days.

A considerable sum of money has already been spent and we are assured of ample funds to carry the project to completion. We are incorporating under the laws of Indiana and we propose to comply fully with the laws of this state, which in itself will be a guarantee to prospective policy-holders of the soundness of the insurance they will be asked to buy.

A National Project.

Secondly, this is going to be a movement of national scope. While we are incorporating under the laws of Indiana and the headquarters therefore naturally will be in this state, we propose to write insurance in every state in the Union; in fact, we have already been promised business from growers in almost every section just as soon as we are in a position to write it.

Furthermore, profiting by the experience of other similar organizations, we will write our insurance at such rates as will obviate any feeling that one section is carrying the insurance of another section.

The organization will be mutual and we propose to write insurance at cost, as near as it is possible to do it.

Hail Insurance, Too.

Nearly all of those interested in this movement have carried hail insurance on their glass for many years. Some of them have taken out wind storm insurance in recent years in companies which do not confine their business to greenhouse structures. This latter feature has never been to the liking of the craft in general and there has developed a strong feeling that both hail and wind storm insurance should be supplied by an organization controlled and operated within the trade. This was brought to a head this spring when several large establishments were badly wrecked by a series of storms and it seemed imperative that something should be done in an organized way to assist those who suffered loss in these storms.

Give Credit for Starting Something.

It has never been our idea that a separate organization should be started to carry wind storm risks, but rather that one company should carry both hail and wind storm risks, so that there would never need be any contention over the question of what portion of the loss should be charged against each of these elements. To that end the State Florists' Association of Indiana sent a request to the Florists' Hail Association of America asking it to add the wind storm feature to the hail insurance it is writing, stating plainly that unless a way could be found to do this, we proposed to organize for the purpose of writing insurance which will embrace both of these elements. Our request did not meet with a favorable response, and so we are proceeding to organize for the purpose of supplying what is wanted. That there is plenty of business waiting for us is evidenced on all sides.

As stated above, we are organizing under the laws of Indiana and the State Florists' Association will act as trustee until we get going, but we propose to make it a representative national society, with a directorate scattered over a wide territory, and the only connection Indiana will have with the organization will be the fact that the headquarters will be here and the Indiana society will always be credited with having taken the initiative in a movement which will be a boon to the trade at large.

We shall be grateful for any assistance in the way of endorsement offered by local, state or national organizations after a full investigation of the insurance we will have to offer. The organization will be known as the Florists' Mutual Casualty Association, Incorporated.

Will Start with Million Feet.

The laws of Indiana require us to secure not less than $500,000 worth of risks, which means over a million feet of glass. We are allowing ourselves two months to reach these figures, after which the State Florists' Association of Indiana, as trustee, will turn the business over to the new organization, which will have been perfected.

We feel that we are entitled to kindly consideration at the hands of the trade, because we have gone ahead, putting in our best efforts and our money.

So far no one has pointed out any indication that this project will not meet every need along the line of hail and wind storm insurance.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Mignonette.

Mignonette can be sown now if early flowers in fall are wanted, but, as a matter of fact, the spikes will not come of first-class quality until the coldest part of the winter, when they also sell the best. Mignonette must have cool culture at all times if really fine spikes are wanted. It will grow well in either raised benches or solid beds. Care should be taken not to attempt its culture where heating pipes run below the benches, as mignonette loves a cool, moist soil. For compost a good chrysanthemum or rose soil will answer well, and I find it succeeds well in six inches of soil. It is an advantage to place the soil in the bench a week or two before time for sowing the seeds and give it one or two scratchings over to kill the weeds.

Buy seed of one of the special forcing strains offered by several prominent seedsmen. If the benches are occupied by other crops, start the seeds in small pots, later planting them out a foot apart each way. The same space may be allowed where the seeds are sown directly in the benches. The number of seedlings in each space should be reduced to three. These will need close watching, as green caterpillars, or cabbage worms, are fond of them and will soon clean up a batch of plants. In winter give mignonette a minimum of 42 to 45 degrees and it will come stocky.

Pansies.

It is somewhat early to sow the main batch of pansies to be wintered outdoors, but where they are to be grown under glass the seed can go in at once. Procure the best possible strain; one which gives long stems, in addition to large and attractive flowers, is what is needed. It will be noticed that in a large batch of pansies certain plants carry much longer stems than others. These should, if possible, be lifted and isolated and seed taken from them. Mixed bunches sell fairly well, but those of one decided color go much better. Sow the pansy seed at this early date in a coldframe where it can be watered and shaded; the germination will then be speedier and more certain than when the sowing is done outdoors. For the average grower Giant Trimardeau answers well. This may be had in several colors. A number of American specialists have been working on pansies for some time and now have strains equal in quality to the best European ones.

Late Asters.

Late asters should go out in the field as soon as the weather will permit. A cool, moist day is ideal for planting. When the planting is completed, stir the ground well between the rows with a cultivator. The more frequently the stirring up is done, the better your asters will withstand drought and the more vigorously they will grow. If you have an empty bench, you might do worse than to plant it with late asters of the American Branching. Asters under glass are becoming quite common and, if last year is to be any criterion, prices will average good for the season.

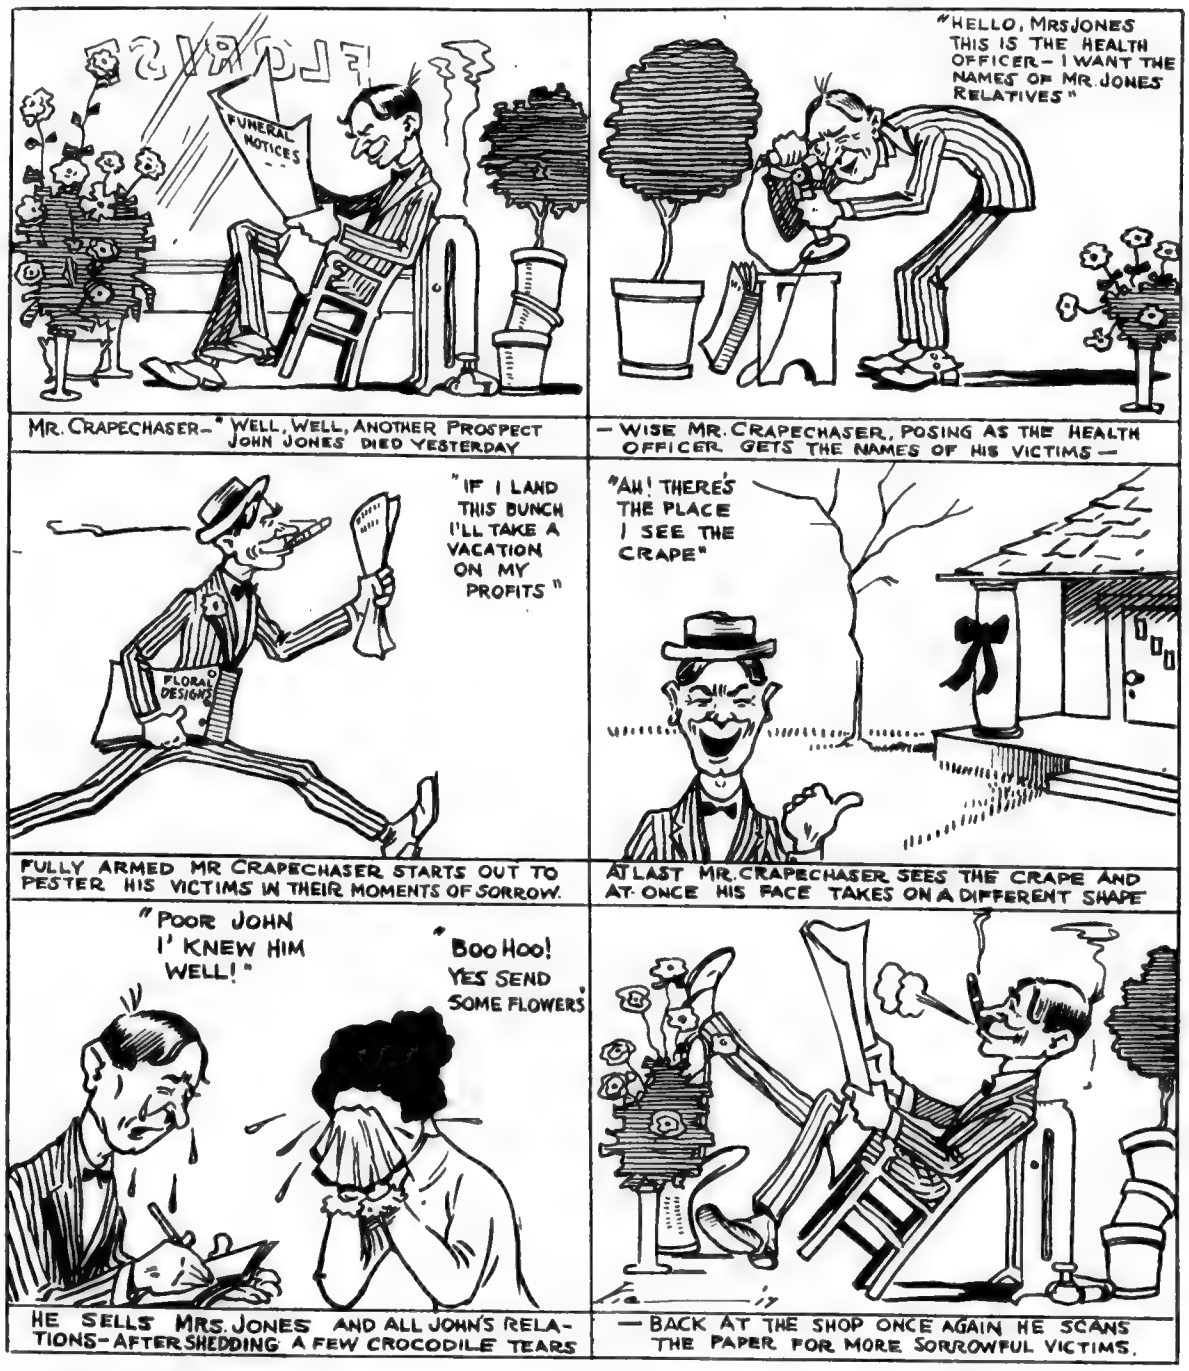
Hardy Roses.

Do not neglect the hardy roses in the field or garden as soon as their heavy crop of flowers is passing. If you want the yield of flowers to be continuous and of good quality, your roses should be fed from time to time through the season. If you have no cow manure, use top-dressings of dried blood, tankage or sheep manure and scratch over the surface before a rain comes along. Liquid cow manure, applied directly after a heavy rain, will prove wonderfully stimulating. Cut away the faded roses and the seeds, and do not overlook the Manetti, brier or other stocks starting from the base of many plants. As soon as ramblers have finished blooming they should be pruned. Cut away the old flowering canes entirely and let the strength go into the young canes that are coming up. Hybrid tea roses outdoors become more popular each year. It is well to remember, however, that some of the hybrid perpetuals are persistent summer bloomers—such sorts, for instance, as Mrs. John Laing, General Jacqueminot, Mrs. Sharman-Crawford and Mme. Gabriel Luizet.

Freesias.

New freesia bulbs now are procurable and a batch should be potted or placed in pans at once if a Christmas crop is wanted. Purity is the freesia par excellence and will come in ahead of refracta alba. I find that by growing it in deep pans eight or ten inches in diameter and planting the bulbs fairly thick the plants will produce stems twenty-four to thirty inches long and be seen at their best. After potting the freesias, stand them in a coldframe and cover the pots with leaves or dry moss. Cover with board shutters, to keep the plants dark and prevent drying out. When growth commences, give the plants full light. Give freesias a light, rather rich soil, with a good dash of sand added, but do not use any chemical fertilizers in the soil.

Winter Begonias.



This is the time of more rapid growth with all the winter-flowering begonias. Do not shade them too heavily. Pick off the flowers as they appear and give the plants the necessary shifts, using a light compost. Soil containing a good deal of half rotted leaf-mold seems to suit these begonias to a nicety. Cuttings of both Cincinnati and Lorraine, put in even as late as this, will make neat little plants in small pots for the holiday trade, and of these small sizes there usually is a shortage.

Genistas.

Give genistas an occasional clipping to keep them shapely. The plants should now be plunged outdoors, and if kept well watered and sprayed over they will make plenty of growth. To the uninitiated it might be well to say that genistas can be planted outdoors and will make remarkable growth in a short time. They cannot be lifted successfully, however; even if they do not die when lifted, they will lose a large part of their foliage. For this reason pot culture is far the best method.

THE CRAPE CHASER

The ubiquitous person who solicits orders for funeral flowers is a thorn in the flesh of florists who believe it is incompatible with the dignity of the business to seek sales in this manner.

EASTER HYDRANGEAS.

I have some hydrangeas ordered for delivery this fall and want to pot them and have them in bloom for Easter. How shall I handle them? I also have 100 baby rambler rose plants potted and set out in coldframes, and I want these in bloom for Easter. They have started to grow nicely. W. C. H.—Pa.

Pot the hydrangeas as soon as they are received. Give them the protection of coldframes or a cold greenhouse, to ripen the wood well. Gradually reduce the water supply and keep the plants just clear of freezing during the winter. The French hydrangeas are much earlier and more satisfactory Easter bloomers than Otaksa, and I would advise you to use them. Start your plants in a temperature of 50 degrees about January 20 and give 60 degrees as the flower heads show. Keep the plants cooler as the heads show color. Hydrangeas need an abundant water supply and enjoy applications of liquid manure when well rooted in their pots.

Keep the baby ramblers plunged to the brims of the pots, water them well and spray them freely. Early in November store them in a dry, frost-proof shed or storehouse, and keep them dried at the root. Start the plants into growth nine or ten weeks before Easter, pruning lightly first. C. W.

GREEN WORMS ON ASTERS.

Please tell me how to destroy the green worm that eats the center leaves of my asters? The worm is about one-half inch in length and does much damage. C. R. L.—N. H.

Try spraying with one of the nicotine extracts, such as Nikoteen, Nico-Fume, Nicoticide, Rose Leaf Extract, Tobakine, etc. I have found that Black Leaf 40, used one part to 600 parts of water, kills caterpillars as well as aphis. C. W.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

THE CONVENTION PROGRAM.

Of More Than Ordinary Interest.

With the convention only one calendar month distant, it is most gratifying to realize that arrangements for the convention garden, the trade exhibition and the convention itself are practically completed, and that there remains only the big attendance, which all the workers confidently expect, to insure that the 1917 convention will be the greatest in the history of the society.

The convention program will be mailed to members this week, and a careful consideration of it will show that there are subjects of most vital importance to come before the convention, subjects which entail action tending toward great benefit to the trade generally.

The promotion of the proposed bureau of credits and collections has been before the executive board, and that body has done what it could to facilitate the commencement of the actual work of promotion. But great ideas, as well as great bodies, move slowly, and it will not be until the project has been thoroughly threshed out in convention that actual work, with full powers conferred by the society, can begin.

The subject, "Publicity for Flowers," will again occupy the attention of the convention. While the full aims of the society have proved to be far from possible along the lines considered, much good work has been done, and it is hoped the subject will be fully discussed, in order that a course of action may be decided upon which shall lead to the results desired.

May Be Danger Here.

There is a rumor that the Interstate Commerce Commission is to be approached by the express companies for a ruling as to whether a delay of twenty-four hours in the delivery of perishable goods should be considered otherwise than reasonable. It goes without saying that a ruling from the standpoint of the express companies would result in much hardship for our growers in the shipment of stock to the markets, and the trade in general would suffer much injury. This matter should receive the serious attention of the convention.

The extension of the sentiment attaching to Mothers' day is another important matter slated for discussion, one in which nearly all branches of the trade are deeply interested.

The report of the National Flower Show committee, to be presented by Chairman George Asmus, will, it is expected, take up the greater part, if not the whole, of one session. The report will demonstrate that the wisdom of doing things on a large scale is unchallengeable, and that immense benefits in the way of publicity for florists' productions naturally follows.

The work of the committee on tariff and legislation will be fully considered and the discussions will be most interesting, especially in view of the fact that certain legislation derogatory to the interests of florists has been deemed sufficiently important to render the engagement of legal counsel absolutely necessary in the stand being made by our society.

Allied Organizations.

The various sectional societies will hold meetings as usual, and in view of the fact that certain of these societies are now coöperating with the S. A. F. in much of its work, these meetings will take on more than usual importance.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery, which is distinctly a section of our society, will hold an important meeting on the first day of the convention, and President William F. Gude and Secretary Albert Pochelon will at this meeting welcome all retail florists who may be in attendance at the convention, whether members or not, in order that the objects and system of the organization may be fully explained to them and the benefit attaching to a membership demonstrated.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

In line with other important work taken up by the society will be a discussion of a project to form a bureau of insurance against storm damage. President Kerr some time ago appointed a committee to consider this important matter, and the report of this committee will be presented at the convention. All florists interested in this subject should surely be in attendance. The Florists' Hail Insurance Association has proved a great success in spite of serious misgivings at the start, and it is possible that a plan for insurance against storm damage can be evolved with equal success.

Many Hospitalities Planned.

"The Florists' Business in Relation to the War," will be another subject for full discussion. Some able speakers will deal with the various phases of the subject and it is expected that much doubt as to the accomplishment of "business as usual" will be dispelled.

Complying with the wishes of the executive board, all organized forms of entertainment for visitors to this convention have been dispensed with, and such entertainment as will be proffered will be largely of a private character, although, perhaps, none the less enjoyable. The New York trade will see to it that hospitality is not wanting and with the many pleasures and attractions at all times to be found in New York, visitors are not likely to greatly miss the functions such as have been in evidence at former conventions.

The Ladies' Society of American Florists will, as is customary, have quarters in the Grand Central Palace, near the secretary's office, where Mrs. Charles H. Maynard, its secretary, will be in attendance to receive members and visitors.

INDIANA FLORISTS MEET.

Discuss Coal and Insurance.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana held its regular meeting July 10 at Castle hall, Indianapolis. There was an unusually large number of members present, and they heard the proposed wind storm insurance and coal questions discussed.

The insurance committee made its final report, after which there was a lengthy discussion of the subject. The Muncie tornado insurance proposition was brought up, and it was decided not to affiliate with that organization. Funds were allowed the committee for expenses incurred.

A proposal that members of the association take stock in a coal mine and thereby get wholesale prices on fuel was turned down. Anders Rasmussen discussed the action of the coal committee of the National Council of Defense. He declared that he believed the prices fixed were too high and suggested that the association get in touch with the members of the council committee in an effort to get a further reduction. The secretary was instructed to correspond with the committee with this end in view.

More Prizes at State Fair.

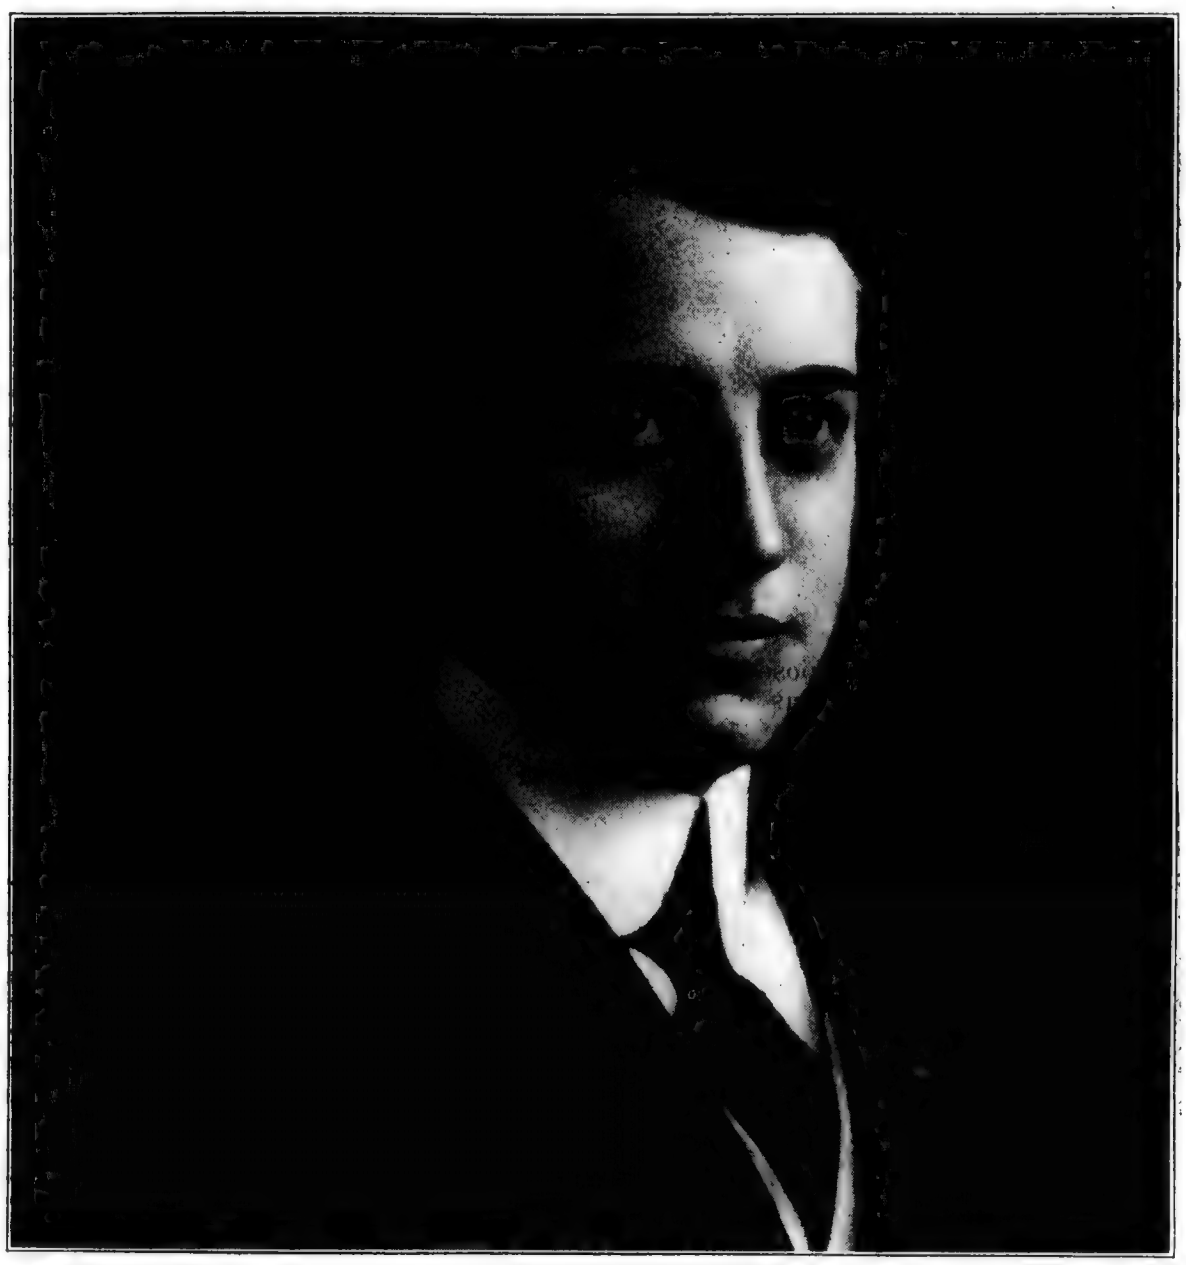
A. F. J. Baur proposed that the association back a flower show at the city conservatory this fall. He said he believed that such an exhibition would be good for the florists of Indianapolis and the state. He also encouraged members to enter stock at the state fair. The amateur classes had been eliminated, he said, and the money heretofore devoted to prizes in this class will now be distributed among the commercial growers. The premium list this year has the following additions to the usual classes:

Crotons in assortment, ten plants, $10 to first; $6 to second; $4 to third.
Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, ten plants, $10 to first; $6 to second; $4 to third.
Lilies, longiflorum type, twelve plants, $10 to first; $6 to second; $4 to third.
Lilies, speciosum rubrum, twelve plants, $10 to first; $6 to second; $4 to third.
Hanging basket, $6 to first; $4 to second; $2 to third.
Wreath on easel, $20 to first; $15 to second; $10 to third.
Display of zinnias, $10 to first; $6 to second; $4 to third.
Twenty-five yellow roses, $7 to first; $5 to second; $3 to third.
Twenty-five assorted roses, $7 to first; $5 to second; $3 to third.
Fifty assorted carnations, $7 to first; $5 to second; $3 to third.

The names of A. H. Nehrling, of Crawfordsville, and Leo J. Rickenbach, of Indianapolis, were proposed for membership. Mr. Kenworthy, of Richmond, was elected a member.

After adjournment a social hour and a splendid dinner at Geiger's were enjoyed. E. E. T.

WHERE HOUSES ARE TOO WARM.



I would like to know a solution of the problem of how to keep greenhouses cool in the summer. We of the south and west can heat our houses, but when it comes to keeping them cool in the summer we are up against it. What plan of construction is best for a summer house? I expect to build this fall and I want a house that will give me a reasonable temperature from May to October. My present house extends east and west and seems cooler than those extending north and south. Am I correct in thinking an east and west house is the cooler? C. C.—Okla.

This is a pertinent question and one that should receive more attention from southern growers. So far as I know, there is not a single artificial arrangement to keep greenhouses cool in summer that in cost is not entirely out of all proportion to the results obtained. We are thus compelled to resort to a style of construction that will best meet this end, but, really, it is not so hard. Of course, if the outside temperature is 100 degrees in the shade we cannot expect a temperature of 80 degrees under glass.

The best house for the south is the narrow one, say twenty feet in width, with almost continuous ventilation on both sides of the ridge, and also side ventilation. Two, or even three, such houses may be joined with iron gutters, but in that event the houses should not run over 100 feet in length, in order to get the full benefit of the open doors or end sash. Two houses, each twenty feet in width, joined together, may cost a little more to build than one house forty feet wide, but the fact that the two narrow houses will have double the amount of top ventilation will more than balance the extra expense. Such houses will grow roses splendidly, even during the hottest months, if the walks are kept well dampened down and the plants sprayed a few times each day. A light shade may also be applied to the roof.

By all means I would advise running the houses north and south, or within a point or two either way. Such houses are decidedly cooler and cause no great amount of discomfort to the workmen. I have worked in houses running east and west where it was crucifying to remain more than half an hour at a time during the hot months, but I have never been seriously inconvenienced working in such houses as I have tried to describe. L.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

VINCENT J. GORLY.

VINCENT J. GORLY has not lived all his life in St. Louis. No, not yet. But the forty years that he has been among the living have been spent there and it is probable, judging the future by past performance, that he will continue to make that city his home for the balance of his allotted time. And there are many hundreds of St. Louisians, both in and out of the trade, who ardently hope so. For Mr. Gorly is the president of Grimm & Gorly, and as such adds to the joys of the consumers by providing the flowers that make their lives more worth the living, incidentally bringing happiness to grower and wholesaler because of the quantity of flowers the Grimm & Gorly customers buy. Mr. Gorly has been in the florists' trade since he was 21 years old. That he has made a success is evidenced by the fact that the firm employs forty persons. His brother, Frank, and sister, Josephine, also are connected with the concern, so it is much of a family affair.

Cambridge, Mass.—E. F. Norberg has leased the McKenzie Greenhouses and will grow a general plant stock. With several years' experience gained at the W. W. Edgar Co. establishment, his success is predicted.

GOOD-BYE!

Thou Good and Faithful Servant.

For a decade Killarney has had a place on the benches of Wendland & Keimel Co., rose growers at Elmhurst, Ill., but the records show that it now is less profitable than other, newer varieties and it has been discarded.

After clearing the last bench of Killarney the company's statistician compiled the following little summary of the ten years' records:

Total number of Killarney plants grown, 1908 to 1917	154,100
Flowers cut	4,283,509
Flowers per plant	27.8
Gross receipts	$187,507.04
Gross per flower	$0.044
Net per flower	0.0372
Gross per plant	1.217
Net per plant	1.0343
Gross per plant in the highest year, 1910-11	1.5181
Gross per plant in the lowest year, 1914-15	0.925

At the foot of these figures W. J. Keimel inscribed, with sentiment akin to regret, the heading of this note, "Good-bye, thou good and faithful servant."

RESTING THE ROSES.

Referring to the reply by H. O. to the inquiry of E. C., Ind., relative to the best method to pursue in drying off roses, in the issue of July 12, I take the liberty of assuming the role of a dissentient in regard to the theory H. O. expounds. My conception of the philosophy of drying off greenhouse roses after a season of activity argues that a complete and not a partial rest is essential. A deep and vigor-renewing sleep, not a light nap.

Botanical theory regarding the biological transition that takes place in trees and shrubs existing in a state of nature in the temperate zone at the time activity of growth is supplanted by dormancy, as I have interpreted it, conclusively demonstrates that defoliation of deciduous plants is a vital part of vegetable economy and must occur annually in order that their destiny's greatest prophecy may be fulfilled.

The leaves, it has been pointed out, as the organs of respiration, digestion and assimilation, in the performance of their functions give rise to the accumulation of waste matter. Their facilities to care for the waste are sufficient for a period of six or seven months, but after that time a purging of the system is necessary. Nature most efficiently administers the purgative by cooling the soil in the autumn, which tends to retard imbibition of moisture by the roots and results in the recession of stored up and unutilized manufactured compounds in the leaf cells, to the branches and stock. When this conservation process is consummated, the leaves, with their residue of waste, commence to fall.

Rose plants existing under artificial conditions in the greenhouse must conform to the fundamental laws of vegetable economy, and as the state of nature demonstrates the great essentiability of dormancy following activity, a rest that terminates in complete defoliation should be afforded them if maximum productivity is desired.

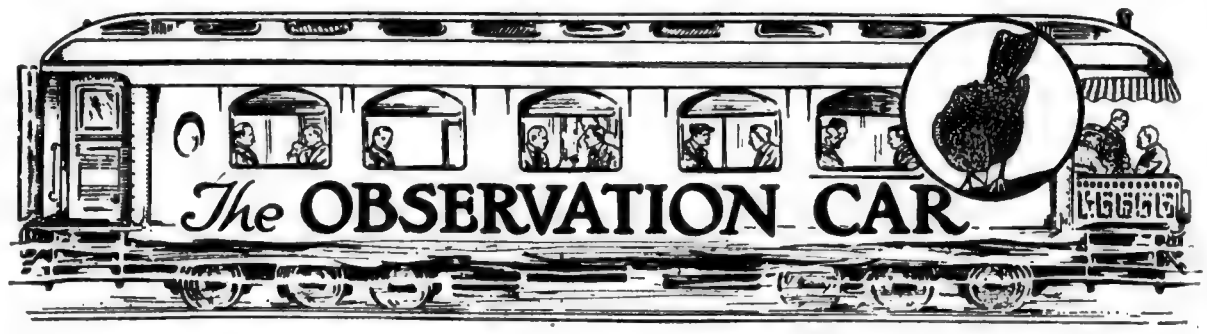
DOINGS AT AMES.

It has been a busy season at the Iowa State College. A herbaceous perennial garden was started this spring and is now coming along nicely. It is laid out in beds twelve feet in width and fifty feet in length, separated by wide grass paths. There are more than 300 different species and varieties included in the garden, the purpose of which is twofold, educational and experimental. Students and interested visitors will have an opportunity to become acquainted with our fine, hardy garden flowers, and the garden will also serve as a means of determining the relative hardiness of the various species here in Iowa.



Some eight acres of ground have been devoted to vegetables, and a portion of the field has been equipped with the Skinner system of irrigation.

OTAKSA LEAVES TURN WHITE.

I am enclosing a Hydrangea otaksa leaf that has turned white. A number of my plants are affected this way and some of them have died. These are planted outside and stay out all winter. Some are planted in soil that is naturally hard, while some are in looser ground. In both locations a number of the plants remain green. Please tell me what to do for these plants? C. E. B.—Del.

The most probable cause of the leaves dying is lack of moisture at the roots. Perhaps the soil is more shallow where the affected plants are growing. I could not see any disease marks on the leaf sent. Occasionally mildew will whiten the foliage of hydrangeas. In that case sulphur should be dusted over the plants attacked or they should be sprayed with a fungicide containing sulphur. C. W.

Mansfield, O.—Stuhldreher Bros. are adding a greenhouse, 40x112, to their range at Lexington and Cline avenues. Increased business has made the addition necessary. It will be planted to chrysanthemums. The new house increases the firm's range to 35,000 feet of glass.

Perhaps the most interesting news in this issue of The Review is contained in the letter of A. F. J. Baur, stating the steps taken by Indiana florists to organize the Florists' Mutual Casualty Association, to write both hail and wind storm insurance.

A suit for $25,000 damages has been started against Timothy Smith, the Clevelander, the complainant alleging that his skull was fractured when the automobile in which he was riding was struck by a car said to have been in charge of Mr. Smith's son. It pays to carry liability insurance on the car.

Born with a horseshoe in his hand, was J. M. Johnston, of McKeesport, Pa., for Mr. Johnston is one of the lucky few who have a strangle hold on the high cost of coal. Mr. Johnston possesses such a precious thing as a coal mine on his place, and since opening it this summer the mine has produced enough coal for his needs and a surplus, which the florist-miner is selling. The high prices of coal look different to Mr. Johnston than they do to most of us.

Friday, the thirteenth, the day of the double hoodoo, made good its threat of bad luck by bringing a hail storm to Greencastle, Ind. The hail stones were as large as hens' eggs, say John Eitel & Son, who lost 1,650 feet of glass and about $2,000 worth of stock.

The good-fellowship prevailing among florists is manifest in the contributions by florists of $209 in cash and quantities of stock to help A. D. King, of Mattoon, Ill., reëstablish himself. The King greenhouse range and home were completely destroyed by the tornado of May 26.

Speaking of tire bills, road maps and long-distance records, there is the case of Walter R. Siebrecht, of New York, who has departed on his second trans-continental auto tour to California. This ocean-to-ocean marathon was started from Coney Island, and the New Yorker's dust now should be discernible on the western edge of the central states. Mr. Siebrecht is accompanied by Clarence Slinn, another intrepid Twenty-eighth streeter.

METHODS OF PROPAGATION.

[This is the fourth installment of extracts from a paper read by T. D. Hatfield, of Wellesley, Mass., at a meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The fifth will appear in an early issue.]

Relation of Stock and Scion.

There is one essential that must never be lost sight of and that is, the stock and scion must be in about the same state of activity; it is probably better if the stock is a little ahead of the scion. Even though they be dormant, both should be evenly matched when working them.

For indoor grafting the roots of the stock must be active, even though the plant has otherwise made little growth. It is well, too, that the scions be brought in a little time before being worked, so as to get some life into them.

As to which method is adopted, that depends on the time of the year, the kind of plant, the condition of the stock and scion and the object in view. Whatever is done, it will take time and experience to succeed. Indoor grafts, excepting conifers, may be waxed over, tied up in bundles, and packed away in sphagnum moss until united. Outdoor grafting should be done in spring, near the ground level, and earthed up. There will be no need to wax them over. Dormant stock grafted indoors in winter may be stored in moist soil or sand until the time comes for planting them out.

Generally one must graft like on like, but there are exceptions, for we are not limited to the same species or even genus. Some plants are increased in vigor by the use of a stronger-growing species or variety for a stock, and the reverse may happen.

Own-root and Grafted Roses.

No better illustration of the effect of stock on scion could be given than the rose. Most roses could be easily got on their own roots by cuttings or layers. Tea and hybrid tea roses grafted or budded on the Manetti attain more vigor than when on their own roots and this is the universal practice now. Roses grafted or budded on the English brier, which has a distinct period of winter rest, do not force so well as when on the Manetti, which grows more or less all the time. On the contrary, roses on the brier are better for outdoor planting.

The Paradise apple stock is used for dwarfing apples. For dwarfing pears a different genus, cydonia, is used. Although the apple and pear belong to the same genus, they cannot be successfully grafted on each other.

The hawthorn evidently has an unusually affinity with several members of the pomifera or apple group. Pears, cotoneasters and mespilus can be grafted on it, all different genera. From a shoot near the union between the hawthorn and the mespilus has arisen what is known as a graft hybrid, named crataego-mespilus, intermediate in character between the two parents. Cytisus can be grafted on caragana, lilacs on privet, and there are other anomalous cases.

Stocks for Fruit Trees.

Plums may be grafted on peaches, and peaches on plums. For light soils and in the south, peach stock is preferred. For heavier soils and in the north, plum stock is preferred. European peaches and plums may be grafted on the native Prunus americana stock.

The scions of dwarf stocks should be kept above ground. When planted, there is a chance that the annual layers of growth may overlap and, eventually reaching the ground and rooting, may put the plant on its own roots and the dwarfing may be lost. This happened on an estate not far from Boston, where the fillers, dwarfs or supposed to be, got on their own roots and their value as such was lost. Attaining normal size, they crowded the permanent trees and had to be cut out prematurely.

HAIL AT GREENCASTLE, IND.

A hail storm struck Greencastle, Ind., July 13, and destroyed 1,650 feet of glass on the range of John Eitel & Son. Damage to stock was estimated at $2,000. A field of 6,000 carnation plants was ruined. Farm crops also were badly damaged.

The storm lasted half an hour, during which hailstones like the proverbial ones, "as large as hens' eggs," were picked up. This was the first hail storm that ever had visited the Eitel range.

Eitel & Son report that they had a good season and their other stock looks good.

ADVERTISING ILLINOIS MEET.

As a means of interesting the amateurs in the flower show to be held in connection with the fall meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Galesburg November 6 and 7, I. L. Pillsbury, president of the association, and H. F. Drury, both of Galesburg, are giving chrysanthemum plants to the children of that city. Premiums will be awarded for the best plants grown by the boys and girls and each one making an exhibit will be given a free ticket for the show.

With the printed announcement of this opportunity for the Galesburg amateurs are instructions for growing chrysanthemum plants. Mr. Pillsbury says that this method is used with the idea of "starting the ball rolling for the big flower show." By giving plants to the children it is expected that a great many people of the city will become interested in the show and meeting.

Mr. Pillsbury also asks that all the florists of the state remember the dates, prepare to exhibit some stock at the show and arrange to attend, as the officers want to make the Galesburg meeting the largest in the history of the association.

FALL SHOW AT DES MOINES.

Approximately $2,500 are to be awarded to winning exhibitors in the autumn flower show of the Iowa florists, which will be held at Des Moines, November 7 to 10. It is expected that the premiums will attract entries not only from Iowa florists, but also from florists of the neighboring states, the eighty-five classes comprising twenty classes for cut mums, thirteen for roses and ten for carnations, in addition to those for flowering and foliage plants, decorative work and nursery stock.

A number of special classes now being planned will be contained in the schedule, which will be ready for distribution August 1. Copies may be had by addressing J. S. Wilson, show manager, Des Moines, Ia.

GOOD-BYE!

Thou Good and Faithful Servant.

For a decade Killarney has had a place on the benches of Wendland & Keimel Co., rose growers at Elmhurst, Ill., but the records show that it now is less profitable than other, newer varieties and it has been discarded.

After clearing the last bench of Killarney the company's statistician compiled the following little summary of the ten years' records:

Total number of Killarney plants grown, 1908 to 1917	154,100
Flowers cut	4,283,509
Flowers per plant	27.8
Gross receipts	$187,507.04
Gross per flower	$0.044
Net per flower	0.0372
Gross per plant	1.217
Net per plant	1.0343
Gross per plant in the highest year, 1910-11	1.5181
Gross per plant in the lowest year, 1914-15	0.925

At the foot of these figures W. J. Keimel inscribed, with sentiment akin to regret, the heading of this note, "Good-bye, thou good and faithful servant."

RESTING THE ROSES.

Referring to the reply by H. O. to the inquiry of E. C., Ind., relative to the best method to pursue in drying off roses, in the issue of July 12, I take the liberty of assuming the role of a dissentient in regard to the theory H. O. expounds. My conception of the philosophy of drying off greenhouse roses after a season of activity argues that a complete and not a partial rest is essential. A deep and vigor-renewing sleep, not a light nap.

Botanical theory regarding the biological transition that takes place in trees and shrubs existing in a state of nature in the temperate zone at the time activity of growth is supplanted by dormancy, as I have interpreted it, conclusively demonstrates that defoliation of deciduous plants is a vital part of vegetable economy and must occur annually in order that their destiny's greatest prophecy may be fulfilled.

The leaves, it has been pointed out, as the organs of respiration, digestion and assimilation, in the performance of their functions give rise to the accumulation of waste matter. Their facilities to care for the waste are sufficient for a period of six or seven months, but after that time a purging of the system is necessary. Nature most efficiently administers the purgative by cooling the soil in the autumn, which tends to retard imbibition of moisture by the roots and results in the recession of stored up and unutilized manufactured compounds in the leaf cells, to the branches and stock. When this conservation process is consummated, the leaves, with their residue of waste, commence to fall.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

HYBRIDIZING CUCUMBERS.

Can you tell me how to cross the English frame cucumber, Telegraph, with Vickery Forcing, an improved White Spine, to produce the hybrid cucumber for greenhouse use? The hybrid is supposed to have the good qualities of both, being well shaped and a heavy cropper. Any information in regard to this will be appreciated.

N. C. N.—Kan.

Pick off a male flower of the Telegraph and strip away the petals, leaving only the central part of the flower. Fertilize with this a female flower or flowers of the Vickery White Spine type; the female flowers produce the fruit. Protect the fertilized flower or flowers with fine gauze to prevent fertilization by bees or other outside agents. It is a safe plan to protect the flowers to be fertilized before they are open; then you are sure your cross is not interfered with. It would be best to fertilize the flowers on one or two plants and to remove all the fruits from these except the ones you have fertilized, to allow the fruits to reach their best development. A vice versa cross would probably give similar results. C. W.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

As we are well into the third week of July, business has a right, so to speak, to be a trifle slow. Although during the second week the retailer had nothing but rain to contend with, so far July is said to compare favorably with the same month of many previous years.

There is an abundant supply of everything in the market; in fact, in some instances there is an oversupply. An exception should be made of good American Beauties. These are few, but Russell and Francis Scott Key readily replace them. The Killarneys have succumbed to mildew, but there are plenty of others to fill the gap. Carnations have held up exceptionally well, a condition attributed to the cool weather. Sweet peas are available in quantities, but many of them are inferior. Delphiniums, mignonette, snapdragons and calendulas arrive in large consignments and seem to clear daily, though how is difficult to say. The greens situation has improved.

Various Notes.

Tracy Dickinson, who has been associated with L. C. Stroh & Sons, of Batavia, has enlisted in a military band at Syracuse. Walter Stroh was in town last week.

Henry Wise, who has been manager for the Erie Floral Co. for the last twelve years, has tendered his resignation since the recent change in ownership from the Kasting Co. Mr. Wise was a successful manager, and had his share of difficulties to overcome.

The Buffalo Florists' Club will hold its annual outing at Smith's grove, Genesee street and Union road, July 25. Picnickers should take the Genesee street car to the city line, and from there take the Depew car. The grounds are a five minutes' walk from the car line. A. E.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

The demand for good stock fluctuates, being good one day and poor the next. Gladioli, lilies, roses, carnations and perennials are about the only flowers in the market. Gladioli sell best, with roses close seconds. There is an abundance of stock, especially the poorer grade, much of which is sold on the streets.

No one, however, is complaining about business, which is at least as good as during the summer months of other years. There has been considerable funeral work during the last two weeks.

Various Notes.

James B. Masson has purchased a new delivery automobile. He has his houses all planted and everything in readiness for the season. Mr. Masson says he has been exceptionally busy with funeral work.

W. J. Barnes has been busy with funeral work.

Ray Sturgeon has sold about all his stock. He will retire from the greenhouse business and go on a farm.

The growers are busy getting their places ready for fall. E. D. Ellsworth has his houses at Forest lake planted and R. S. Brown & Son are fast getting their houses into shape.

The Stockdale greenhouses have been doing a big business in young chrysanthemum plants.

S. Bryson Ayres is sending in a lot of good sweet peas. His gladioli also are good.

T. J. Noll & Co. report that business continues good. They have been shipping large orders recently.

Henry Kusik soon will leave for Chicago and Milwaukee en route to Colorado. W. J. B.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Mark A. Cassidy, of M. A. Cassidy & Co., who was badly injured by the overturning of an automobile in which he was riding, about a month ago, returned to his office last week.

According to the annual assessments, the Budlong Rose Co. has an excess of $64,632, which is taxed for $258.52.

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. O'Connor last week arrived at the Mathewson, Narragansett Pier, for the season.

Archie Serro, an employee at the Koppelman greenhouses, East Providence, was struck by an automobile last week as he rode out of a lane near the greenhouses on his way home. He suffered a fracture of the collar bone.

Harry Swanson has been taking a few days' respite from business with friends at Shawomet beach.

Earl Smith, of Pawtucket, is enjoying short trips about New England in his new automobile. W. H. M.

POEHLMANN PROGRESS.

The old-time florist, whose memories of the trade reach back over the last score of years, cannot but be impressed when he contrasts in his mind the business establishments of today with what they have been in even the quite recent past. And this improvement has not been confined to any one branch or department, but has included all sections of the trade. As the retailer grew, his needs increased proportionately and many supply houses sprang up to cater to his wants. Starting in a small way, many of these supply businesses have grown steadily until they are establishments of no mean proportions.

The accompanying illustration shows a portion of the supply department display room of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, recently opened. This occupies a space of about 5,000 square feet and is adjacent to the company's wholesale cut flower store. Begun in a small way about five years ago, this department has grown to large proportions and the opening of the new display room marks another station in this march onward. The department is under the management of T. E. Waters.

Oneco, Fla.—Arthur James, for thirty years a florist of Pittsburgh, Pa., has begun work here on a fernery, on a tract of sixty acres. Mr. James at first will specialize in the various types of nephrolepis, which he will wholesale in the northern markets. Later he expects to grow asparagus, crotons and rubber plants.

OBITUARY

Ludwig Teweles.

The veteran seedsman of Milwaukee, Ludwig Teweles, president of the L. Teweles Seed Co., and for fifty-three years prominent in the trade, died last week from heart failure, at the age of 76. He is survived by five sons, Hugo, Arthur, Max, Oscar and Edwin, who will continue the business, and a daughter, Mrs. H. Herz, of New York.

Alice Josephine Miller.

One of the first women florists of the south, Alice J. Miller, who conducted a store in Louisville, Ky., for the last thirty-five years, died suddenly last week from heart failure. Miss Miller was found dead at the rear of her home, and apparently had been on her way to open the store. She was 61 years of age and had been in failing health for some time. Two brothers and four sisters survive her.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

Business has been fair and the supply of stock has been moved. There has been an abundance of lilies, which have been in demand for funeral work. Those of good quality sell at from $6 to $8 per hundred. Roses are above the average summer quality. The supply is adequate, with prices ranging from $2 to $6 per hundred. Gladioli are popular and there has not been a supply sufficient for the demand. They bring $5 to $6 per hundred. Snapdragons also are in demand. Good quality flowers sell at $1 to $2 per hundred. Sweet peas and Shasta daisies are important items now. Dahlias are beginning to make their appearance, but not in quantities.

Delphinium temporarily is out of the market, the first crop having been exhausted and the second not ready. Asters are in, but are of poor quality. Prices range from $1.50 to $2.50 per hundred. There is the usual supply of outdoor flowers. Good fancy ferns are in the market. Plumosus and Sprengeri are scarce and smilax is of inferior quality.

Various Notes.

E. A. Nelson's automobile was in another accident, but the occupants of the machine were not hurt.

Bert Stanley and Carl Glaubke have been cutting some fine hardy stock.

Blasting for a sewer in the street near the establishments of John Grande and John Grande, Jr., did considerable damage to their glass.

M. A. Barick, of Seymour, Ind., reports that he speedily is getting his greenhouses in shape. They were badly damaged recently by a hail storm. This was the third time hail has hit his place.

Robert Fohl has been cutting excellent Shasta daisies, some of which were five inches in diameter.

Claude Griffith is away on a short vacation.

There had been a drought on the south side during three weeks, while on the north side there had been quantities of rain. However, a steady downpour brought relief to the stock on both sides last week.

Frank Harriott, who until recently was a grower of hardy stock, is now a cook at the army camp at Fort Harrison.

Mr. Dudderstadt, with A. Wiegand's Sons Co., recently lost his little son. The trade extends its sympathy.

Help is scarce, the army camp at Fort Harrison having taken most of the men available. E. E. T.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

During the last week the flower market has been in a hopeless condition, and it seems likely to continue so for at least a couple of weeks. The main reason for this condition is the belated arrival of outdoor flowers, which were just about three weeks later than usual. Ordinarily the glut of outdoor stock prevails about the middle of June, when weddings and commencements call for a large portion of the stock. Now large quantities of the flowers are here and consequently much greenhouse stock is not purchased.

The markets and stores are quiet places these days. Apart from the ordinary run of business, there is little funeral work to help to move the flowers. Roses are in large supply, but the greater part of them are short. Ophelia and Sunburst move well. Prices are considerably lower than they were and good stock can be bought for $2 to $3 per hundred. There is a quantity of Harrisii lilies, and these are offered at low prices to clear. Large spikes of gladioli reach the market and move easily. Candytuft and gypsophilas are brought to the market in quantities. There is an abundance of good sweet peas, which are cleared at low summer prices. Carnations are extremely plentiful and bring about $1 per hundred for the best flowers. Large Shasta daisies sell well, but there is no special demand for orchids. Japanese irises are plentiful and come in handy for window displays. The market is well stocked with all kinds of seasonable greens.

Various Notes.

Hugo Teute has a large crop of carnations that hangs on account of the dull business. He is moving many chrysanthemum plants, most of the orders coming from out-of-town patrons.

Frank Peartree and Leo Mahoney, employees of George T. Boucher, are on their vacations. Mr. and Mrs. Boucher and children are on an automobile trip to Evanston, Ill. They will be away for about two weeks.

The net proceeds of the Rochester peony exhibition recently held at Convention hall in aid of the Red Cross were about $161.

Charles W. Curtis is cutting some fine sweet peas, with good, long stems. If everything goes well he expects to have about 20,000 gladioli this year.

John Orgar, of Irondequoit, is growing some topnotch outdoor bachelor's buttons. His carnations, considering the lateness of the season, are especially good. H. J. H.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"So pants the elk for cooling streams," a member of the B. P. O. Elks was overheard to remark to a group of fellow Elks gathered around and admiring the unique window decoration at the Penn store, during the Elk convention at Boston last week. A pen and ink description can do but feeble justice to a display that was considered a perfect depiction of Elkdom. One side of the window contained the usual summer exhibit of ducklings and water, a display that never seems to grow old, judging by the crowds constantly viewing it. The special subject was a herd of elks browsing in a valley, with here and there finger posts, upon which were written the several virtuous tenets of the order. In the background, on a hill, stood the chapel, beside which a cooling stream gushed forth. It was all symbolic of the order and highly interesting, even to the casual observer. Delegates from Hawaii and the Philippines were noted among the spectators, and what a card it was for Penn! The opposite window contained a display of choice summer flowers, richly bowled and artistically arranged.

S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, Mass., has a few standard geraniums left with which to adorn his residence. The variety is J. J. Harrison, which also is a splendid bedder. The group prominently planted in front could have been sold many times. A fine lot of Fuchsia Black Prince, grown in standard form, in full bloom, was noted; also the grand ramblers, trained up the supports along the sign. Carnations had been thrown out and plants were being lifted from the field. The new ones have done well. Though it has been somewhat dry of late, each appears in excellent form. Matchless, Rosalia, Nancy, Laddie, Doris, Benora and Merry Christmas are the leaders. Chrysanthemums have a good start. The home vegetable garden contains uncommon varieties that tempt the palate of the epicure. Just beyond is seen a snug bungalow built by a lovely daughter, who proposes to share it this fall with a lucky partner, providing the partner's country does not need him to fight. "It is a fight either way," soliloquized Mr. Goddard.

G. H. Sinclair, of Holyoke, Mass., says it pays to keep in touch with the public officials and newspaper men. His influence was seen in the proposal to send all flowers presented to the various incomers to the several hospitals. The idea, while not entirely new, was made the subject of considerable publicity and must redound to the interest of the florist.

H. F. A. Lange, of Worcester, Mass., keeps the observing public well posted along the seasonable lines by frequent changes of attractive displays. There is nothing special to record, save that business in general is moving along steadily. W. M.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

HYBRIDIZING CUCUMBERS.

Can you tell me how to cross the English frame cucumber, Telegraph, with Vickery Forcing, an improved White Spine, to produce the hybrid cucumber for greenhouse use? The hybrid is supposed to have the good qualities of both, being well shaped and a heavy cropper. Any information in regard to this will be appreciated.

N. C. N.—Kan.

Pick off a male flower of the Telegraph and strip away the petals, leaving only the central part of the flower. Fertilize with this a female flower or flowers of the Vickery White Spine type; the female flowers produce the fruit. Protect the fertilized flower or flowers with fine gauze to prevent fertilization by bees or other outside agents. It is a safe plan to protect the flowers to be fertilized before they are open; then you are sure your cross is not interfered with. It would be best to fertilize the flowers on one or two plants and to remove all the fruits from these except the ones you have fertilized, to allow the fruits to reach their best development. A vice versa cross would probably give similar results. C. W.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

As we are well into the third week of July, business has a right, so to speak, to be a trifle slow. Although during the second week the retailer had nothing but rain to contend with, so far July is said to compare favorably with the same month of many previous years.

There is an abundant supply of everything in the market; in fact, in some instances there is an oversupply. An exception should be made of good American Beauties. These are few, but Russell and Francis Scott Key readily replace them. The Killarneys have succumbed to mildew, but there are plenty of others to fill the gap. Carnations have held up exceptionally well, a condition attributed to the cool weather. Sweet peas are available in quantities, but many of them are inferior. Delphiniums, mignonette, snapdragons and calendulas arrive in large consignments and seem to clear daily, though how is difficult to say. The greens situation has improved.

Various Notes.

Tracy Dickinson, who has been associated with L. C. Stroh & Sons, of Batavia, has enlisted in a military band at Syracuse. Walter Stroh was in town last week.

Henry Wise, who has been manager for the Erie Floral Co. for the last twelve years, has tendered his resignation since the recent change in ownership from the Kasting Co. Mr. Wise was a successful manager, and had his share of difficulties to overcome.

The Buffalo Florists' Club will hold its annual outing at Smith's grove, Genesee street and Union road, July 25. Picnickers should take the Genesee street car to the city line, and from there take the Depew car. The grounds are a five minutes' walk from the car line. A. E.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

The demand for good stock fluctuates, being good one day and poor the next. Gladioli, lilies, roses, carnations and perennials are about the only flowers in the market. Gladioli sell best, with roses close seconds. There is an abundance of stock, especially the poorer grade, much of which is sold on the streets.

No one, however, is complaining about business, which is at least as good as during the summer months of other years. There has been considerable funeral work during the last two weeks.

Various Notes.

James B. Masson has purchased a new delivery automobile. He has his houses all planted and everything in readiness for the season. Mr. Masson says he has been exceptionally busy with funeral work.

W. J. Barnes has been busy with funeral work.

Ray Sturgeon has sold about all his stock. He will retire from the greenhouse business and go on a farm.

The growers are busy getting their places ready for fall. E. D. Ellsworth has his houses at Forest lake planted and R. S. Brown & Son are fast getting their houses into shape.

The Stockdale greenhouses have been doing a big business in young chrysanthemum plants.

S. Bryson Ayres is sending in a lot of good sweet peas. His gladioli also are good.

T. J. Noll & Co. report that business continues good. They have been shipping large orders recently.

Henry Kusik soon will leave for Chicago and Milwaukee en route to Colorado. W. J. B.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Mark A. Cassidy, of M. A. Cassidy & Co., who was badly injured by the overturning of an automobile in which he was riding, about a month ago, returned to his office last week.

According to the annual assessments, the Budlong Rose Co. has an excess of $64,632, which is taxed for $258.52.

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. O'Connor last week arrived at the Mathewson, Narragansett Pier, for the season.

Archie Serro, an employee at the Koppelman greenhouses, East Providence, was struck by an automobile last week as he rode out of a lane near the greenhouses on his way home. He suffered a fracture of the collar bone.

Harry Swanson has been taking a few days' respite from business with friends at Shawomet beach.

Earl Smith, of Pawtucket, is enjoying short trips about New England in his new automobile. W. H. M.

POEHLMANN PROGRESS.

The old-time florist, whose memories of the trade reach back over the last score of years, cannot but be impressed when he contrasts in his mind the business establishments of today with what they have been in even the quite recent past. And this improvement has not been confined to any one branch or department, but has included all sections of the trade. As the retailer grew, his needs increased proportionately and many supply houses sprang up to cater to his wants. Starting in a small way, many of these supply businesses have grown steadily until they are establishments of no mean proportions.

The accompanying illustration shows a portion of the supply department display room of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, recently opened. This occupies a space of about 5,000 square feet and is adjacent to the company's wholesale cut flower store. Begun in a small way about five years ago, this department has grown to large proportions and the opening of the new display room marks another station in this march onward. The department is under the management of T. E. Waters.

Oneco, Fla.—Arthur James, for thirty years a florist of Pittsburgh, Pa., has begun work here on a fernery, on a tract of sixty acres. Mr. James at first will specialize in the various types of nephrolepis, which he will wholesale in the northern markets. Later he expects to grow asparagus, crotons and rubber plants.

OBITUARY

Ludwig Teweles.

The veteran seedsman of Milwaukee, dwig Teweles, president of the L. weles Seed Co., and for fifty-three rs prominent in the trade, died last ek from heart failure, at the age of He is survived by five sons, Hugo, thur, Max, Oscar and Edwin, who ll continue the business, and a daugh-, Mrs. H. Herz, of New York.

Alice Josephine Miller.

One of the first women florists of the uth, Alice J. Miller, who conducted store in Louisville, Ky., for the last irty-five years, died suddenly last eek from heart failure. Miss Miller as found dead at the rear of her ome, and apparently had been on her ay to open the store. She was 61 ears of age and had been in failing ealth for some time. Two brothers nd four sisters survive her.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

Business has been fair and the supply of stock has been moved. There has been an abundance of lilies, which have been in demand for funeral work. Those of good quality sell at from $6 to $8 per hundred. Roses are above the average summer quality. The supply is adequate, with prices ranging from $2 to $6 per hundred. Gladioli are popular and there has not been a supply sufficient for the demand. They bring $5 to $6 per hundred. Snapdragons also are in demand. Good quality flowers sell at $1 to $2 per hundred. Sweet peas and Shasta daisies are important items now. Dahlias are beginning to make their appearance, but not in quantities.

Delphinium temporarily is out of the market, the first crop having been exhausted and the second not ready. Asters are in, but are of poor quality. Prices range from $1.50 to $2.50 per hundred. There is the usual supply of outdoor flowers. Good fancy ferns are in the market. Plumosus and Sprengeri are scarce and smilax is of inferior quality.

Various Notes.

E. A. Nelson's automobile was in another accident, but the occupants of the machine were not hurt.

Bert Stanley and Carl Glaubke have been cutting some fine hardy stock.

Blasting for a sewer in the street near the establishments of John Grande and John Grande, Jr., did considerable damage to their glass.

M. A. Barick, of Seymour, Ind., reports that he speedily is getting his greenhouses in shape. They were badly damaged recently by a hail storm. This was the third time hail has hit his place.

Robert Fohl has been cutting excellent Shasta daisies, some of which were five inches in diameter.

Claude Griffith is away on a short vacation.

There had been a drought on the south side during three weeks, while on the north side there had been quantities of rain. However, a steady downpour brought relief to the stock on both sides last week.

Frank Harriott, who until recently was a grower of hardy stock, is now a cook at the army camp at Fort Harrison.

Mr. Dudderstadt, with A. Wiegand's Sons Co., recently lost his little son. The trade extends its sympathy.

Help is scarce, the army camp at Fort Harrison having taken most of the men available. E. E. T.

REPORTS indicate no lack of confidence on the part of retailers; they are placing large orders for accessories for fall delivery.

THE florist who grows his stock up to a quality rather than down to a price is a winner every time, provided he has average selling ability.

THERE was a time when the trade looked on the cut flower grower as the monarch of all he surveyed; then it was the plantsman who was envied; but today it is the retailer who is in the ascendant, with the opportunity to go as far as he likes.

SCHEDULES have been issued for the combined exhibitions of the American Institute and the American Dahlia Society, at the Engineering building, New York, September 25 to 27. Anyone interested should address W. A. Eagleston, secretary, 324 West Twenty-third street, New York.

AMONG the conspicuous successes of recent years have been a few with the Hadley rose. It is not possible to be more definite here, but it is reported that a well known grower of Hadley for the New York market in the season recently closed had gross receipts of $3.09 per plant from the variety.

SOME growers think rose plants need a rest, more or less complete, every few months, but one of the most successful men in the middle west frequently runs a house two years without desisting from the application of food and water and he has run a house of Wards five years without a pause.

A NUMBER of white sports of Sunburst are reported in widely separated parts of the country. They are being nursed, but what is wanted is a white sport of Ophelia, the rose that is the trade's easiest doer.

ONE of the things which make the florists' business unattractive is the long hours employers expect their store help to put in, to compete with the man who lives on his place and who, therefore, is on call at all hours. It is all very well to keep open as long as there is business, but a record of sales by hours usually will show there is little to be lost by closing earlier than now is done, even if the man down the street does live back of the store and sits on the steps till 11 o'clock these summer evenings.

PRICES BY AGREEMENT.

Before the printed matter for next season is prepared the Horticultural Trades Association of Great Britain and Ireland plans to bring the individual interests together in an agreement as to prices. Some work in this direction was done last season, but too late to have the full effect desired, and this year it is planned to start in time and to include as many items of stock as possible. Certain levels of values must be maintained if the trade is to continue under war conditions and it is hoped to be able to assume the maintenance of these values by full discussion and subsequent agreement.

Agreement may be possible in England, but in the trade in the United States nothing of the kind can be hoped for, although it probably is as urgently needed. In this country, sellers are of two classes: One class includes the men who think their stock is worth as much as any other growers', if not a little more. In the other class are the men who have no pride in their stock, no confidence in its value or their own selling ability and whose idea of price is always to be a little under the other fellow. The hope for fair prices lies in the first class, as the other is incorrigible.

PREPAREDNESS.

This is the season of the year when the retail florist has little to do and considers himself lucky if he has enough business to pay expenses; the wholesaler is mentally busy trying to get rid of the stock, good, bad and indifferent, which is thrown on his hands for disposal and the grower is getting ready to furnish the supply for next season.

The activities of the latter should furnish an inspiration for the former. Get ready for next season!

In all parts of the country there are florists more progressive than their neighbors. Their names may be learned by a careful reading of the news letters in The Review. Here it is recorded that one is making alterations and improvements to his store, another is installing a new refrigerator, while a third is redecorating and making his store bright and clean for the opening of the season in the fall.

Of course the nature of the stock he carries makes a florist's store attractive. But, on the other hand, the store can make the stock more attractive by providing a setting that is in harmony with the beauty of the flowers.

This is house-cleaning time for florists. It is also the time to "paint up and clean up." The labor and the expense will be turned into dividends next fall, and winter, and spring, when the bright store is getting the business and the dull, drab place is not.

PLEASE NOTE.

Each week a number of letters and telegrams containing advertising instructions reach The Review while the paper is on the press—just a few hours earlier and they would have had attention a week sooner than is possible.

It is the aim to give prompt service, but to secure it advertisers should note: "It is impossible to guarantee the insertion, discontinuance or alteration of any advertisement unless instructions are received by 4 p. m. Tuesday."

SYSTEM.

"In many cases," says a British trade paper, "unpleasantness might be avoided if the custom were adopted and rigidly adhered to of acknowledging receipt of order. A printed post card for the purpose would suffice and the little labor involved would be well repaid by the preservation of good temper. The large, well ordered establishments of course do this, but a good many smaller plantsmen and seed houses struggle along through busy seasons sadly handicapped through lack of businesslike system in the office, although there is no doubt even the smallest business will grow the quicker and show the greater profits if a proper system of working is adopted, which need not be elaborate to be efficient."

TO HELP THE TRADE.

Practically every florist stands ready to do anything that will benefit the trade as a body—provided it does not call for too great personal sacrifice.

Well, here is the way to render the greatest possible assistance to the trade at large—and it calls for no sacrifice at all.

Everybody recognizes that the business man who owes no money can not fail—so pay your bills.

If every florist gets in the money due him from the public and passes it on to those he owes, the trade's liabilities will be sharply reduced—and then nobody need worry.

Collect and pay—that's the way.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There is a spirit of marked satisfaction prevalent on the wholesale cut flower market with regard to the excellent manner in which July business is holding up. Although demand generally is somewhat erratic, the average business done is not to be regarded at all slightingly when one considers how far along in the summer it really is.

Although the supply of all items is large enough to meet the demand, there cannot be said to be any superabundance and with a fair average quality all the way through stock moves along nicely. Exceptions of course can be pointed out, the most conspicuous one being carnations, of which there is much poor quality stock, unsuitable for shipping purposes, and which only serves to depress prices.

The market on roses is entirely satisfactory in every way. The cut, generally, is of a fairly good, even quality, although some poorer quality stock also finds its way through. American Beauties are not an important item, but the limited supply which arrives is moved with little difficulty. Mrs. Russell is easily the best seller and prices hold up well. Red roses are selling exceptionally well for this season of the year. There are not many Richmonds, and Milady therefore meets the greater part of this need. White Killarney is scarce. Ophelia is in good supply, and is profiting by the shortage in good white stock.

There are great quantities of poor quality carnations on the market, and these are found to be a heavy drag. What fairly good stock does arrive, however, finds a moderately good sale. Carnations usually are practically out of the market at this date and receipts are decreasing rapidly, but it is probable there will be no day this summer that carnations are not to be had.

Easter lilies are in good supply and, although their sale has been far from satisfactory, demand now begins to show a tendency to increase. Valley and orchids, though not in large supply, arrive in ample quantity to meet the demand, and no scarcity recently has been felt. Although the quality of sweet peas as an average is commencing to deteriorate, some good stock still is arriving and this finds a fair sale. The supply of peonies is shortening, but there are still considerable quantities in storage, and it is probable that they will still be obtainable for several weeks. A fair sale is recorded, but beyond question they are depressing the prices for other flowers. Gladioli are scarce, the local crop not having yet arrived, and it was at times last week found impossible to fill orders for them. A variety of summer flowers arrive, among which may be mentioned the aster, of which a limited supply is coming in.

Greens of all kinds are in increased supply. A great abundance of plumosus and Sprengeri is to be seen.

Weiland Now Heads Flower Growers.

At the annual meeting of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, held at the company's office at 182 North Wabash avenue, July 16, the following officers were elected: President, George C. Weiland; vice-president, Chas. McCauley; secretary, Rudolph Ellsworth; treasurer, E. Meuret. Fred Schramm, E. Meuret and Anton Then were reëlected directors to serve for a term of two years and Arthur Stielow was elected a director to serve for a similar term. Paul R. Klingshorn continues as the manager and there was general commendation of his work.

Peter Reinberg is one of the growers who believe it is better to be safe than to be sorry. He has filled all his coal sheds and is industriously building up a great coal pile in the open air, carload upon carload of Pocahontas costing more than $5 a ton on his siding.

That there has been no curtailment in the use of flowers for customary purposes is shown by the fact that one downtown retailer in one day last week had fourteen orders for patients in the various hospitals.

Walter Adams, with Mrs. Adams as chief assistant, has become nicely settled in the store and conservatory at the southeast corner of North State and Division streets. These are the quarters fitted up several years ago for the north side branch of the Fleischman Floral Co., under the management of the late John Gormley, and Mr. Adams has much larger space, much better display and a decidedly better location than before.

The Johnson & Chronis store at Lake Park avenue and Forty-seventh street is to be thoroughly renovated this summer and a new Rando refrigerator with double the capacity of the present one will be installed. Mr. Johnson has the fixture ordered and expects to have it in place soon. This store, by the way, is one of the "veterans" in the city, the triangular shaped room having housed a flower store twenty years, most of which time Mr. Johnson has been its proprietor.

"That certainly looks good," said Andrew Chronis, of the Alpha Floral Co., Wabash avenue and Adams street, the other day as he surveyed a $50 order for baskets and a bouquet of Russells that were ready to be delivered. "Orders of that size are not so numerous in the season, but the quantity of smaller sales then makes the day big. But in the summer—yes, that certainly looks good."

The first Pink Ophelia to reach this market are reported by the E. C. Amling Co. They were from Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, where 2,000 plants of the Breitmeyer sport were benched, grafted on the place with wood supplied by the disseminator.

Bassett & Washburn are just finishing the season's big addition to the new range at Greggs Station. The new houses were planted as soon as the benches were ready, some of them ahead of the glazing, so that most of the stock has received as early a start as that did in the houses built in previous years.

ter Tonner has twenty-five acres there. Last season the trees were just beginning to bear, but L. A. Tonner, who looks after this end of the family enterprises, had nearly a ton of nuts that were sold in the Chicago store along with the cut flowers and florists' supplies, mostly to the same persons. This year the harvest is expected to be much larger.

E. J. Warren, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., who is confined to his home with muscular rheumatism, is reported to be getting along well, but it is doubtful whether he will be able to resume his duties for some time.

F. G. Healy, manager of the Rapid Wrapper Co., is on a vacation, resting up preparatory to a big drive the company expects to make in the fall.

Miss Margaret K. McNulty, who is one of Peter Reinberg's most valuable assistants, is vacationing at the home of her best friend, a farm at Wauconda, Ill. Herbert Hansen, also of the Reinberg staff, is away.

Albert Koehler, secretary of the American Bulb Co., is on a vacation trip to Colorado, with Mrs. Koehler.

M. C. Gunterberg has returned from her trip to Minnesota.

E. F. Winterson, Jr., and a friend drove 1,300 miles last week, to Niagara Falls and back.

A. Lange has put on one of the popular light delivery cars.

Mique Fink, formerly a well known figure in the wholesale district, has become a successful grower and retailer. He is running the establishment formerly conducted by his father and later by a brother, both now deceased. A good spring season was enjoyed.

Miss Zalud, of the Elston Flower Shop, is visiting for a few weeks at Detroit, where her sister, Mrs. Charles Keller, is the wife of a well known florist.

The first dozen Beauties ever grown at Elmhurst, rose center that it is, were cut July 17 by Meyer & Dramm Co. There are two houses of Beauties there this season, each 40x450.

R. J. Parker has been assisting A. F. Keenan since leaving the National Plant & Flower Co., at the end of the bedding season.

Visitors.

C. L. Snyder, El Paso, Tex., was a visitor July 17.

H. E. Philpott, president of Pyfer & Co., was a visitor last week. Mrs. Philpott is still seriously ill in a Minneapolis hospital and it is feared that she will have to undergo another operation.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Business slowed up to a considerable extent last week, although there is still a demand for bedding stock, and the shipping trade is fairly good. Counter trade has been slack; weddings are practically over for the season; funeral work has been good.

There is a good supply of flowers, including outdoor and greenhouse stock. Prices are about normal for this season of the year. The supply of Beauties is not large, but sufficient to meet the local demand. Other roses are equal to the demand. Outdoor sweet peas are plentiful and the demand for them is good. Carnations are in small supply, the quality becoming poorer and poorer. They sell at a low figure. Asters have appeared and take the place of carnations. Some excellent gladioli are offered, and these bring good prices. Easter and calla lilies are decreasing in supply and valley is almost out of the question. Cattleyas are also on the short side. There is a large supply of outdoor stock and a fair supply of asparagus and other greens. Smilax is of poor quality.

Various Notes.

The Doswell Floral Co. reports a good demand for funeral work. They have been devoting much time to collections during these dull days.

The annual picnic of the Fort Wayne Florists' Club will be held in August. The date and place are to be announced later.

Business at the Flick Floral Co. store has been markedly brisk during the last week, funeral work being particularly heavy.

A. J. Lanternier & Co. reports that the week's business has been good with them. They had several weddings. The greenhouse force is transplanting chrysanthemums and throwing out some of the rose stock.

Edgar Wenninghoff had his share of funeral work and a good counter trade. He is showing some fine Shasta daisies, lilies and roses.

Markey Bros. had a normal week, the bulk of the trade running to funeral work.

Frank J. Knecht has returned from a business trip of several days to Indianapolis.

With regard to the coal situation, the growers seem to be divided in their opinions concerning the lowering of prices. A few of the larger growers are getting in their supply at market prices, while others are waiting for the promised slump in prices.

The Saturday evening and Sunday closing of the flower stores has proved to be most successful. R. F.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Summer seems to be here, and business is light, but as the supply of the different varieties of stock is also light, there is little or no surplus in the market. Carnations are becoming soft and the quantity is decreasing daily. Roses as yet are in good condition, but the supply is small. Peonies are out of the market entirely, and while the crop of sweet peas will last another week or so there has been an appreciable decrease in the daily cuts.

There are plenty of lilies and they have little sale. Valley is short, but the demand is so small that the stortage is hardly felt. The supply of orchids is about equal to the demand and the stock is in good shape.

The plant business has fallen off considerably, although it dragged over a longer period of time this year than usual. Taken as a whole, the trade is ready for vacations and a small portion of the force will not overexert itself in taking care of the business there is.

Holton & Hunkel's Picnic.

Sunday, July 15, the Holton & Hunkel Co. held its annual outing for the employees at Ehler's grove, Brown Deer, Wis. The day was ideal for the picnic and there were about 200 who made the most of the opportunity. A number of the trade visited the grove and took part in the various games. All the employees, with th ir families, were taken to the grove in the firm's auto trucks and enjoyed the ride as much as anything.

There were music and eats galore, and it was a gala day for everyone who attended. There was something doing all the time, with keen competition in the different events. Prizes were offered to the winners of games. The ball game

Wilmer Schumacher, chauffeur for the Holton & Hunkel Co., left July 14, when Troop C, Wisconsin cavalry, was mustered into federal service. After a short period of drilling the troop will go south for a while; then it will be transferred into different branches of the service. Mr. Schumacher expects to join the aviation corps at that time. He has one brother in France, who went over with the first division. Will's many friends in the trade are united in wishing him a safe return.

A belated item of importance is the marriage recently of Miss Ella Voelzke and C. S. Kitzerow. Miss Voelzke, who operates a flower store at 3805 Lisbon avenue, is well known in the trade. She was associated with the Holton & Hunkel Co. and with the Gust. Rusch Co., before going into business for herself. C. S. Kitzerow is a son of C. F. Kitzerow, who has a greenhouse range on the Port Washington road. The happy pair left immediately for their honeymoon. Since their return they have been overwhelmed with felicitations by their many friends in the trade.

Stock last week was fair and in quantities sufficient for the light summer demand. Roses were good in flower, but the stems were a succession of joints and the foliage poor. Valley was of the best quality and the demand good. Orchids were of excellent quality, some cattleyas measuring eight inches across. Gladioli are coming in fair quality.

The usual assortment of garden flowers is to be had, but the demand is small. Lilies, Harrisii and rubrum, are in oversupply.

PHILADELPHIA

The Market.

The week has brought an advance in prices, due to light receipts. There is some business, rather more than usual for the middle of July, with somewhat less flowers than usual to meet the demand. The heavy rains have damaged outdoor flowers. The usual summer mainstays, gladioli and asters, are both late. Gladioli are arriving in moderate numbers, while asters have only just commenced to arrive in earnest. Both are bringing good prices and could be marketed in larger quantities.

The Easter lily is the leading flower. The market never has seen so large a supply of lilies at this season. There are too many at times, but, taking it all in all, they have sold pretty well at rather moderate figures. Lilium regale affords variety. Of other flowers there is not much to say. Generally speaking, the supply is meager, though a decided increase might easily prove too much for the demand.

It is the opinion of most of the wholesalers that the tide will turn in a few days. They expect the market to be better supplied with good flowers when the asters come in more freely. Then, unless business improves, they look for a decline in prices, especially on the ordinary grades of flowers. Sweet peas are about over.

The English View.

A representative of the seed house of W. W. Johnson & Son, Boston, England, in conversation with Franklin Ely, of the Henry F. Michell Co., spoke of the effect of the German submarine warning on the demand for vegetable seeds in England. This warning, it will be recalled, came about the first of February. The time, Mr. Dean told Mr. Ely, was particularly opportune; it gave the British seed houses six or eight weeks' time for preparation before the spring season for sowing arrived. So the English seedsmen said a silent but earnest "Thank you" to Germany for the timely warning, then pitched in and worked. The result is that all over Britain are rows of potatoes and vegetables, in places that never knew them before, bringing a great harvest to the seedsmen and to the people.

Mr. Bayersdorfer's Chat.

Harry Bayersdorfer, whose enterprise has made him almost as well known in Europe and in Japan as in America, was seen inspecting the corridor just opened between his present warehouse at 1129 Arch street and the building adjoining it on the north. "The Reading railroad," Mr. Bayersdorfer said, "is not ready to use this building. They have given us a most advantageous lease, so we will stay right here for another year; it may be for many years to come. Here," he continued, pointing to the front portion of 1131, "is where my private office will probably be placed." When asked about the outlook for supplies in the fall, Mr. Bayersdorfer said: "I advise florists to order early. It is doubtful whether we can get enough goods. The freight from Japan to this country has been enormously increased, while the receipts from Europe are, as Everything we get is advancing; in fact, we never can tell when an advance will come. If we decline to pay it, somebody else gets the goods.''

The Farewell Smoker.

The Florists' Club arranged a smoker for Thursday evening, July 19, as a closing entertainment to be held in the rooms in Horticultural hall. The meeting room, the billiard and pool tables, the shuffleboard and, most of all, the bowling alleys, have been the scene of many animated gatherings. Could they talk, they would tell of many interesting things—how Robert Craig, first president of the club, spoke with such rare elegance that H. H. Battles asserted he would be proud to have Mr. Craig represent him anywhere; how William K. Harris enjoyed everything serious or recreative with the zest of a boy, and made poetry about it, too; how John Westcott got wonderful free lunches for the convention parties, how he loved everybody and was unkind to nobody except the stay-at-homes who attempted to dictate to him how he must go to a midsummer convention; how Thomas Cartledge ''counted and kept our cash and with financial skill averted a monetary crash''; how Edwin Lonsdale sang ''The Brave Old Duke of York''; how William J. Baker rolled the quietest and A. Lincoln Brown the speediest ball down the alleys, both making fine scores; how Charles D. Ball arranged and carried out lovely entertainments for the ladies; how John Burton held the most turbulent, with a spell acquired in legislative halls; how Henry F. Michell modestly sat in the secretary's chair and read our minutes, in the days before he became great; how Dennis T. Connor could sell a member a greenhouse or beat him at tenpins with equal facility; how J. William Colflesh made friends without knowing he was doing it; how the drys downed the wets and then how the wets rose in their might and downed the drys; how—but the smoker is over, it is time to close.

Various Notes.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co. made a notable exhibit at the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society sweet pea show at Bryn Mawr.

Clarence J. Walsh, who is in close touch with large interests in the floral world, believes the coming season will see good business.

Alvah R. Jones left the city on his vacation July 18.

Edward Reid has the honor of being the first wholesale florist to display the stars and stripes on his walls.

Adolph Farenwald has increased his planting of Liberty roses from 1,500 to 4,000. Liberty was Mr. Farenwald's great rose "years ago." His midwinter ground shoots won the admiration of all who saw them.

William A. Leonard is at Lavelle.

Mrs. Mary A. Baker is at Kennett, Pa.

Charles E. Schackermann is doing well with the M. Rice Co.

Victor Groshens has heavily increased his planting of Mrs. Charles Russell roses.

Alfred M. Campbell is pleased with the results of his first year at Strafford.

George Burton is trying the new rose, Red Rover.

Cretonne baskets are a novelty that Paul Berkowitz is showing callers at the establishment of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. It is a good-looking basket, in a great variety of styles, that appeals to the cultivated taste, both in form and color. Phil.

The two insertions sold everything I had.—H. M. Morris, Rantoul, Ill.

The Market.

Last week the cut flower market was dull until July 14, when most of the stock was cleaned up. There was a dearth of perfect flowers. The shipments of roses lessened considerably and prices for anything perfect at the week end were firm. Good Beauties and the novelties and specialties sold quickly. Of the short-stemmed roses, nothing usable was sold under 50 cents per hundred. There was a large supply of rambler branches, mostly of poor quality.

The arrivals of carnations are fewer each week. Perfect flowers sold at $2 per hundred July 14. The medium and low-grade flowers went to the peddlers. The peony season ended last week. Some fine flowers from northern New York and New England sold as high as $1 per dozen. The aster season has begun, a few flowers having arrived last week. Each week shows larger receipts of gladioli.

Profitable and Practical Delivery Service

Now as never before it is important for you to speed up your deliveries.

This Overland Motor Wagon shown above is the type that florists have found profitable and practical for their delivery service.

Profitable, because it has the stuff in it that will stand up under the wear and tear of steady service. With ordinary care an Overland will do its work just as faithfully the second or third year as it does in the beginning.

And it is practical in every sense of the word. It is light, quick and easy to handle—has oversize mileage-giving tires both front and rear—is completely equipped with every time-saving convenience, such as electric lights and starter, speedometer, ammeter, etc.

No matter how large or small your business may be, an Overland Delivery Wagon or a fleet of Overlands will reduce your hauling costs and increase your trading radius.

Overland service has solved the delivery problems of thousands of florists. Why hesitate or experiment?

See the nearest Overland dealer today. Ask him for a practical demonstration.

Valley continues scarce and the price was firm at $5 per hundred. Lilies are not so abundant as they were a month ago and now sell at $4 per hundred. Orchids range from 20 to 50 cents each, with no extra demand or supply. Quantities of outdoor flowers are arriving. They include feverfew, calendulas, sweet peas, daisies, coreopsis and centaureas.

Greek-American Florists.

Nearly 300 persons attended the outing of the Greek-American Florists' Association at Witzel's grove, College Point, July 11. The trip was made by boat. There were sports of all kinds, besides bathing and dancing. The baseball game resulted in a score of 10 to 6 in favor of the Greek team. The prizes in all the contests were cups and silver medals. During the afternoon many New York wholesalers motored to the grove. The committee in charge of the outing was composed of Messrs. Sakas, Pappas, Pappadem, Stathakos and Mantzoras.

The prize-winners in the various events were:

Boys' race—George Cosmas, first; E. Chindus, second.

Girls' race—Florence Doctors, first; Anna Lascas, second.

Young ladies' race—A. French, first; Sophia Kiliaze, second.

Married ladies' race—Mrs. G. Orth, first; Mrs. Demas, second.

Young men's race—James Laskas, first; Lewis Henges, second.

Broad jump—P. J. Lecakes, first; Theo. Chirakos, second.

Members' race—P. Antonakos, first; C. M. Sakelos, second.

Marathon race—Joseph Walters, first; G. Marikes, second; E. Kaurogenis.

Various Notes.

There will be a special meeting of the New York Florists' Club Monday evening, August 11. It will be gladiolus night.

Walter Siebrecht and Clarence Slinn, who are on an auto trip to the Pacific coast, had reached St. Joseph, Mo., July 13. They expect to reach San Francisco July 25.

James Hart fell from a trolley car July 11 and fractured a rib. He has since been confined to his bed. Mr. Hart is 75 years old and is one of the oldest among New York wholesalers.

Al. Bowker, one of Riedel & Meyer's force, left on his vacation July 14. He is a member of the Sixty-ninth New York regiment and expects to be called into service soon. Hugh Peak and William Sullivan both are members of the same regiment.

Superintendent Jackson, of the Coogan building, says the wholesalers there cleaned up their stock July 14, an unusual happening during the summer season.

Percy Richter, who had been seriously ill, has recovered and is back in the office of the New York Cut Flower Co.

Charles Schenck and family are at New Egypt, N. J., and Frank Traendly and family at Rowayton, Conn., for the summer months.

The event of the month was the Toronto florists' picnic, which was held at Center island July 11. Apart from the tug of war, the whole afternoon's sport was a case of pulling together on the part of everybody—something quite novel after the I-do-not-care sort of feeling that has permeated the ranks during the last fifteen years. A more intimate and friendly feeling was aroused on this occasion, and it was generally understood that the picnic would become an annual affair.

Rain, rain, rain, has been the order of the day for the last ten days, and much damage has been done throughout the province. Hail storms have been heavy in some localities, Messrs. Neal and Baxter, of Ingersoll, sustaining severe losses at their greenhouses.

FOR SALE

WILL SELL——TO RIGHT PARTY

The following: Greenhouses, boiler, 1-ton truck, electric motor and pump, pots enough for the coming season, the best varieties of all kinds of bedding plants for stock. 7500 square feet of double-strength glass. Greenhouse cypress wood on concrete foundation. One No. 10 Kroeschell hot water boiler, boiler house and truck house. Truck house 20x20, 2 story, with coal cellar underneath; can dump coal in from truck, can store 3000 to 4000 bushels and can shovel right into boiler from cellar. Everything lighted by electric lights; everything practically new. Will stand for many years if taken care of. A first-class retail and wholesale trade. I can never fill the demand for rooted cuttings and potted stock for the season; you can sell all the bedding stock that you can raise at the highest prices at our Pittsburgh markets and suburban districts. Cemetery on each side of my place. The boiler will take care of 28,000 square feet of glass. Just 4½ miles to the market in greater Pittsburgh, right on macadam road; can take three different macadam roads to the city, as the junction of the roads is in front of the greenhouses. We have our own water system. There is a 16-inch gas line running just in front of the greenhouses, if you would wish to have the gas. Will sell greenhouses, boiler, truck, stock, pots and everything connected with the business. Can easily be moved, or will sell to right party the entire business and 1, 2, 3 or as many acres of ground as he wishes to buy. The land is of the very best and the finest location in the state. Property here sells for from $2000.00 to $3000.00 per acre. Any party that means business write for price and full particulars; no others need answer, as we are not compelled to sell. This is a first-class chance for a party who wants to start in business, as we are in as good a location as you can find in the states. Take Bellevue car, get off at Quaill stop and inquire at Quaill's house at top of lane, they can show you my place. Ask the Review about my prompt advertising for several years.

Can take possession as soon as you buy.

The Market.

Flower receipts have fallen off decidedly and some improvement is noticeable in the demand. As a consequence, the market is cleaning up better and prices are more satisfactory. The supply of roses has fallen off sharply and the sales are more encouraging. American Beauties move slowly, but there has been a fairly good call for Ophelia, Kaiserin, Double White Killarney, Francis Scott Key and other hybrid teas. All of these continue to come of fine summer quality, thanks to the absence of intense heat. Carnations are still plentiful. Few flowers realize over $1 per hundred; the majority half that price. Good sweet peas are soon picked up, but many seen are of inferior quality.

Lilies still sell at low prices, but valley holds up well. Cornflowers, sweet sultans, gypsophilas, coreopsis, gaillardias, larkspurs and cosmos meet with a fair sale. Gladioli are not selling particularly well. The open-air crop here is not ready yet. A few asters come in, but there are too many carnations in the market as competitors. Cattleyas are dwindling in numbers and will soon be scarce. A few C. Mendelii and C. Gaskelliana are seen. There is a smaller call for asparagus now that gypsophila is abundant.

Various Notes.

Everything is arranged for the annual picnic of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at Cunningham park, East Milton, July 25. Only good weather is needed to make it a complete success, and in case of rain there are roomy buildings where dancing and other amusements can be enjoyed. There are twenty-eight events on the sports program. These include separate baseball games for men, boys and ladies, a soccer football match, obstacle race and quoit match. East Milton is conveniently reached by steam or electric cars. The latter pass the grounds at frequent intervals, and there is ample parking space for teams and autos.

recipient of many presents from his numerous friends. Many of his market confreres attended and they presented him with a purse of gold on behalf of the growers and salesmen of the market.

Penn's window display made in honor of the visit of the Elks to Boston won second prize for the best window decoration in the city. It represented the now familiar duck farm, and the bubbling stream, pools of water, moss-covered ground and rustic buildings made a picture at once cool and satisfying for hot weather, as was evidenced by the continued crowded condition of the sidewalks on busy Tremont street.

W. J. Cain, formerly of Newtonville, now is at South Hanover and ships in daily supplies of gypsophilas, centaureas and Coreopsis grandiflora.

The Budlong Rose Co. supply of roses has fallen off sharply of late, being reduced from 12,000 or 15,000 daily to 5,000. Francis Scott Key, Double White Killarney, Ophelia, Hearst and Montrose are good; in fact, all varieties still are of high-grade quality. This concern invariably has a splendid cut of high-grade summer roses, which realize almost midwinter prices.

The Welch Bros. Co. is receiving a fine lot of southern gladioli. The firm reports that trade to such beach resorts as Bar Harbor and North Shore, also to the White mountains, is showing a steady increase.

The wholesale markets close at noon on Saturdays during the months of July and August. Why cannot the wholesale commission houses do likewise? There is little for their employees to do Saturday afternoons and practically nothing Sundays, but as conditions now are all hands are kept on Saturday afternoons and some have to be on hand Sundays. New York tradesmen have closed up on Sunday; let Boston follow suit. If one firm is the stumbling block in the way of this closing, public opinion should soon compel it to close.

There will be a prize exhibition at Horticultural hall July 21 and 22. The annual phlox and gladiolus show will be held August 11 and 12.

J. R. Comley, of Bedford, at present is acting as salesman for his brother, N. F. Comley, at the Boston Coöperative Market, in the absence of John Lynch. Good Beauty, Shawyer, Francis Scott Key and other roses are being sent in. Some 90,000 roses are planted for next season.

Farquhar & Co. there is a notable display of Lilium myriophyllum, or regale, there being several acres now in bloom. The stalks carry as many as fifteen to twenty blooms each. Coldframes with multitudes of seedlings are also coming on. There are smaller batches of L. Sargentiæ, which blooms a little later, L. Henryi and L. Thayeræ.

Patrick Welch has a fine display of Lilium regale at his store and is shipping many to distant points. He also has excellent Cattleya Mendelii, valley, Beauty roses and sweet peas.

E. P. Matsen, of Reading, is bringing in fine batches of sweet williams, larkspurs, sweet peas and asparagus.

Miss R. A. Washington, one of the few lady growers for the Boston market, is cutting fine crops of gaillardias, cosmos and bachelor's buttons. Her greenhouses are in North Stoughton.

John McFarland, of North Easton, is finishing the planting of his Bonnaffon mums, in which he specializes. He has propagated his usual large lot of poinsettias. At present he is cutting longiflorum lilies and valley in quantity.

The W. W. Edgar Co. is putting thousands of cyclamens and begonias into their flowering pots. All are in splendid condition. The company is having a large sale on tubs of hydrangeas. Work is being pushed on a fine new residence for Mrs. W. W. Edgar.

H. Zum Brunnen, of Auburndale, is in the market with a fine lot of sweet peas and sweet sultans. The last-mentioned flower is quite popular here during the summer.

A. R. Smith, of Newton, is already cutting cosmos, in addition to bachelor's buttons and sweet peas.

PARKER'S FLOWER STORE

John A. Nelson, of Framingham, is busy pulling out his carnations and has one house of Matchless already planted. His stock has made an excellent growth in the field this season.

Ernest H. Borowski, of Roslindale, who was severely injured in an automobile accident about six weeks ago, now is making a satisfactory convalescence.

W. N. C.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Market.

Good indoor stock was limited in quantity last week and the long dry spell has curtailed the outdoor supply. However, there is enough for the small demand. Roses have fallen off in supply and first-class stock was hard to obtain. The local supply of carnations is off quality, but a few fancy flowers were being shipped in.

Gladioli are in good supply. Easter lilies are in demand for funeral work. There promises to be a short crop of asters, disease, it is said, having killed half the plants. Good sweet peas are scarce. Shasta daisies are in abundance and the demand is not equal to the supply. Snapdragons, coreopsis, gaillardias, cornflowers, candytuft and feverfew are in good supply. Valley has a demand, but is scarce. There is a good demand for green. Flat ferns are plentiful, but good smilax is not.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting July 11 on the grounds of the Bourdet Floral Co., Magnolia and Tower Grove avenues. President Bourdet presided over the meeting, which was held on the lawn under the big shade trees near his home.

The trustees reported that final arrangements have been made for the annual picnic, to be held July 26 at Ramona park.

Letters in reference to plans for the National Flower Show next spring from President R. C. Kerr and Secretary John Young, of the S. A. F., were read.

publicity committee, made an interesting report regarding plans for the parade preceding the picnic July 26.

Arthur Beyer, who is with F. C. Weber, made application for membership.

W. S. Wells, secretary of the Missouri State Florists' Association, said that the association would hold its next meeting at Columbia, Mo., during the last part of August.

The following nominations for officers of the club were made: President, Jules Bourdet; vice-president, August Hummert; secretary, J. J. Windler; treasurer, W. C. Smith; trustee for three years, W. A. Rowe.

It was decided to contribute $25 to the Red Cross Society.

A campaign for memberships in both the club and the S. A. F. will be waged by a committee composed of W. J. Pilcher, A. S. Cerny and W. C. Smith.

The local committee, which will coöperate with the National Flower Show committee in making arrangements for the show next spring, will be composed of Jules Bourdet, chairman; H. C. Irish, J. J. Beneke, W. W. Ohlweiler and August Hummert.

The club adopted the resolutions of respect presented by a committee appointed to act on the death of Alexander Siegel.

Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, invited the club to hold its August meeting at his place. The invitation was accepted.

After the meeting President Bourdet entertained the members at luncheon.

Various Notes.

Jules Bourdet spent July 10 on a fishing trip.

The publicity committee of the Florists' Club held a meeting at Windler's wholesale house July 10 and made arrangements for the floral parade to precede the annual picnic July 26. Florists wishing to enter a decorated automobile should see W. C. Smith, chairman of the committee.

Misses M. S. Newman and Armstrong have gone to Colorado for their vacations. They expect to return September 1.

The St. Louis Seed Co. held its annual meeting July 12 and elected the following officers: President, N. B. Pantler; vice-president, August H. Hummert; second vice-president, H. Hiselmeyer; secretary, J. A. Rau; treasurer, H. Stratmann. The annual report showed a larger volume of business during the last year than ever before in the company's history.

George Waldbart recently was elected vice-president of the Grand Avenue bank.

Fred J. Foster, who recently purchased the greenhouse establishment of A. J. Bentzen, on Marcus street, is overhauling the place and announces that he will grow ferns and decorative plants.

W. C. Smith is contemplating making an automobile trip to Colorado, where Mrs. Smith is spending the summer with friends.

The Kelly Floral Co., 1805 Olive street, has gone into the hands of a receiver. July 16 Jules Bourdet, F. A. Windler and August Hummert appraised the property and will report to the receiver. Edward Kelly, the proprietor, is said to have left St. Louis.

C. Young & Sons Co. has a number of ducks in its display window. They are attracting much attention.

Albert Gumz, of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., who recently suffered a fractured rib, is able to be back at the store after an absence of ten days.

Raymond Welty, with the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co., is away on a two weeks' vacation. James Bishof, of the same company, has returned from two weeks spent at St. James, Mo.

Many of the retail stores will be closed during the afternoon of July 26 for the Florists' Club picnic. Art nity to see floral tributes that ran the entire gamut, from the artistic to the ridiculous. Senator Young, besides being prominent politically, was for thirty years secretary of the Maryland Institute and School of Design; he was a member of many fraternal organizations, from the Masons down; through his son, who is a prominent actor, he was in a way connected with the theatrical profession. He was a great lover of flowers, and one of the duties of his secretary was to provide him with a white carnation each morning, for his coat. He was never seen on the street without it.

I relate this bit of biography of the man to give some idea of the sources of the great mass of flowers at his funeral. All of the organizations, etc., were represented by floral tributes. There were palls, casket crosses, wreaths and bunches, from the best stores in the city, that were specimens of floral art, together with designs from the various societies, and it was apparent that expense was not considered. There were tributes from those in the more humble walks of life that had been purchased in the market; and, let me say right here, in some of the cheaper designs one could not help but see that the designers had used thought, and with the material at hand had made designs that were a credit to them.

Emblems Sometimes Hard to Handle.

Of other designs, especially those from some of the organizations, the same could not be said. I will cite one case, and this was not the only one, but it will show what I am trying to get at.

The offering of a patriotic society was a cross and miter resting on an easel. Everything about this design went to show that expense was a small matter with those who ordered it. Now just try to imagine the cross, which was fairly well made of red and white flowers, and the miter, the most prominent part of the piece, of purple immortelles, and faded ones at that. This was during the latter part of June, when cornflowers or blue larkspurs could have been had, and no doubt at less cost than the immortelles.

There is no one who knows better than the writer that emblems of societies often tax the ingenuity of the designer, in order to carry out the idea of the emblem and at the same time harmonize the colors; but in this case there certainly was no excuse. I have always maintained that the florist whose customers are those who buy flowers only for a funeral, is the one who should give the most study to his work, for they are the people who at such a time can be depended upon to think of something impossible in flowers.

Or a Keg for a Brewer?

I remember the funeral of a police captain some years ago. Nothing would do for his men but a representation of a patrol wagon, with the horses hitched to it. No amount of persuasion could change their minds. Every detail about the wagon had to be worked out, for it was not a question of expense with them. They wanted that and nothing else. In a case of that kind, no matter how much the sensibilities of the designer may be hurt, there is nothing to do but give them what they want, and in such cases the writer has found that the more attention paid to details the more pleased the buyers will be with the design.

In my experience I have found that these are not the only persons whose whims have to be catered to. For instance, Mary Johnston told me of a case in which a woman had lost a child through an accident. The heartbroken mother could think of nothing but the child at play in a field of daisies at their country home, it being the season when these flowers were at their height. Nothing would do for her but a pall of daisies, and her idea was to have it made as though the child were at play and just scattered an armful of daisies over the green. Mrs. Johnston said it made a beautiful pall.

Another unique pall was made by Miss Cook. A customer's favorite flowers had been cornflowers, and the family would have nothing but a pall of these. Miss Cook assured me that it was a most handsome piece, with a cluster of White Killarneys in the center to relieve the intense blue.

Often the florist will be called to help the bereaved to decide on the funeral flowers for the deceased, who was an old customer. The florist will remember, no doubt, some eccentricity of the departed regarding flowers, and he should make this the basis of his suggestions. Little things such as these go to make the good florist, and it is good for the florist to get out of the beaten path.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

J. C. ROBINSON, of the Robinson Seed Co., Waterloo, Neb., spent his vacation at Akeley, Minn.

RECORD is made under "Obituary" of the death last week of Ludwig Teweles, of Milwaukee, Wis.

HOLLAND exporters now make the unqualified statement that bulbs will be shipped to America as usual this season.

WE are threatened with meatless days to follow the wheatless meals and there are reports that almost beetless days are in prospect.

NOW that seed selling has ceased for the season, the trade is taking hold of the many problems connected with next year's supply. Seed stocks never have been so severely depleted, nor sources of supply so restricted.

THE A. A. Berry Seed Co., Clarinda, Ia., now is classed as a million dollar concern, the sales for last season having run into seven figures. At the stockholders' meeting July 10 steps were taken to increase the capital stock from $300,000 to $500,000.

ARTICLES of incorporation for the Cache Valley Seed Co., of Smithfield, Utah, providing for an authorized capital stock of $25,000, have been filed with the secretary of state by J. C. McCann, president; W. H. Smith, vice-president; R. H. Smith, secretary-treasurer.

THERE will be considerable difference in the cost of Japanese bulbs this season, due to differences in the cost of freight. Those who some time ago contracted for steamer space will save money by it. It is said the present rate is four times what large shippers paid before the war.

A HEAVY hail storm visited Rocky Ford, Colo., July 3. In the Arkansas valley, where is planted a large acreage of seed crops, the storm did heavy damage. Cucumbers and melons were especially hard hit. Some garden beans also were damaged. As a result of the storm the supply of seeds from this district will be short.

THERE seems to be considerable diversity of opinion as to the condition of peas in Wisconsin. They were reported good in late June, but last week a well known seedsman was quoted as having said July 6 that he had talked to many canners, none of whom expected over two-thirds of a crop, most of them much less. But July 13 the U. S. Bureau of Crop Estimates issued a report of condition as of July 1, putting the Wisconsin pea crop at eighty-four per cent, against sixty-eight a year ago. The Michigan canners' pea crop is put at eighty-two per cent, against seventy a year ago. The correspondents were asked to estimate on the basis of 100 representing normal.

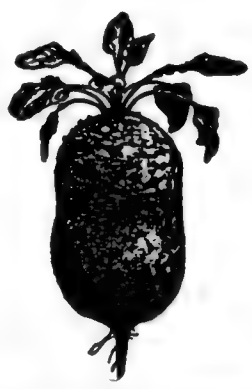
U. S. BUREAU OF MARKETS.



W. A. Wheeler Explains Aims.

Speaking before the annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association at Detroit June 19 on "Coöperation Between Seedsmen and the U. S. Department of Agriculture," W. A. Wheeler, specialist in seed marketing for the Bureau of Markets of the department, explained the working of the bureau, which became known by its present name July 1.

During the last year some constructive work in seed marketing had been undertaken by the bureau, Mr. Wheeler said. Field studies of the marketing of grass and clover seeds had been made and it was hoped that the results would be available for publication in the near future. It is planned to inaugurate a seed and hay market reporting service, so that reliable information relative to the surplus of grain, seeds and hay may be available at all times.

ing a market for seed, will be of inestimable value to seed growers, dealers and consumers,'' declared Mr. Wheeler. ''This agency could be made an effective instrument in securing the distribution and utilization of the product of improved varieties and prevent their use in industrial ways when required for seed purposes.

Market Reporting Service.

''In the market reporting service contemplated, the information used in compiling the weekly or biweekly reports would be obtained from voluntary market reporters, among the seed and grain trade and traveling assistants in marketing, who would be employees of the Department of Agriculture. The voluntary reporters would consist of those correspondents located in each county who can report with reference to conditions in the county in which they are located, and other correspondents who can report conditions over large areas. The single county correspondents would be selected from country dealers and shippers, county agents, and others who may be suitable and available; the correspondents reporting for several counties will be chosen from large shippers, jobbers and others.

''In addition to the voluntary correspondents, there will be others specially selected from the important marketing and production centers. They will be paid for their services, to make more comprehensive reports on market conditions in their respective markets, with reference to the commodities covered.

WHY THIS UNUSUAL ACTION IS TAKEN AT THIS TIME

Randall Japanese Lily Bulbs are superior and positively will produce. They are the select product of Japanese bulb-growing industry, and are sold through a reputation of quality. We are not only willing to back up this assertion, but we are going to do so right here and now.

Practically every dealer who has bulbs to sell has told you they are the best. Sold only on quality, not price. They know you realize that an inferior bulb is a poor investment at any price. But you cannot know what the bulbs are until you have bought them.

Therefore we are going to give you the opportunity of knowing exactly what our bulbs are like, and prove to you before you place your fall order that our claim of quality is justified.

THE OFFER

FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

We have only 200 cases of cold storage Lily Bulbs on hand and are, therefore, obliged to limit our offer to any one grower to not more than 5 cases, so that a larger number may take advantage of the offer.

These bulbs are 7/9 Giganteum. Packed 300 to the case, and ready for immediate delivery.

Only 1 to 5 cases to the customer and orders taken subject to stock unsold.

PREPARE NOW
for Next Spring's Demand for PANSY PLANTS

Americans will probably follow the European custom of wearing Pansies to show that the wearer has friends at the front. This will mean a big demand for plants. Be prepared to get your share of the business by sowing Toole's Pansy seed now.

TOOLE'S GIANT PRIZE STRAIN is American grown, and is better than imported seed. Repeated tests have proved that it germinates better, the plants are more vigorous, the flowers are larger and more beautiful. The seed-pods are hand-picked from plants selected for size and beauty of flower. Send your order direct at these prices:

Packet, 25c; Trade packet of 1000 seeds, 40c; ⅛ ounce, 90c; ¼ ounce, $1.25; 1 ounce, $5.00.

Toole's Giant Prize Strain can be furnished in the following mixtures:—Browns, Reds, Yellows, Blues, Black and White. We can also furnish seed of Masterpiece and the fancy sports, such as Fire King, Freya, Silver Edge, etc., at the same prices.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

Seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

All sorts and mixtures except where noted are: $5.00 per oz., $1.25 per ¼ oz., 5000 seeds, $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 25c; any 5 packets, $1.00. Please order by number.

22. GIANT KENILWORTH STRAIN. The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3½- to 4-in. It is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.
24. GIANT KENILWORTH SHOW. An extra fine strain of large flowers; the immense flowers are of circular form and great substance. A beautiful collection of colors and markings.
26. GIANT KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE. Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 in. long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.
28. GIANT MASTERPIECE. A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance; large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stem.
30. GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES. A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich, velvety colors; reds are particularly conspicuous; the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large, dark blotches.
32. GIANT PARISIAN. The flowers are of enormous size and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground; an unusually showy mixture.
34. GIANT BRONZE. A fine mixture of all shades of velvety brown, bronze, Havana brown, mahogany and copper shades.
36. TRIUMPH OF GIANT. Remarkably beautiful. The imposing five-spotted flowers on long, vigorous stalks surmount the foliage in the most graceful manner, are of enormous size, perfectly round and of unusual substance. The individual petals are very broad and cover each other in such a manner as to make the flowers appear almost double, the border of every petal being conspicuously curled. The plants are of a robust growth and form compact bushes of a round shape.

10. KENILWORTH GIANT EXHIBITION is the very finest complete mixture ever sent out. Seed carefully saved only from marked plants of the best varieties, with the largest and best shaped flowers and richest coloring. It is impossible to convey an adequate idea of the delightful variations in color and markings of this unrivaled mixture. 500 seeds 30c, 1000 seeds 50c, ⅛ oz. $1.35, ¼ oz. $2.50, oz. $10.00.

New Early-flowering, or Winter Blooming

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow with dark eye.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with dark eye.
16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.
18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations.

500 seeds 25c, 1000 seeds 40c, ⅛ oz. $1.10, ¼ oz. $2.00, oz. $7.50.

20. PRINCESS. (The New Upright Pansy.) This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture on heavy stem carried well above the foliage. Attractive by brilliancy of its colors.

40. GIANT BATH'S EMPRESS. The finest of fancy English Pansies. Flowers are very large, mostly frilled and blotched and of great substance and the colors are brilliant and varied.

70. ORCHID-FLOWERED, Mixed. A dwarf, free bloomer, with a range of delicate colors that do not exist in any other Pansies; a remarkable combination of light rose, shell pink, blush mauve, fawn, light brown, orange and chamois.

GIANT PANSY SEED

In Separate Colors

38. Mme. Perret. Red and wine shades.
42. Adonis. Light blue, white center.
44. Black. Almost coal black.
46. Giant Apollo (Masterpiece type). New bronze, veined and blotched.
48. Lord Beaconsfield. Purple, shaded white.
50. Goliath. Large, curled yellow, blotched.
56. Light Blue Shades.
58. Indigo Blue. Deep, velvety blue.
80. Purple. Large, rich deep color.
84. Mercury. New. A deep blackish purple, really self-colored.
86. Pres. McKinley. Yellow, dark blotched.
90. Vulcan. Dark red, with five blotches.
92. Victoria. Blood red, violet blotches.
94. Red. A collection of rich, red shades.
98. Psyche. Curled white, with five blotches.
100. Yellow. With dark blotch.
102. Yellow. Large golden yellow.
104. White. With violet blotch.
106. White. Large satiny white.
110. The preceding 19 colors mixed in equal proportions.

tion received would be tabulated in a district office and distributed immediately to those interested in the same district or in other districts, so that the information would be available immediately. Telegraphic reports would be received from the principal markets, so that the latest information would be had from such sources. It is contemplated that at the end of each month a complete tabulation of the reports from all districts for the month would be prepared at Washington, and be available for general distribution.

"Careful studies and investigations would be made through reports from correspondents in various districts as to supplies, requirements and prices. An endeavor would be made to ascertain and correct if possible any inequalities in prices that may exist in certain commodities, thereby bringing about a more equitable distribution of profits for those commodities.

"The value of this service depends to a large extent on the coöperation between seedsmen and the department in obtaining accurate and reliable information. The agencies which coöperate in giving the greatest service would naturally be the ones to be benefited in the greatest measure by the market reporting service. In reality the department would be acting as a disinterested clearing house for market information on the commodities covered. The reports of individual dealers would, of course, be kept strictly confidential and any information received from them would be used only in a general way in the tabulation of reports of totals for localities or districts, and would never be disclosed as to source or origin."

Louisville, Ky.—Bruno W. Alberts is one of the numerous class of florists who began as amateurs. His specialty is orchids and he has so increased his stock of plants that he will have considerable quantities to wholesale this season.

Clyde, O.—Arthur Doebel, who recently sold his greenhouse establishment at Norwalk, O., has purchased the range and business of the Clyde Floral Co. and will continue under the firm name of Arthur Doebel & Sons. The Clyde range consists of 16,000 feet of glass and seven and one-half acres of land. Mr. Doebel now has 25,000 geraniums in the field.

Terre Haute, Ind.—While the backward spring in many ways upset the program of things, it was a good thing in one respect, say F. Wunker & Sons, in that it made the planting out business good throughout June, a month during which there usually is plenty of time. The growers here now are busily engaged with the new carnation and mum plants, and are plugging up the holes left by a hail storm in the spring. The cost of coal is worrying, but most of the florists expect to survive the bills.

Sioux City, Ia.—Julius Lehman, a former member of the firm of Rocklin & Lehman, and William Newman, for six years designer for the same concern, have acquired the J. R. Elder store and renamed it the Art Flower Shop.

Ashtabula, O.—The city council has granted the permission asked by E. A. Adams & Sons, C. C. Phelps & Son, R. W. Griswold, the Lake Shore Greenhouse Co., the Tong & Weeks Co. and the Ashtabula Lettuce & Vegetable Co. to extend gas mains across several streets to their greenhouse establishments. Natural gas here is cheap and will be used to partly replace coal.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

A REPORT of the fifteenth annual convention of the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen, held at Tacoma, Wash., July 11 to 13, will be found in the Nursery Department of this issue.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

It was another quiet week, with practically nothing but funeral work to clean up the stock. The shipping business has been better, but it would have been heavier had good shipping stock been obtainable. As it is, many complaints are made.

Carnations remain poor, and roses are of fair quality only. Gladioli are fine and ship well. Centaureas are good, but sweet peas are poor. Cornflowers of satisfactory quality may be had; asters are of medium grade. Dahlias are arriving more plentifully and have improved in quality. Orchids and valley are scarce.

Various Notes.

S. Murata & Co. received a carload of sphagnum moss this week from Wisconsin, the first to arrive in Los Angeles this season. On account of the scarcity and the consequent high prices of this article, green moss has been selling well, but the bog moss is more popular with the florists and therefore is moving freely. The firm also reports the arrival of the new crop of field carnations.

Frank W. Nelson, of the California Cut Flower Co., returned from his eastern trip July 3. He reports an interesting time on his journey, but on the way home he was held up by a big washout on the Denver & Rio Grande. His mother, whom he hardly expected to see alive, fortunately has recovered her health.

O. M. Morris, of the Morris & Snow Seed Co., and a party of friends left July 6 for a camping trip to Bear valley, going by way of the desert. This is an old stamping ground of Mr. Morris, who likes to get back to his old haunts. He leaves behind an able lieutenant in his son, Albert. Since recovering from the fire many improvements have been made in the store and fixtures, and the establishment now is one of the best and most up-to-date in the city.

Arthur Gleave, proprietor of Gleave's Flower Shop, Santa Barbara, is paying us a visit this week. He reports stock scarce on account of the hot weather and the recent brush and forest fires, which have decimated hundreds of acres of forest and other plantings there and in Ventura county. Business is quiet, says Mr. Gleave, but this is to be expected at this time.

W. J. Treadup, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, is in town calling on the trade.

Fred Sperry, of the L. A. Floral Co., has returned from a trip to Wheeler's springs.

J. Dieterich is busy repairing the greenhouses at Montebello. A good deal of the piping in the heating system has to be renewed and the pipe supports repaired. The whole place will be put in thorough running order during the summer and will be ready for next season's work.

The Bauer Pottery Co. has purchased the entire stock of pots of the Standard Pottery, and the latter concern will cease to make flower pots after this date. The Bauer people are considering the purchase of the pot-making machinery of the Standard Pottery.

W. W. Felgate, of Sierra Madre, sent a small but choice collection of vegetables and fruit to the meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society July 11, at which President James Taylor read a paper on vegetable growing.

Robert Newcomb, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago has been suffering from a severe cold, but stuck to business gamely. He reports a good call for baskets.

A. J. Verhelle, of the Kentia Nurseries, Santa Barbara, is in town for a few days calling on the trade. He drove down and is using his machine to get around with. Business has been excellent, he says. H. R. Richards.

SPOKANE, WASH.

Hot weather has brought the usual condition of medium and poor stock, but as business most of the time simply "isn't," it does not seem to matter much what the quality of stock is. Roses are not plentiful and the quality is only fair. Carnations are generally poor in quality, though markedly plentiful. Good sweet peas arrive from the outdoor growers.

July weddings have been many and have supplied the occasions for some original decorations. During the last week the Spokane Florist Co. and Eugene's Flower Shop have had elaborate creations for society nuptials.

W. S. Hoyt and Samuel Younkin were partners in an auto trip through the southern part of the state last week. They report extremely dry conditions in the regions visited, with the crops badly in need of rain.

Under the skillful hand of Alfred Jacobson the new range of the H. L. Olsson Co., Inc., is rapidly nearing completion. No finer piece of greenhouse building can be found in this section. The range consists of two houses, each 29x200, and one propagating house 15x90. Another house similar to the propagating house will be constructed later in the fall. Carnation planting will begin in the new houses this week.

Frank Nawrochi, who only a few weeks ago accepted a position with the Martin & Forbes Co., of Portland, was called back to this city by a message from his wife, telling him that their home here had been burned to the ground, a complete loss. No one was at home at the time of the fire. Mr. Nawrochi left for Portland with his family after spending a few days here arranging business affairs.

E. Stapleton and family have removed to Duluth, Minn., where Mr. Stapleton has a position as designer with the Duluth Floral Co.

E. A. Hedger, generally known to the trade as "Ted," acquired a son-in-law last week when his daughter, Luella, was married to C. W. Buchanan.

L. B. H.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

July usually is the quietest month of the year, and this year probably will be no exception to the rule, although the midsummer dullness does not seem to be so acute as in previous years, judging from the light accumulations of stock at the wholesale houses from day to day. So far the number of weddings is greatly in excess of those of last July and many orders have been booked for the remainder of the month. The feature of last week's business was funeral work, however.

There has been little change in the stock situation since the last report. More first-class roses could be used, although the average quality is well up to expectations, considering the season of the year. American Beauties are almost unobtainable, either good or bad. Other varieties of roses show the effects of the hot weather. Ulrich Brunner seems to be holding its own comparatively well; also Russell. Carnations have improved in quality, but there is little demand for them. The first crop of gladioli will soon be over. They are featured extensively and quantities of them find an outlet. Their principal rival is giant zinnias, which meet with great popularity. The flowers are splendid this year; some of the florists claim they are the best ever seen here.

The cut of dahlias is increasing daily. Orchids are scarce and valley also is on the short side of the market. A limited quantity of indoor chrysanthemums cleans up without much difficulty, though it cannot be said they are greatly sought after. Lilium auratum has a strong demand and a nice cut of rubrum lilies is expected in a week or ten days. A few celosias are arriving, but the color of the flowers as yet is not good.

Various Notes.

At the monthly meeting of the California Floral Society, July 13, R. P. Reed delivered an interesting lecture on "Weeds and Their Usefulness as Foods." The lecture was followed by a general discussion of horticultural phases of food conservation.

The Misses Hannon have taken a cottage on the Russian river, near Healdsburg, in Sonoma county, for six weeks. During that time they will take turns vacationing and looking after the store. They report business well up to normal for this season of the year.

Frank Thatcher has resumed his duties with Pelicano, Rossi & Co. after a two weeks' vacation at Lake Tahoe. J. W. Keegan was the next to get away. He is visiting Los Angeles, San Diego and other southern points. Charles Dietzus also is on his vacation. Frank Pelicano is back at the store, after a forced absence on account of illness, and A. J. Rossi is gaining as rapidly as can be expected. Mr. Pelicano makes a specialty of dahlia growing, and he is now bringing in a fine cut of Delice, Mrs. Kettlewell and other varieties.

Victor Podesta, of Podesta & Baldocchi, left July 12 for an extended motor trip, taking in Tahoe and the Yosemite. He is accompanied by his family. His partner, N. F. Baldocchi, appeared at the store the first of the week greatly improved in health as the result of a three months' rest.

M. Domoto, of Domoto Bros., is of the opinion that business is good generally for the season. He reports a fine demand for auratum lilies, also for rubrums, although the latter will not be plentiful for another week.

W. Wagner, of Joseph's, last week returned from his vacation, and the next to leave were "Heine" Cooper, who plans to tour the Sacramento valley, and Bert Harris, who is going to San Diego.

The C. Kooyman Co., Inc., has added a new department for the painting of its own baskets. The specialist who does the work is producing some wonderful soft-tone effects.

J. Onishi, of the United Flower & Supply Co., did so well with statice this year that he plans to increase the crop largely next year. One customer took about all he had this season. He comments upon the unusually close clean-up at the market each day for this time of the year, which leads him to believe that the shipping business is active and that there is a good city trade.

The Francis Floral Co. had the decorative work at the Fairmont hotel recently for the big Red Cross celebration. The company's services were rendered gratis for the good of the cause. This firm reports more weddings than usual for July.

As soon as his employees have taken their vacations, which will be by the latter part of July, Julius Eppstein, who conducts the stand in the St. Francis hotel, plans a trip east of several weeks' duration. Miss Beecher and Joseph Sheib are away now in southern California. S. H. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

There was an abundance of stock in the market last week, but it was not of the best quality. Such annuals as godetias, zinnias and salpiglossis are in evidence and the public is beginning to appreciate them. Business improved last week, there being considerable funeral and social work. The convention of the National Educational Association helped business somewhat.

Various Notes.

S. A. Lubliner, who is spending his vacation at Walla Walla, Wash., expects to remain in that city until August 1.

Oscar Moeller has closed his flower store on Alder street. He expects to move to Astoria, where he will open a store, there being but one in that city.

Clarke Bros. had the decorations for the convention of the National Educational Association. W. G. W.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

Favorable weather has brought an abundance of outdoor stock. Sweet peas are coming in and are of good color, with long stems. Roses are overplentiful and are taking the place of indoor stock for funeral and all kinds of made-up work. Canterbury bells are almost off the market. Delphinium is also on the decline. Bachelor's buttons are plentiful and meet a good demand. Peonies are off the market. Dahlias are just showing color. Business in general has kept up beyond expectation for this season, weddings and social affairs being responsible.

Various Notes.

The Hayden-Watson Co. received the order for the Weyerhauser wedding decoration and bouquets. This was one of the smartest affairs of the season. The decoration was carried out in pink and white Canterbury bells, phloxes, delphiniums and gypsophilas. The bride's bouquet was of Shasta daisies and maidenhair, with a shower of the same.

This year's dahlia show will be held during the first part of September, the date not having been fixed definitely at the last meeting of the Dahlia Society. All proceeds above expenses will go to the Red Cross. The displays will be divided into two classes, one for large and one for small growers. Among the large growers the professionals will have a free field with the amateurs. The officers of the society are: Presi-

FISCHER'S SPLENDENS

A MAGNIFICENT LAVENDER FREESIA

The only commercial colored Freesia in the world, not to be compared or judged in the same class with any other colored Freesia. It stands alone for size, strength, beauty and fragrance. The flowers are very large, with long, heavy stems with foliage reaching well up the stems, and are highly fragrant.

It is a Freesia that will stand the test of time and will be grown by all florists when stock can be offered at commercial prices. Was awarded a Certificate of Merit at the Pasadena Flower Show.

Stock is limited; send in your orders as soon as possible. Is offered in two shades of color, a bluish lavender and a reddish lavender. Only good sized, flowering bulbs are offered. PRICE: Per dozen, $3.50; per 100, $20.00.

Schiller's Primroses

"The Strain That Leads"

OUR PRIMROSES, grown as usual from the best strains in existence, are ready again. The plants are all grown outside in frames, short, stocky and full of life. All our obconicas are from our own seed, seed-bearers selected from thousands of plants. No seed reached this country from our German specialist this season and obconicas of this high-class strain are scarce. Order early and order enough, you know you need them, you know they are very profitable, you know there will be no Azaleas and you know you must have something to fill the gap.

PETER REINBERG, 30 East Randolph St., CHICAGO

Portland was selected as the place of meeting in 1918.

A New Disease of Roses.

Bringing to Tacoma some forty prominent nurserymen of California, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and British Columbia, the convention was one of much interest. The sessions all were open to the public and attendance was encouraged, with the idea of educating the public in the problems of the trade and in the proper planting and care of stock.

Among those present was J. A. Balmer, of Cle Elum, Wash., who called attention to a new disease of roses that came to him on a shipment from a California rose grower now out of business. Hard, knot-like bunches appeared, he said, wherever a growth was cut and also on the roots, some of them attaining the size of a walnut. The matter was regarded as so serious that a special committee was appointed to deal with it, consisting of M. McDonald, of Orenco, Ore.; George C. Roeding, of Fresno, Cal.; J. A. Balmer, of Cle Elum, Wash., and R. A. Stadthalter, of Seattle, Wash.

Reports of the Year.

The first session, following an address of welcome by A. B. Howe, president of the Commercial Club, where the meetings were held, was devoted to reports of officers and committees, in the following order:

Report of vice-presidents—For Oregon, by B. A. Mitchell, Orenco; for California, by A. L. Wisker, Grass Valley; for Utah, by P. A. Dix, Salt Lake City; for Washington, by F. H. Burglehaus, Sumner; for British Columbia, by Richard Layritz, Victoria.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

STORE COAL, INSULL URGES.

Consumers of fuel continue to be warned that unless large quantities of coal are purchased and stored during the summer months there will be a shortage when the demand becomes greater in the fall, the prediction being that lack of maximum production during the next two months will make it impossible to produce the coal needed to supply the demand later.

Following a meeting with a number of Illinois coal mine operators July 14, Samuel Insull, of Chicago, chairman of the Illinois Council of Defense, a body of business men appointed by Governor Lowden to act in conjunction with the National Council of Defense, issued a warning to coal consumers that there is liable to be a famine this fall unless the Illinois mines are kept operating at capacity. He urged consumers to buy and store coal now.

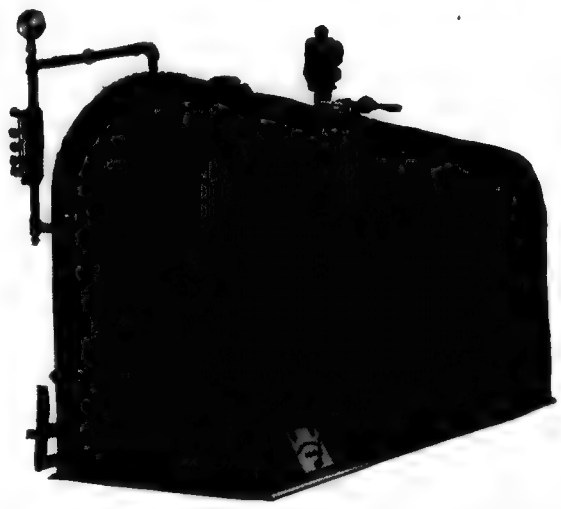
WESTERN COAL FREIGHT RAISED.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, which allowed the eastern railroads to increase rates on coal 15 cents per ton July 1, entered an order July 10 allowing a similar increase by the railroads in the western district to take effect July 15.

This action means that florists west of the Mississippi river will be required to pay an additional 15 cents per ton for coal shipped after July 15.

THE PRICE OF COAL.

Gov. Goodrich, of Indiana, this week showed the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate that the price of coal at the mine recently agreed on by the coal operators and the Peabody committee of the Council of National Defense is nearly 100 per cent too high.



The Indiana governor practically put it up to Congress to enact laws fixing the price of coal or to give some commission that authority, saying that if Congress did not do so he would call a special session of the Indiana legislature to regulate coal prices in his state.

After scoring the price as agreed on by the operators and the Peabody committee, Gov. Goodrich read letters into the record from various Indiana manufacturers showing that the Peabody agreement had caused coal prices to go up instead of down in Indiana.

The same condition exists elsewhere. While consumers are being urged to buy Conserve the National Resources—Eliminate Waste in Your Business.

Begin Now to Do Your Share—It Will Help You and Others.

One of the biggest items of expense in the greenhouse business is the heating question. Why then for fancy's sake do you sit silently by and watch the unnecessary losses of fuel go on day by day?

IT IS YOUR MONEY THAT IS LOST—THE WASTE HARMS EVERYONE. STOP! STOP!! STOP!!!

Many practical growers have solved this vital question. YOU CAN DO SO TOO. The remedy is simple. GET A KROESCHELL—the boiler of unequaled fuel economy—it will pay you well.

Kroeschell Greenhouse Boilers are credited with many remarkable greenhouse heating records. Time and again they have proven to be the quickest water heaters and steam generators in the world. Any kind of fuel will do the work. They are acknowledged the best by test since 1879.

Read What Our Customers Say

A Record for the Winter of 1916-1917

Mr. Wendel is surely pleased with his No. 14 Kroeschell Boiler—it is a PEACH, that is all there is to it. We surely had some winter, which we all know.

Our houses have never been below 52°, and it was not necessary to force our boiler. Best of all, we saved two carloads of coal over a year ago.

(Signed) CROWN POINT FLORAL CO., Crown Point, Ind.
Hans Jepsen, Grower.

No Heat Lost With the Kroeschell

The two No. 46 Kroeschell Water Tube Steam Boilers which you furnished for our new plant surely are giving us satisfactory service. These boilers are internally fired, and ECONOMICAL fuel burners, being very fast steamers. With baffle arrangement such as you have, it consumes all the heat cast from the combustion chamber instead of letting it out of stack.

(Signed) NEW HAVEN FLORAL CO., H. J. C. Leitz.
New Haven, Ind.

Entire Plant Now Heated by Kroeschell's Famous Boilers

We have just placed No. 14 Boiler purchased of you. This takes the place of two cast iron boilers and one 60 H. P. tubular boiler. As we were the first to install one of your boilers on Long Island, it might interest you to know that we want no other kind on our place. This makes three we have, and they do their work economically and are on the job all the time. You may use this letter in any way you wish.

(Signed) JAMES D. COCKCROFT, Northport, L. I.

Kroeschell Uses Only One-half the Coal

Have taken out return tubular boiler which used one-half more coal than the Kroeschell Boiler—it is so easy to regulate that in a few minutes I can run up the temperature by opening drafts.

THE KROESCHELL GREEN HOUSE BOILER — BEST OF ALL FOR HOT WATER HEATING

The Burnham Tubular Boiler Has no Dead Fire Walls —It Reduces Smoke— —Grates Shake in Four Sections—

EVERY part of the Burnham Tubular that holds the fire; or through which the heated gases pass, is water surrounded. In this particular, it is exactly like the Scotch Marine Boilers, so long famous for their economy.

Unlike the marine boiler, however, it has a large four section grate, making fire cleaning thorough and easy.

This four section arrangement of the grate, is both a convenience and economy advantage when fine coal is used, as the fire can be cleaned in sections; the live coal being pulled into one part, while the other part is dumped.

Don't lose sight of the fact that the combustion chamber at the rear of the boiler into which the two large tubes lead, and from which the 4 inch tubes leave, is completely water surrounded.

This is not so with most tubular boilers. As a result, the heat is given off directly into the air instead of being absorbed by the water

Such boilers also generally have clean out doors at the back of this combustion chamber, which soon warp and allow cold air leaks, causing the cooling of the gases.

The clean out door on the Burnham is at the bottom (see number 6), where it is protected from the direct heat and burning gases.

The Burnham is made for water or steam; any size, high or low pressure. It is made in our factory at Geneva, N. Y.

now and keep the mines busy in summer, it is playing directly into the hands of the mine owners, as present prices for coal at the mine mouth are the highest ever known, fixed there with what looks like government sanction.

JURY FREES COAL MEN.

Forty-one bituminous coal operators and sixty-nine companies in Virginia and West Virginia, on trial at New York city on indictments charging violations of the Sherman anti-trust law, were found not guilty July 12 by the jury that heard the evidence during the three weeks of the trial.

The charges grew out of the action of the producers of Pocahontas and New River coal January 1 when they raised the price of coal from these fields from $1.35 to $3 per ton at the mine. The government charged that the operators made an agreement to this effect and thereby entered into a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

During the trial indictments against twenty-three individuals and thirty-nine corporations, who were also among those named in the original batch of indictments, were dismissed.

Morehead Back to Boiler SYSTEM -VS- STEAM PUMP FEED

The Above Temperature Record of condensation returns from a steam pump system was taken under exactly the same conditions for both pump and Morehead System.

Between 2 and 2:30 p. m. the steam pump was cut into the line in place of the Morehead System.

Oh No!

—we don't want you to think that the above temperature chart represents greenhouse conditions

—because this chart was taken on a high pressure line

—but it brings out graphically the great advantages of the

Morehead Back to Boiler SYSTEM

over a steam pump for steam line drainage and boiler feeding.

Substituted for pumps, the Morehead System will keep all steam pipes clear of condensation and return it to the boiler as pure, hot feed water quicker and on 90% less steam than a steam pump will do it.

The installation expense is small—the results great. It matters not whether your institution is large or small, the Morehead System will save sufficient to pay for itself in a a few months' time. Letters in our files prove this. Let us tell you about it.

Thomas Twigg, first for twelve sprays of white sweet peas; first for twelve sprays of pink and first for twelve sprays of any other colors; Mr. Twigg also was given honorable mention for a vase of delphiniums. The thanks of the society were tendered Joseph Mastroaini for three cucumbers.

Later Mr. Twigg gave a short talk on his methods of growing sweet peas, which were interesting. Mr. Johnson, representing R. & J. Farquhar & Co., of Boston, Mass., was present and made a few remarks. Donations were received from C. F. Cartledge and William Noonan for the Red Cross.

The next meeting will be held August 8. The exhibits will be twelve mixed gladioli, twelve potatoes and three ears of corn.

The Sweet Pea Show.

The annual sweet pea show of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at the Glen Cove Neighborhood house July 6. Some splendid varieties of sweet peas were shown, but the features of the show were the perennials and annuals. The judges were Thomas W. Everitt, Robert Jones and Ernest Westlake. Those awarded prizes were:

Harry Goodband, gardener to F. B. Pratt, first for best collection of twelve varieties sweet peas.

Thomas Twigg, gardener to J. E. Aldrid, first for twenty-five sprays white sweet peas; first for twenty-five pink; first for twenty-five blue; first for twenty-five red; second for a vase of liliums and cultural certificate for vase of delphiniums.

James McCarthy, gardener to W. E. Kimball, first for twelve vases of perennials; first for nine vases of annuals; second for twenty-five sprays of white sweet peas; second for twenty-five sprays of pink.

Thomas Flynn, gardener to J. Ottly, second for nine vases of annuals.

Thomas F. Johnston, gardener to G. D. Pratt, first for vase of liliums; second for twelve vases of perennials; cultural certificate for vase of delphiniums; special mention for vase of Japanese irises.

Robert Jones was manager of the show and his services were appreciated by the members of the society.

There was animated discussion of most of the points brought out.

Entertainment Features.

On the first afternoon the visitors were the guests of the Tacoma Automobile Club on a drive around the city. At Point Defiance park refreshments were served on behalf of the park commissioners.

For the second evening the visitors were supplied with tickets for the chorus of the United Swedish Singers of the Pacific Coast, at the Stadium.

After final adjournment the Rotary Club took charge for a trip to the American Lake cantonment.

The Market.

The cut flower market was quiet last week. The stock coming in was good and consisted of Beauties, lilies, roses of most varieties, gladioli, carnations, asters and snapdragons. The market is glutted with greens of all kinds. Business in July so far has been better than in previous years, as those who keep accurate records can prove.

Florists' Club Auto Outing.

The Pittsburgh Florists' Club, in conjunction with the Horticultural Club of Western Pennsylvania and the Horticultural Club of Sewickley, provided its members with an auto outing Wednesday, July 18. Owners of automobiles provided means of transportation for all. The places visited and gardens inspected were: Phipps conservatories, Schenley park; W. L. and A. W. Mellon residences, Homewood cemetery, C. D. Armstrong, where lunch was provided by the committee; the residences of H. C. Frick, W. H. R. Hilliard, Mrs. Hailman, H. J. Heinze, T. M. Armstrong, R. B. Mellon, D. M. Clemson, M. L. Benedum and T. F. Barnsdale; Highland park and Allegheny cemetery.

Various Notes.

Milton Griffith, proprietor of the Griffith Flower Shop, Monessen, Pa., is a member of the Tenth regiment, N. G. P., which was called to mobilize July 15.

Weber & Sons Co., at Oakland, Md., it is learned here, has leased a coal mine in the vicinity of its greenhouses and is mining its own coal.

Arthur Langhans, of Wheeling, W. Va., is adding two greenhouses to his range.

J. M. Johnston, of McKeesport, Pa., has opened a coal mine on his place. Already he has enough coal to supply his needs during the winter and is selling the surplus at a good price.

The Market.

The demand for flowers in the market last week was not any too lively. The arrivals were not unseasonably large and could be easily absorbed. There was a fair supply of American Beauty roses, which met with a moderate demand at prices ranging from $6 to $25 per hundred for specials. Other grades sold at corresponding prices. The supply of hybrid tea roses was much shorter, but the demand for them was weak. Top-grade blooms sold at from $3 to $5 per hundred, while choicer blooms of the preferred varieties brought $6 to $8 per hundred. Bottom-grade blooms sold at 50 cents and $1 per hundred.

The supply of carnations was not large, but was more than sufficient to meet the weak demand. Prices ranged from 25 cents to $1 per hundred. There was a moderate supply of cattleyas, for which there was no particular demand. Prices ranged from 30 cents to 50 cents each. Lily of the valley is not abundant and is selling at from $2 to $5 per hundred. Longiflorum lilies are plentiful. They sold at from $3 to $4 per hundred, with the choicest blooms at $5.

In miscellaneous flowers, there are now coming into the market a few blooms of antirrhinum, calendulas, callas, daisies, bunches of rambler roses, gladioli, delphiniums, sweet peas, gaillardias, coreopsis, centaureas and amaryllis. In greens there are smilax, ferns and asparagus. All of these miscellaneous flowers and greens are moving rather sluggishly, however.

Various Notes.

The closing of the retail flower stores Sundays is reported to be a success. The new order of things went into effect July 1 and the public seems to have cheerfully accepted the change.

Growers are not taking any chances and are doing their best to get supplies of coal at prevailing prices. They say that the high price of coal ought to have an effect on the prices of flowers next winter. Some have succeeded in getting all the coal they want, while others are experiencing difficulties in making satisfactory arrangements.

Helen F. Patten has left for Portland, Me. She will remain for a month in the Maine woods. Miss Patten is a great lover of outdoor sports, especially fishing.

Harry Heinl has gone to Terre Haute, Ind., for a two weeks' stay at the home of his mother.

Frank Peck has returned from a two weeks' fishing trip in northern Michigan. Mr. Peck says that "for a good rest and for one who likes to catch fine fish, Michigan is the place."

The outdoor planting season was much delayed this year by the prolonged cold and rainy weather, but despite this fact retailers and growers report a complete clean-up on all kinds of bedding plants and garden seeds. G. B. S.

Myers & Company, well-known florists of Bluffton, Indiana, write as follows:

Regarding the line of Fertilizer you offer The Greenhouse Trade, will say we have used it the past season with very gratifying results. My only regret is that we did not begin using it sooner. We used it on the carnations, greens, etc., as per your instructions, and have never cut as many or as nice stuff as this season. We also used it on the roses, and the crops of Ophelia beat anything around here. Our soil is a very heavy clay and your line of Fertilizer just fills the bill exactly, when used with plenty of manure in the soil.

Yours respectfully, MYERS & COMPANY,

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The supply of stock in the market is large enough to satisfy the present demand, which is steady and better than it was. The shipping business in greens is large. Roses are in fair supply, a limited number of excellent Ophelia, Russell, Ward and American Beauty roses being available. Carnations are small and few arrive, but those that are available meet with a fair demand. Lilies are selling more easily than at the last writing. Asters are far from abundant as yet, but within a fortnight there should be plenty of them. Some excellent sweet peas may be had. Other offerings include gladioli, rubrum lilies, larkspur, snapdragons and hardy hydrangeas from the south.

Ferns, the new leucothoe and green galax are meeting with a big demand.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell is having a good sale of his new galax and leucothoe.

Mrs. P. J. Olinger is entertaining Miss Margaret Weiland and Miss Elizabeth Kartheiser, of Evanston, Ill.

Chester Roesauer, of the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange, has returned from his vacation.

L. H. Kyrk has been receiving some excellent outdoor lilies. C. H. H.

William Schumann was chosen president of the Cincinnati Florists' Society at the annual election last week. Other officers elected were: James Allen, vice-president; Alex. Ostendarp, secretary; J. Charles Murphy, treasurer. The society decided to pay monthly visits to the establishments of members, with a view of stimulating interest in the organization.

COLUMBUS, O.

Business has been extremely quiet except for spurts of funeral work, and these have been rather far between. Roses have been exceptionally good for this season of the year, with Ophelia in the lead and then Maryland, Hoosier Beauty, Russell and Sunburst. American Beauties are scarce, but the demand is light. Carnations are in short supply and small of size, as the old plants are making way for the new. Mums are doing finely and it seems that the crop will be as large as last year's.

The receipts of gladioli are larger, but as yet there are not enough blooms to go around. Sweet peas have become a drug in the market and it is difficult to dispose of all of them, even at any price. Outdoor flowers are too plentiful and for the most part are moved at sacrifice prices. Lilies, however, are in small supply and hard to find on certain days.

Many of the store workers are at the summer resorts, but those remaining on the job have not, from all appearances, been rushed with work. J. M.

Wampum, Pa.—J. S. Hennon & Sons are not worried over the supply of coal for their greenhouse establishment. Under their place is a "one-man coal mine," and an experienced miner gets out the supply for the firm's range of 40,000 feet of glass.

Gussetless Eave

THE eaves in our Commercial houses are free from cumbersome bracing parts.

It means simplicity in erection, and less shade.

It has always seemed to us that the eave being such a vital point, it should be as free from joints as possible. That's why we make the main supporting members, the post and rafter, in one continuous solid piece from the first purlin to the foot base.

Go into one of our houses and see what a neat, splendid looking piece of construction it is.

It has the strength.

Endurance it has beyond any discussion.

You know we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business.

NEW SOLANUM EUREKA.
The greatest novelty in berried plants for Christmas. This solanum, unlike the old variety, bears its berries on the top of the plant, which gives it the appearance of a solid mass of large red cherries.
The habit of the plant is dwarf and bushy; the fruit is perfectly round, the color a brilliant red and larger than an ordinary cherry.
A 4-inch plant will carry from 150 to 200 berries.

PEONIES FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Planning for Next Season.

Peonies are entering more and more into the life of the people. Recently, when one of the leading lawyers of Minneapolis gave his daughter in marriage, his home was decorated with 2,000 peonies and the preference he thus showed for these flowers was only one instance of what fashionable people were doing throughout the country.

Memorial day is of increasing importance. Then we call a halt; we unfold the past; we look away into the future. And it is the special mission of the florists to supply the most expressive symbols for such occasions. The flowers speak eloquently of the cheer and sympathy of nature. When we sorrowfully laid away the body of my wife, June 21, the flowers seemed to be an introduction to the land "where everlasting spring abides and never-withering flowers."

Reliable Sorts for the North.

Peonies are especially suitable for Memorial day, but in the most northerly states there is always danger of their being a little tardy. A frequent question is, what are the best varieties to plant with Memorial day in view? Pæonia umbellata rosea has never failed to be on time until this abnormal season. It is an attractive variegated light pink. The next in order is the fine old favorite, P. edulis superba. For whites we have Queen Victoria and P. festiva maxima, though sometimes both of these are a little tardy.

We long have needed a good red and we have found it in Richard Carvel. It is among the earliest. In appearance it is radiant and glistening and it is exceedingly fragrant. It seems ready to bloom on the least provocation. I have seen charming flowers produced on it from roots planted the previous fall. Though high-priced, its merits are such that I consider it cheap. The grower should be able to get fifty plants from one in a few years and then the initial cost would seem trifling. Do not forget that September is the planting time.

The Skinner System of Irrigation Plugs Up Profit-Leaks

ONE of your biggest profit-leaks is the dry-weather leak The Skinner System plugs that leak. Plugs it tight. Insures to you for your plants as much water as you want; wherever you want it, and whenever you want it. Distributes that water uniformly in a fine, rain-like spray.

It plugs up the labor cost leak. One man with the Skinner System can do the work of many men without it—and do that work better.

It plugs up transplanting leaks. Puts soil in shape quickly. Cuts down delays and set-backs.

It plugs up the broken plant leak. Its spray is so gentle that it will not injure in the least the finest foliage.

It will not only plug up your profit-leaks, but it will make more profit for you.

Summer Flowers our Specialty

We grow especially for the summer trade large quantities of Beauties, Russells, Hoosier Beauties, Rhea Reid, Ophelia, Sunburst and Double White Killarney. The quality is exceptionally good this season and the advantages of buying direct from a large grower where the flowers are cut, graded and kept chilled until the customer receives them, together with prices no higher than others charge, make our stock a very attractive proposition for the summer demand. Ferns, fresh picked, received daily, $1.50 per 1000. All seasonable flowers not grown by us will be procured for our customers. A trial order solicited.

SIM'S HYBRID YELLOW POLYANTHUS

This is one of my houses, 20x300 feet, of National Flower Show Gold Medal Polyanthus. These have been in bloom constantly since November.

I had two houses of Giant Yellow Polyanthus in full crop at Easter. A Review correspondent saw them March 31st and wrote:

"They include some beautiful varieties, which are being carefully marked and saved for propagation. One bed 300 feet long, of a pale yellow polyanthus, true to type in every plant, was particularly fine. I measured individual flowers two inches in diameter and many of the stalks stood eighteen inches high. Two houses, each 300 feet long, are devoted to this crop, and a glorious sight they are."

But the best of it is they had a glorious sale. You can do as well next season if you order your stock now.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

CHOOSING A SPOT FOR A FLOWER SHOP

In what sort of neighborhood and where in that neighborhood is the best place for a retail flower store? Upon the correct answer to these questions often depends the success of a business venture. Herein are some suggestions on the subject that will be of help to those contemplating a change in location.

SO many favorable elements are required to make a location ideal for a retail flower store that there are few such places in any city. However, as it is upon the selection of a location that much of the success or failure of a retail venture depends, the favorable and unfavorable elements should be carefully considered. It is better to devote time, thought and study to this question before the lease is signed, or the purchase made, and a large sum of money expended on fixtures and advertising, much of which will be a total loss in the event that the location is found to be unsuited to the business.

There are, of course, two classes of retail flower stores—the one in the busy downtown section where a great proportion of the trade is transient; the other in a residence section where most of the sales are made year after year to the same buyers. Picking a location for either of these two types of stores requires study of different characters, but, at the same time, much the same.

There was a time in the florists' business when most of the sales were made to the wealthy, or so-called well-to-do class of people. The last ten years, however, have brought a change. Nowadays everyone buys flowers sometime during the year.

Where Crowds Are.

The flower stores in the business districts of cities catch more of this class of trade than those in residence sections. The traffic past the doors of this type of store is so great that there are sufficient numbers of those making their occasional purchases to keep up a good daily average. It then is a question of rent.

But the proprietor of a store in the outlying section would starve to death if he depended upon transient trade. He must have a class of customers who are fairly regular flower buyers. Hundreds pass his place as against the many thousands that daily see the display windows of the downtown store.

Conditions to be considered in a large city will apply in cities not so large, while in the smaller towns many of the same elements will be found.

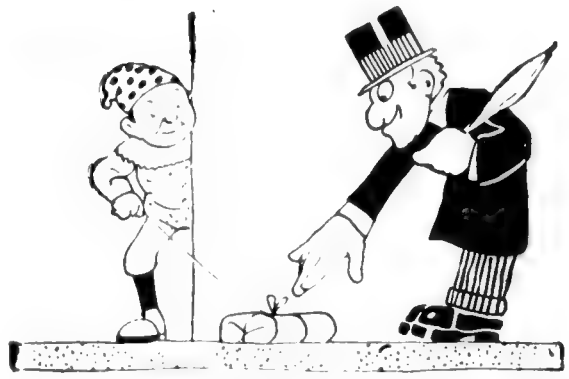
Selecting a location for a flower store in the downtown or business section of a large city has been the rock upon which many florists, who had been successful in other parts of the same city, have foundered.

Reasons for Failures.

They have picked a store in the heart of the retail center; a place that is passed daily by a constant stream of the class of people who are flower buyers. Yet success has escaped them because the rent was too much, or the proximity of the store to another was too close, creating a division of business that turned a former success into a failure and never gave the second store a chance to become a real success.

It is an odd fact that there are few flower stores in the largest cities located on street corners. There are conspicuous exceptions, of course, but the florist usually is "just around the corner," getting as near as possible without contracting to pay the higher rent that a corner location commands. The exceptions to this rule are stores managed by men of special talents.

Flower sales to transients are made during what is generally termed "shopping hours;" that is, between 10 a. m. and 5 p. m., sometimes principally within much shorter hours. There are records of florists looking for a place to start a store making a count of the traffic during these hours in the district picked. This is an arduous task, but the results have been surprising. For instance, one man discovered by this method that during the greater part of the year traffic in shopping hours was twenty-four per cent greater on one side of the street than the other. The one side was in the shade between noon and 5 p. m., drawing the traffic from the sunny side. Two sides of many busy retail streets have sharp distinctions. One side may be devoted to stores and shops catering to high-class trade, the other to department and so-called bargain stores. Needless to say, the people the latter draw are not habitual flower buyers. They buy only for such occasions as holidays, weddings and funerals.



Flower Stores Have Found it Impossible to Earn the Rents Demanded Here.

Dodge Competition.

The success of a florist in a certain location is apt to draw others to the same section. In many cities it is possible to walk several blocks in the business district and find not a single flower store and then come upon three or four grouped either near the four corners or in the middle of the blocks adjoining the corners. By asking the history of these stores it usually will be

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

CHOOSING A SPOT FOR A FLOWER SHOP

In what sort of neighborhood and where in that neighborhood is the best place for a retail flower store? Upon the correct answer to these questions often depends the success of a business venture. Herein are some suggestions on the subject that will be of help to those contemplating a change in location.

SO many favorable elements are required to make a location ideal for a retail flower store that there are few such places in any city. However, as it is upon the selection of a location that much of the success or failure of a retail venture depends, the favorable and unfavorable elements should be carefully considered. It is well to devote time, thought and study to the question before the lease is signed, or the purchase made, and a large sum of money expended on fixtures and advertising, much of which will be a total loss in the event that the location is found to be unsuited to the business.

There are, of course, two classes of retail flower stores—the one in the busy downtown section where a great proportion of the trade is transient; the other in a residence section where most of the sales are made year after year to the same buyers. Picking a location for either of these two types of stores requires study of different characters, but, at the same time, much the same.

There was a time in the florists' business when most of the sales were made to the wealthy, or so-called well-to-do class of people. The last ten years, however, have brought a change. Nowadays everyone buys flowers sometime during the year.

Where Crowds Are.

Retail flower stores in downtown business districts usually catch more of the transient class of trade than stores in residence sections. The traffic past the doors of this type of store is so great that there are sufficient numbers of those making their occasional purchases to keep up a fairly good daily average. It is not a question of that the proprietor of a store in the outlying section would starve to death if he depended upon transient trade. He must have a class of customers who are fairly regular flower buyers. Hundreds pass his place as against the many thousands that daily see the display windows of the downtown store.

Conditions to be considered in a large city will apply in cities not so large, while in the smaller towns many of the same elements will be found.

Selecting a location for a flower store in the downtown or business section of a large city has been the rock upon which many florists, who had been successful in other parts of the same city, have foundered.

Reasons for Failures.

They have picked a store in the heart of the retail center; a place that is passed daily by a constant stream of the class of people who are flower buyers. Yet success has escaped them because the rent was too much, or the proximity of the store to another was too close, creating a division of business that turned a former success into a failure and never gave the second store a chance to become a real success.

It is an odd fact that there are few flower stores in the largest cities located on street corners. There are conspicuous exceptions, of course, but the florist usually is "just around the corner," getting as near as possible without contracting to pay the higher rent that a corner location commands. The exceptions to this rule are stores managed by men of special talents.

Flower sales to transients are made during what is generally termed "shopping hours;" that is, between 10 a. m. and 5 p. m., sometimes principally within much shorter hours. There are records of florists looking for a place to start a store making a count of the traffic during these hours in the district picked. This is an arduous task, but the results have been surprising. For instance, one man discovered by this method that during the greater part of the year traffic in shopping hours was twenty-four per cent greater on one side of the street than the other. The one side was in the shade between noon and 5 p. m., drawing the traffic from the sunny side. Two sides of many busy retail streets have sharp distinctions. One side may be devoted to stores and shops catering to high-class trade, the other to department and so-called bargain stores. Needless to say, the people the latter draw are not habitual flower buyers. They buy only for such occasions as holidays, weddings and funerals.

Dodge Competition.

The success of a florist in a certain location is apt to draw others to the same section. In many cities it is possible to walk several blocks in the business district and find not a single flower store and then come upon three or four grouped either near the four corners or in the middle of the blocks adjoining the corners. By asking the history of these stores it usually will be found that one has been there many years, the others coming later. And it also will usually be found that only one or two are successes, while the others are either breaking even or are losers.

Having discovered which is the spot passed by the most people of the class likely to buy flowers, the would-be florist begins to hunt a store. For right here it might be said that there are no ideal locations for a flower store that are vacant. If the store was vacant it probably would not be suitable either for a flower store or any other kind of store, or it would have been snapped up before.

Instead of going to a renting agent to inquire what the rent of such a place is, the seeker for a store location must find out what are the possibilities of there being a vacancy in the neighborhood he has selected; and if there is going to be a vacancy, how much rent will be required to secure the lease.

High Rent Takes Profits.

Rent is an overhead expense that goes on in dull as in busy seasons. There is no escape. Help and delivery can be increased or decreased as the business demands, but not so the rent.

What proportion of the gross annual sales should be expended for rent? That is a difficult question to answer, because it varies under different conditions. A florist doing a gross business of $10,000 per year cannot afford to pay out so large a percentage of his gross as the one doing $100,000 per year. At the same time, the $10,000-a-year florist will have a higher percentage of profit at the end of the year, although not so much in the aggregate.

High-class residence sections provide the ideal locations for the florist who has not sufficient capital to start a store in the business district, where a much greater investment is required. But there are many things to be considered in selecting a site in a residence district, more, even, than in finding a suitable location downtown.

In Residence Districts.

The questions a florist should find the answers to are:

Are the residents of this neighborhood able to buy flowers?

Are the residents of this neighborhood of a type that likes the good things of life, or are they of the class that has money, but believes in hoarding it?

There is a fine distinction between the latter two classes, as florists have discovered. Many people who have money do not buy so many flowers as others who have less.

Having selected the neighborhood wherein it is believed a flower store will prosper, the choice of a location which is most easily accessible to these people is the next consideration.

Location means little in getting the trade of those who habitually ride in automobiles. Several blocks more or less make no difference to the auto owner. However, distance does make a difference to the car rider.

A man buys flowers, not when he is going to business in the morning, but when he returns from business in the evening. He boards the car on one corner and alights from it diagonally opposite. The latter is the spot. Not on the corner, necessarily, but near enough so that when he gets off the window display will be in the direct line of his vision. His thoughts are of home and it is only natural that, as his eye rests upon the blooms in the window, he will desire to have them whether or not he buys at that particular time.

Getting and Keeping Trade.

This, of course, is what is called transient trade, but a customer has the first time to enter any store. Whether he comes back depends on the service he gets, the quality of the flowers and the nearness of the store to his home. A few stops and satisfying purchases and at no time will he think of flowers that he does not think of the store near his home.

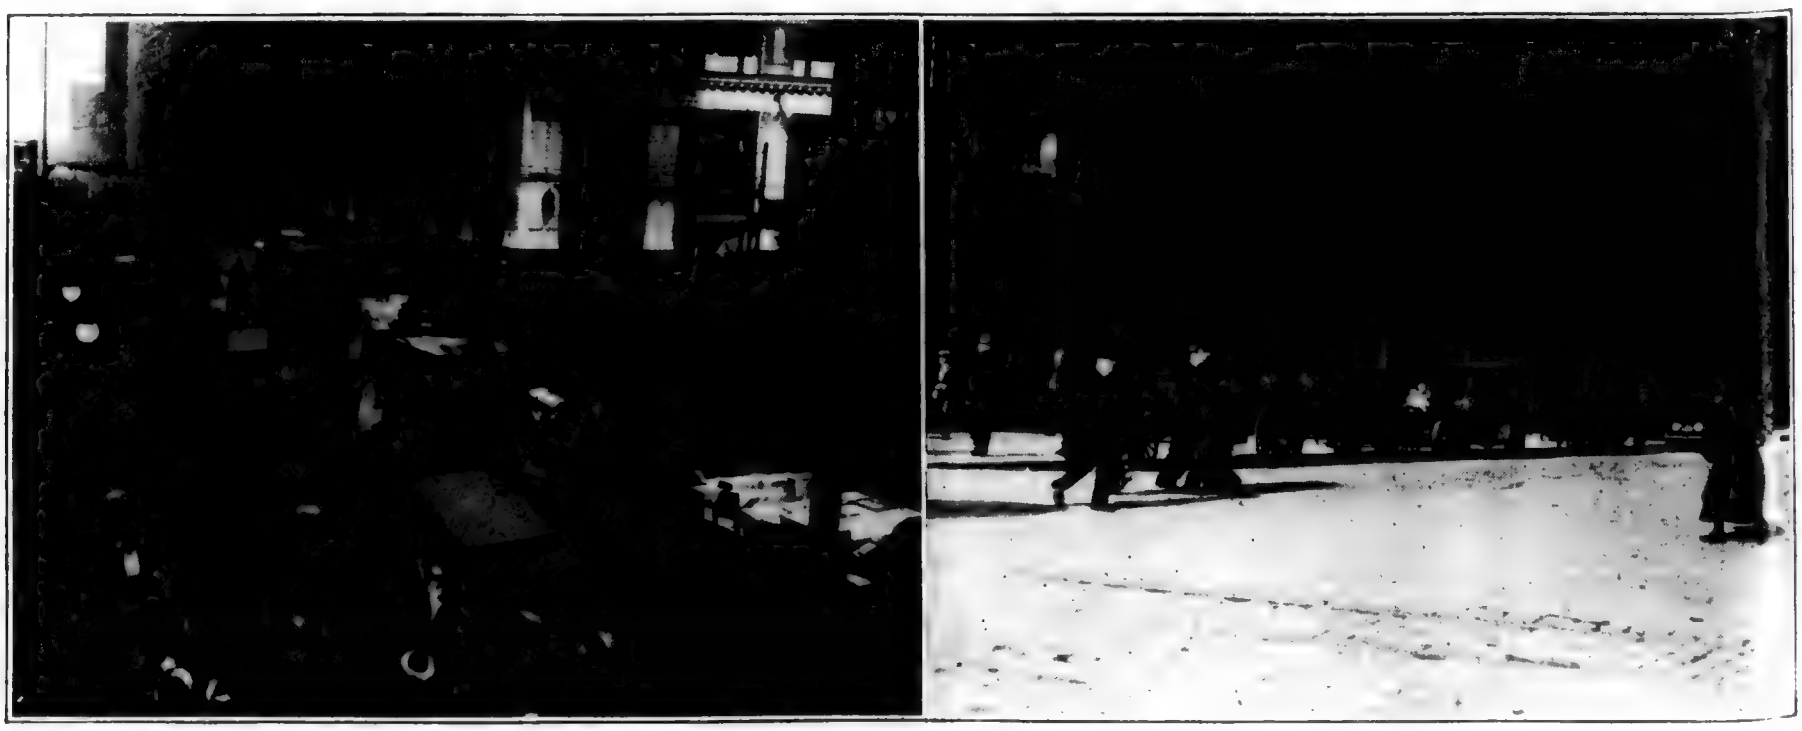
However, there are other considerations than catching the homeward-bound householder, because there are many hours of the day when he is not in evidence.

There are people who go to a certain street daily and rarely, if ever, cross it. Traffic from one direction to that street also is many times of a different character than that from the other. Streets with car lines often are the dividing lines between high-class and the other kind of neighborhoods.

The best location, of course, is where the florists' shop will stem the tide of the better class of pedestrians, even though it is on the opposite side from the spot where the business man gets off the car. This has been proven by the fact that a flower store on the one side has been practically a failure and by moving across the street has been turned into a success.

Building a Business.

New neighborhoods, where apartment houses and homes are rapidly being built and where families are becoming more numerous each year, provide locations where a florist can build up a substantial business that will become better and better as the years pass. One successful florist opened a store in the heart of a high-class residence district many years ago. His business prospered, but gradually the character of the district changed. A majority of his customers moved to more desirable sections, but they continued to buy of the man who had sold them for years. The advent of the auto truck gave him a means by which he could render the same service at a distance of several miles that he gave his customers when they lived but a few blocks away. He built a substantial business in the neighborhood and held that business, despite the change in the character of near-by residents.



Theater and Hotel Buildings.

New theaters and new hotels are always attractions for florists' stores. The character of the patronage these places draw makes them seem favorable locations for flower stores. Sometimes they are and sometimes they are not.

Too much dependence should not be placed on the fact that people going to theaters and to dine at hotels, no matter how high the class of these places, are at the time pleasure seeking and therefore likely to buy flowers. It often happens that they have been provided or have provided themselves with flowers before leaving their homes.

But either one of these locations is good providing there are more than the hotel-dining and theater-going crowds from which to draw patronage. If the neighborhoods in which these places are located are high-class and if the store is so situated that the near-by residents pass it in their ordinary daily movements, there is every reason to believe that the business will be a success.

Selecting a location for a retail store is the first move in starting such a business. But it is a move that ofttimes is made without the consideration it merits. The judgment of the florist in this respect ofttimes is the basis of a substantial success; other times it is the cause of failure. Therefore every favorable and unfavorable condition of location and neighborhood should be carefully weighed.

A GLADIOLUS AND CEDAR SPRAY.

The accompanying illustration of a spray of gladioli by Z. D. Blackistone, Washington, D. C., is interesting because, Mr. Blackistone explains, "we have used ordinary cedar for foliage. Besides being lasting and inexpensive, this, to my mind, combines with gladioli, taking away the stiffness of the flowers better than plumosus, or any other material we have used."

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Savanna, Ill.—C. M. Walter, who was appointed trustee of the Savanna Greenhouse Co. when it went into the hands of a receiver January 13, 1917, has sold the company's greenhouse establishment and business to Joseph W. Dunn, one of the incorporators of the company. Mr. Dunn held a second mortgage for $5,500 on the property and after the company was taken over by the trustee purchased a first mortgage for $4,500 to protect his interests. The trustee under the receivership conducted the business until July 10 in the hope that it might be put on a paying basis and therefore realize something for the unsecured creditors. However, in the six months there was a deficit of $54. Mr. Walter reported to the court that the high price of coal and other commodities, and a decrease in business, made it impossible to earn current expenses. Mr. Dunn paid $500 in cash over and above his claims for the business. This sum enabled the trustee to pay the debts incurred during the receivership, but left nothing for the unsecured creditors. The company was incorporated in 1912 with capital stock of $20,000 to take over the business formerly conducted under the name of Lambert & Dunn and later by Joseph W. Dunn.

St. Louis, Mo.—The stock and fixtures of the Kelly Floral Co., which went into the hands of a receiver recently, were sold at auction July 19. Receiver Evans says the proceeds of the sale together with a number of good book accounts, some of which already have been collected, will give the creditors a considerable per cent of their claims.

WEST OFFERS REWARD.

H. E. West, of Salem, N. J., offers a reward of $50 for information leading to the arrest of one Alphonso De La Mater, described as "tall, dark hair, blue eyes, with tattoo on both forearms." He worked for the H. E. West Co. from June 20 till July 16, when he suddenly disappeared. Mr. West alleges that he took with him valuable jewelry, including two watches and a diamond ring, also forging a check on his employer. Mr. West adds: "He has traveled extensively, even in South America and Panama, but claimed to come from Tennessee last. He had with him an Odd Fellows' traveling card from Athens, N. Y., and made the I. O. O. F. hall his headquarters, duping its members; a willing worker, good talker and of neat appearance. I am offering a reward of $50 for any information leading to his arrest."

TRANSPLANTING PERENNIALS.

Please tell me when I should transplant 3-year-old hardy poppies, gaillardias, Japanese irises, coreopsis, phloxes, hollyhocks and peonies. Should the clumps or roots be divided when transplanted and will they bloom again next year? C. D.—Mo.

All the perennials named can be successfully transplanted in the fall, which is a more satisfactory season than spring for the moving of nearly all hardy perennials. Japanese irises and peonies do better if divided and transplanted earlier than the other varieties; about the end of September in your latitude should be a suitable time. Papaver orientale can be divided and replanted soon after the peonies and irises. Phloxes must be left later, and the last of October would be a good date for these. They also can be divided, but it is well to remember that divided clumps will not give you as fine spikes as young stock raised from soft-wood cuttings in the spring. Hollyhocks can be divided, but it pays better to sow a fresh batch each year, and this is a good time to start them. Coreopsis grandiflora is really only a biennial, but you can divide and transplant C. verticillata about the end of October. All these perennials need well manured and deeply plowed or spaded ground to give the best results. C. W.

LILIES FOR EASTER.

Which of the lilies is the most suitable for growing for Easter this year? Is the Formosa lily, the dark-stem type, any easier to grow for Easter, or better adapted for the purpose?

V. R. F.—Ind.

The Formosa lily is a taller and earlier blooming variety than L. longiflorum giganteum and is better adapted for cutting, but does not make so good a pot plant. It will be advisable to stick to giganteum if you want pot plants, as it is dwarfer and stockier, but if you cut your flowers you should include some of the Formosa, which can be bloomed early in a lower temperature than giganteum. NEW ROSES AT PARIS.

Notwithstanding the great conflict within hearing of Paris, the rose trials at the Bagatelle gardens have continued during the war. The report of the judging of new varieties this season has just come to hand. The gold medals were awarded to two yellow roses, one from Pernet-Ducher, of Lyons, named Mme. Caristie Martel; the other from Alexander Dickson, of Newtownards, Ireland, named Margaret Dickson Hamil. The judges report that both these roses have shown, during the period of their cultivation at Bagatelle, all the points of good roses, including continuous flowering from spring to autumn. Certificates were awarded to the following: Mrs. Mackellar, canary-yellow; Red Star, brilliant red; Henriette, orange tea.

In spite of difficulties of transit, seventy-six roses have been received at Bagatelle this year to be judged in 1918. Two were from America, one of which has not yet flowered. Report says the other, Los Angeles, was raised from Mme. Segond Weber crossed with Lyon rose. It appears to be a valuable rose, with the good points of both parents combined.

BLACK SPOT.

I am having difficulty with black spot on rose plants in the greenhouse. In order to maintain proper growing conditions it is necessary to spray quite frequently. What would you advise using to check or eradicate the trouble? Any information you can give me relative to this will be appreciated.

F. B. W.—Mich.

Black spot is, for most rose growers, the most injurious disease aside from mildew, which does even greater harm. The spot is caused by the fungus commonly known as Actinonema rosæ. The spots occur on the upper side of the leaf and the injury is in proportion to the number of spots; the entire surface of the leaf may become affected by the confluence of the spots. In bad cases the leaves become yellow and defoliation follows. Growers consider that a prime cause of black spot is syringing the plants so late in the day that they do not become dried out by nightfall. Consequently, the most severe attacks of the disease may be expected where the plants are bushy and so tied up that the air does not circulate freely among the foliage.

Where the attack of black spot is light it frequently can be eradicated by removing all the affected foliage and burning it under the greenhouse boiler. To throw the foliage on the bench or under it is as bad as to leave it on the plants. Where the attack has gotten out of hand and the disease has become virulent, removing the affected foliage will not suffice and a spray of ammoniacal copper carbonate is recommended. This material can be purchased of any supply house. It is understood, of course, that any treatment for the disease will be ineffective unless accompanied by proper treatment in the matter of syringing and air. H. O.

PROPAGATING OUTDOOR ROSES.

How shall I propagate outdoor tea roses, ramblers and polyanthas?

E. C.—Ind.

Two methods of propagation by cuttings can be tried. Cuttings containing a couple of eyes each may be taken during July and early August, before the wood becomes too firm, and should be rooted in a close frame; one with a little bottom heat is most suitable. Root in sand overlying loam, or in sandy loam. I prefer sand. The wood for cuttings is of the proper firmness just when the flowers are opening. Another method of propagation is to cut bunches of cuttings averaging six inches long just before winter. Cut off all leaves. Place the cuttings in damp sand in a cellar over winter. In spring, as soon as the ground is open, plant in trenches in well prepared ground, leaving only the top bud appearing above the surface. Firm the soil well about the cuttings. A large percentage of them will root. The roses may also be propagated by budding or grafting, but these methods need more skill than the use of cuttings. C. W.

USE A NICOTINE EXTRACT.

There is a small brown miller which lays its eggs on my plants and the eggs hatch out a light green caterpillar which eats the plants. My geraniums, feverfew and daisies have been eaten by this pest and now it is on the chrysanthemums and snapdragons. The moths are lively and hard to catch. I have used cyanide so strong that it has burned some of the plants, but the moths are as lively as ever. Can you tell me what to do to get rid of this pest?

A. H. W.—Mass.

Try spraying with one of the strong extracts of nicotine. There are directions on the label. I would spray in the evening and wash over the plants early in the morning with the hose. Repeat this until the pest is under control. The pest you refer to is a bad one and several sprayings will probably be necessary. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Propagating Deciduous Shrubs.

There still is time to propagate such deciduous shrubs as viburnums, spiræas, loniceras, philadelphus, forsythias, weigelas, hydrangeas and other varieties from soft-wood cuttings, which can be placed in sand in an ordinary propagating house, or, better still, in a close coldframe, where the cuttings can either be placed in flats of sandy soil or directly in the frame itself. On hot, sunny days spray the cuttings several times a day, but always lightly, and close the sashes about the middle of the afternoon, in order to bottle up a brisk heat. As the cuttings start to callous, reduce the spraying. When they start to root, run the frame cooler and more airy. There is no reason why many country florists should not raise large numbers of deciduous shrubs in this way now, and later in the season evergreens can be propagated successfully in a cool greenhouse.

Cold Storage Speciosums.

Pot up some cold storage speciosum lilies now, to be flowered for Thanksgiving and Christmas. I find they succeed much better in 8-inch pots, in which an average of five bulbs can be placed, than in those of smaller size. The best plan is to half-fill the pots at first and top-dress afterward as growth advances. Keep the plants in a cool pit or greenhouse and be careful not to overwater them until the pots are well filled with roots. Speciosum lilies succeed better if grown 10 degrees cooler than longiflorums and in winter they should not be kept warmer than 55 degrees at night. Speciosums are most useful lilies for cutting and are splendid for design work.

Pansies.

The last week in July or the first week in August is a suitable time to sow a main crop of pansies to be wintered in coldframes or outdoors. South of New York sowings the middle of August would give plants of good size. North of Boston sowing should be made without delay. Except where large numbers are to be grown, a coldframe is the best place in which to sow the seeds. Use a light and well pulverized soil, sow the seeds broadcast, shade and iring the day only, and only when the sun is shining, water carefully, and the seedlings will soon appear above the ground. Gradually inure the plants to full sun and do the transplanting into beds, nursery rows or frames during cool, showery weather, if possible. There will then be few failures.

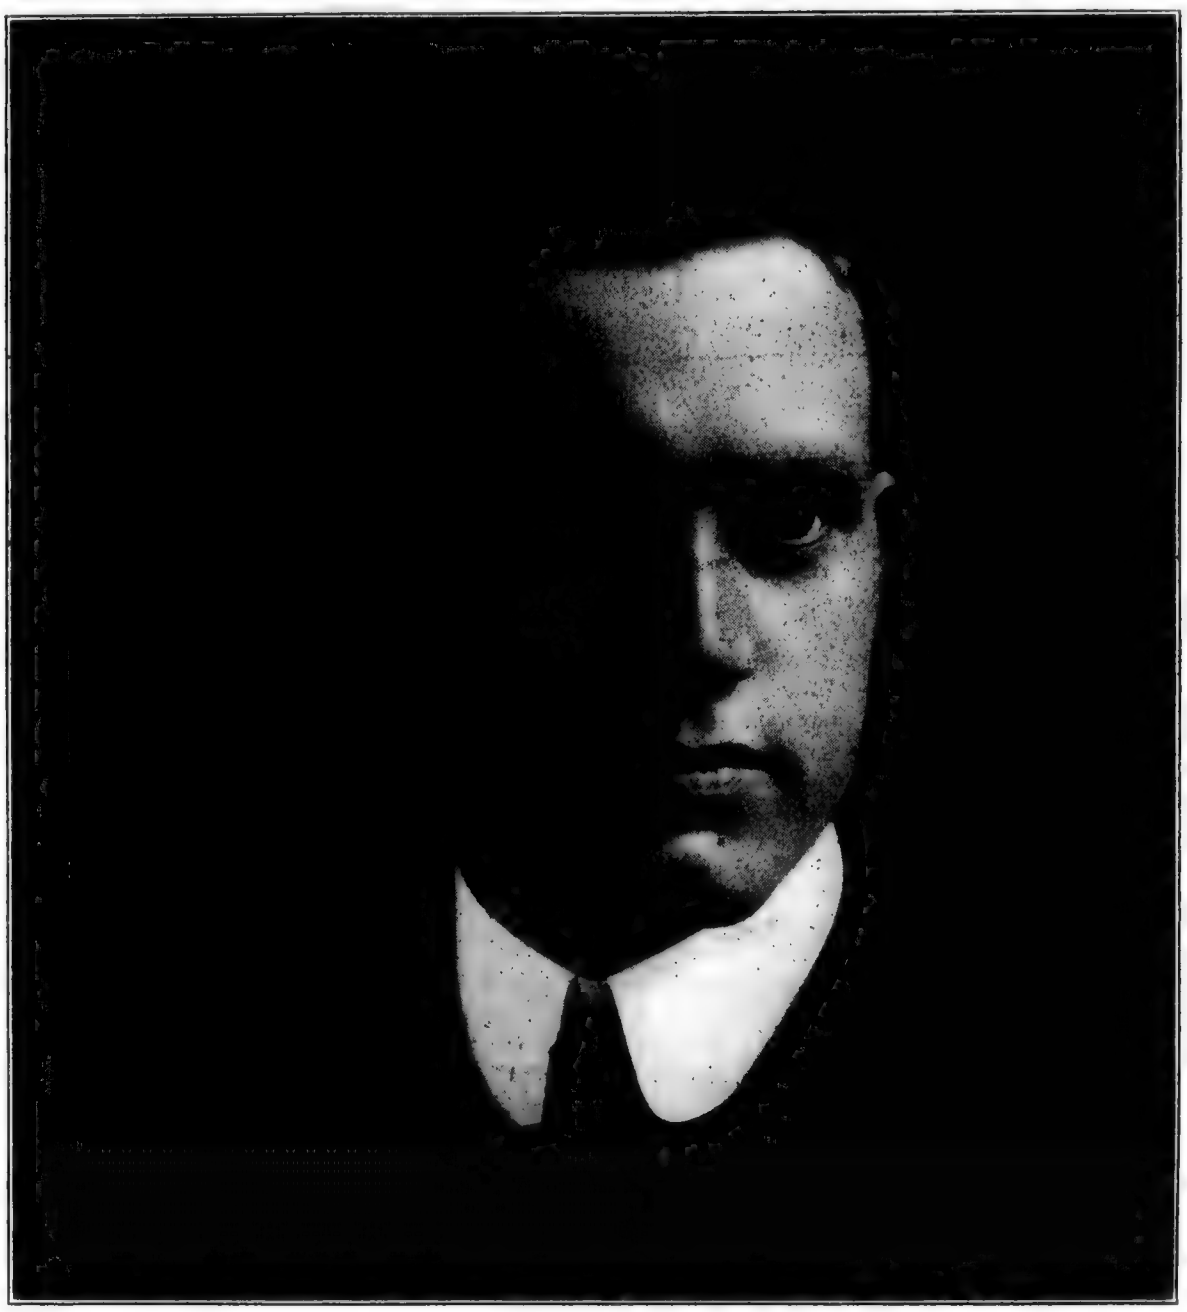
If a few hundreds only are grown, it is just as well to winter them in frames. Plants kept over in this way bloom earlier than those kept in the open, and the early plants realize the best prices. Pansies germinate well outdoors if a partly shaded location is selected for them. I prefer to make beds three feet wide. Sow the seeds broadcast and water later, giving a scant covering of slightly rotted leaves and laying some birch or other brush over these to hold them in position. The mulch is removed as soon as the seedlings appear, but no harm is done if it is not removed entirely.

A number of pansy specialists offer excellent strains of pansies. I find a selection of Giant Trimardeau good. It can be had mixed or in separate colors. As a rule purchasers prefer mixtures, but for bedding separate colors are to be preferred. Do not overlook the tufted pansies or bedding violas. Sow and treat them just as you would pansies. These violas are splendid for bedding. They are longer and far more persistent bloomers than the larger-flowered pansies and make grand ground covers for bulb beds. They are also good for massing and for bordering. Blue, yellow, white and mauve colors of violas can be bought separately.

Miscellaneous Hardy Plants.



The last of July is a good time to make sowings of double and single hollyhocks—the latter are the best—larkspurs, lupines, aquilegias, sweet williams, rockets, agrostemmas, Dianthus plumarius, Alyssum saxatile, hardy candytuft and other biennials and perennials. Everyone with a garden wants some hardy flowers and all country florists should equip themselves to meet this demand. Perhaps this season flower planting is a little neglected, but the wave of hysteria which swept some sections, and the misguided zealots who advised people to tear out flowers and plant food crops, are soon going to be but a memory. I have met many of late who mourned their lack of flowers, and next season will bring these people back into line as flower purchasers. The war also has given us hundreds of thousands of new amateur gardeners, and if but one-fourth of these persist another year, horticulture will get a big uplift and florists will feel the benefit of it as well as nurserymen and seedsmen.

Late Asters.

Are your latest asters planted out yet? If not, select a suitable day and plant them out as soon as you can. When planted cultivate them persistently. It is really astonishing the amount of dry weather asters, and for that matter many other plants, will stand if a fine dust mulch is kept among them. Perhaps you have an empty greenhouse for which you had an insufficiency of mum plants, or some old house which you have not planned to operate the coming winter. Why not plant a generous batch of late asters in such a house? Use a compost such as will grow mums or carnations, ventilate the house freely at all times, give plenty of water, keep the surface soil stirred from time to time, and you will find these a profitable crop. Furthermore, bad weather will not affect the quality of your flowers as it does the outdoor ones.

Poinsettias.

You can continue to put in poinsettia cuttings until early in August. The late cuttings will give plants suitable for making up in small pans. Be sure not to leave the cuttings too long in the cutting bench. If they become at all hard and have long roots when taken out of the sand, it will be hard to make presentable plants of them. Do not allow the plants that are potted off to become hard and potbound before giving them a shift. Good drainage and careful watering are needed for poinsettias, but while we get hot weather and the plants dry up rapidly the chances of injury from these sources are less than we have the first cold nights in September.

A. G. Hecht.

A. G. HECHT GOES TO AMHERST.

The royal road to the position of head of the department of floriculture of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass., appears to lead through the University of Illinois. For a second time the Massachusetts college filled its chair in floriculture from the Illinois institution, when A. G. Hecht, first assistant at the floricultural experiment station and instructor in floriculture, was recently chosen for the position.

Mr. Hecht filled the place at the University of Illinois made vacant by the resignation of A. H. Nehrling, who became head of the department of floriculture at Amherst. Several months ago Mr. Nehrling resigned to become manager of McDonald & Co., Crawfordsville, Ind., and now Mr. Hecht has again become his successor.

A graduate of the University of Illinois, Mr. Hecht was one of the first to receive a degree in floriculture, although he entered the university to take only a special course. After his graduation he was selected as an instructor and was placed in charge of the greenhouses. He had the endorsement of the faculty at Illinois for the position at Amherst.

Mr. Hecht was born in Overland, Mo., and received his preliminary education in the public schools of St. Louis county. After leaving school he worked with his brother, C. Hecht, who has a florists' establishment near St. Louis. He entered the University of Illinois in 1910. He was popular at Urbana and his friends predict success for him in the new position.

Mr. Hecht is a member of the Illinois State Florists' Association and the S. A. F., and is keenly interested in all matters pertaining to floriculture.

Sedalia, Mo.—The Archias Floral Co. entertained its twenty-seven employees at a picnic at the Mill Dam Fishing Club's clubhouse, on the Lamine river, near Clifton City, July 4.

Muncie, Ind.—Silas A. Richison, a real estate broker and until a few weeks ago head of the Riverside Floral Co., died July 10 of a complication of diseases, at the age of 52.

Geraniums

SPOT DISEASE OF GERANIUMS.

What is the matter with the geraniums from which the enclosed leaves were taken, and what is a remedy for the trouble? C. E. W.—N. J.

The leaves were rotted when received. Probably the plants have some spot or leaf disease, brought about by the recent spell of damp, sunless weather. It probably will pass away with clear skies. If the plants are outdoors, pick over the worst affected ones and spray them with Bordeaux mixture. The same treatment will help plants still under glass. Avoid spraying the plants overhead with the hose. Give them plenty of sun and fresh air and run the soil a little on the dry side.

C. W.

GERANIUMS FROM CUTTINGS.

I should like to have what information you can give me on growing geranium cuttings for the wholesale market. I have a small house which is too low for tomatoes or cucumbers and I dislike to see an empty house now or at any season of the year. I have no local trade in cut flowers. Spring bedding plants and lettuce are the crops I grow.

The house referred to is 10x60 and has a sash roof. The walls contain no glass. The beds are fourteen inches from the glass. The house is divided into two parts. One room has raised ground beds; the other has benches. The benched room has one more run of 2-inch pipe and has a temperature of about 52 degrees, 5 degrees higher than in the other room. I am building a lean-to in which I will have a propagating bench. W. R. H.—Pa.

The house you speak of should answer well for young geranium stock. Cuttings from under glass are less succulent than those produced outdoors and for that reason are much less liable to damp off. A temperature of 48 to 50 degrees will suit the geranium stock and 5 degrees lower on cold nights will do no harm.

Arrange your propagating house so that the heating pipes will run below the benches and give a bottom heat of about 60 degrees. Geraniums will callous and start to make roots within a month in such a temperature. The temperature of the propagating house should be from 50 to 55 degrees. You should have four inches of clean, sharp sand in the benches, entirely free from loam and other dirt. If the sand is quite fine and water does not pass readily through it, you can make it more porous by adding some fine coal or coal ashes to it.

As soon as the cuttings have roots an inch long, they are fit for 2¼-inch pots. I would not start propagating until the end of August. The cooler the weather, the less liability there is of cuttings damping off. After taking a crop of cuttings from your plants outdoors, lift the plants carefully and plant them in the house, placing them a foot apart each way. Better reserve at least one-half of the house to be used for your potted plants when they are rooted.

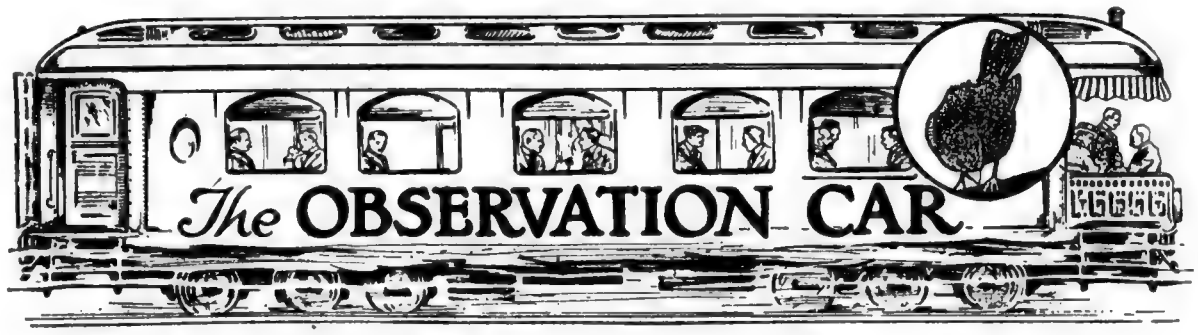
C. W.

GERANIUMS FOR BASKETS.

Can you tell me the name of the geranium of which I am sending you a leaf and flower. Should I buy 2-inch geranium plants now to make good stock for hanging baskets next January? S. L. W.—O.

It is Scarlet Crousse, of the ivy-leaved type. Yes, purchase the plants at once and plant them in baskets as soon as they are established in 3-inch pots. They are not dependable winter-flowering subjects, but they are fine in the spring and summer. C. W.

HYACINTHS FOR CHRISTMAS.



Please let us know whether hyacinths or tulips can be brought into bloom for Christmas. If so, what kind should be used and when should they be started?

R. H. L.—Md.

Roman hyacinths, which usually arrive from France about the end of August, are easily flowered for Christmas. They can be placed in flats containing four and one-half to five inches of soil. A flat 12x24 inches will hold fifty to sixty bulbs. These will flower by Christmas in a night temperature of 55 degrees. Keep them outdoors or in a pit and cover with sand or coal ashes until they are well started, before forcing. The Dutch hyacinths cannot be satisfactorily flowered as early as Christmas.

The Duc van Thol, or dwarf variety of tulip, can be flowered for Christmas. White Hawk and one or two others are also seen in small quantities each year. I doubt, however, whether there is much money in trying to force tulips thus early. A number will come blind and others will be so short as to be of little value. French-grown tulip bulbs will bloom earlier than Dutch, if you can get them. When forced, these early tulips must be kept dark and warm, to draw up the stems. Give them more light as the flowers start to expand.

If a single man named Singleman marries, does he become a benedict, or is he still a Singleman? This is a problem friends of Walter Singleman, of J. J. Coan, Inc., New York, are trying to solve, as Mr. Singleman will be married August 11.

A case of paralysis that for four months baffled the physicians, not to mention two imported specialists, at last has responded to treatment, and Adele C. Heinl, the patient, now is on the road to recovery. The lady is a member of Joseph Heinl & Sons, Jacksonville, Ill.

No need for Robert W. Rahaley, the Detroiter, to improvise any exercises for himself, should he want to reduce, for Mr. Rahaley seems destined to walk the floor considerably. This inference is drawn from the news that lusty boy twins arrived at the Rahaley home July 20.

At least one Holland bulb salesman, still touring "the States," tells prospective customers three government chartered steamers will bring bulbs, one sailing in August, one in September and the third in October. He says he has the information from his home office, the arrangement recently having been made. There is no confirmation of the story.

William Penn has forsaken the madding crowd for a fishing expedition to the Maine woods, but it is certain the Bostonian will at least bring home a bagful of new advertising ideas.

Investigation of the circumstances surrounding the death of Fred Kelly, of Kokomo, Ind., whose body was found in a river near his home, June 27, has brought a coroner's verdict of "probable homicide." A man held in connection with the case has been charged by the police with murder and robbery.

See America first; why go to Europe for adventure? is the advice of Frank Gorly, of St. Louis. You see, Mr Gorly rescued his mother from the fire and stray bullets of the recent race wa at East St. Louis, and a hairbreadth es cape it was, the road to safety leading right through the thickest part of the fighting.

"If all the florists in the United States fare as we did Friday, July 20," writes D. C. Horgan, of the Idle Hour Nurseries, Macon, Ga., "Uncle Samuel will be able to get up several flowery regiments. They didn't do a thing to us but draft our foreman, head bookkeeper, city truck driver and two of the men in the greenhouses. I expect at this rate they will get the boss on the second call."

THE F. T. D. MEETINGS.

Two important meetings for F. T. D. members are arranged.

The first will be a "get together meeting" during the S. A. F. convention at New York, Tuesday morning, August 21, at 9 a. m. sharp. At this meeting suggestions and general discussion of new problems concerning the F. T. D. will be brought up; also a preliminary program for the October business meeting, at Detroit, will be laid out.

The annual business meeting and election of officers will take place in Detroit October 2 and 3. All officers, directors and district representatives should attend a meeting on Monday afternoon and evening, October 1, to arrange the final program of the two days' session.

From and after August 1 the new by-laws and constitution will go into effect, also the new schedule of dues, etc. Members at this date will not be called upon to pay any more into the guarantee fund, but their annual dues will change according to the new schedule.

Albert Pochelon, Sec'y.

FLORISTS' HAIL ASSOCIATION.

At a meeting of the directors of the Florists' Hail Association at Trenton, N. J., June 8, it was determined to renew the corporate existence of the association for a further period of thirty years, in accordance with the laws of New Jersey. Secretary Esler now is notifying the stockholders and members that final action will be taken at a meeting to be held at the Robert Treat hotel at Newark, N. J., at 10 a. m. August 20, the day preceding the opening of the S. A. F. convention. The annual meeting will be held the same afternoon, at the same place, for the usual election of directors and other business, which will include the consideration of a new constitution and by-laws drafted by J. A. Valentine, of Denver.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

A special meeting of the American Carnation Society will be held in New York city August 22 to consider recommendations from the board of directors on a proposition which provides for financial participation by the American Carnation Society in the next National Flower Show. The meeting will be held in the S. A. F. convention hall at 4:30 p. m. on that date. Please arrange to be present.

A. F. J. Baur, Sec'y.

Excelsior Springs, Mo.—The Bever Greenhouses, leased a year ago by L. R. Bever to Poland & Hammond, have again been taken over by Mr. Bever. He is having his houses put in first-class shape and will have a fine stock of plants and flowers for the next season.

Williamsbridge, N. Y.—The Anglin & Walsh Co. has heard with pleasure of the safe arrival in Porto Rico of a shipment of rose plants to Charles S. Hoff, an American sent to Porto Rico to instruct the natives in agriculture and floriculture. The mayor of San Juan has provided a strip of land for the purpose. Having made a start in agricultural matters, Mr. Hoff and his assistants are taking up floriculture, obtaining stock from well known trade firms in the United States.

THE CONVENTION PROGRAM

WHAT is probably the most important convention in the history of the Society of American Florists will be the thirty-third annual gathering, to be held in New York City, August 21 to 23. The war and its effects on the florists' business will be the principal theme of discussion; the committee on storm damage insurance, for which the State Florists' Association of Indiana has been working, will report, and there will be action on the proposal to let the directors elect the secretary. The discussion of the war's effect on business will undoubtedly bring out opinions as to the future conduct of the trade that will be of value to every florist in the country. The convention program for this year provides for but three days, instead of four as formerly. There is no program of entertainment, but New York city is the great amusement resort of the country and the theaters and show places, the parks and other places of interest, together with the sea shore resorts nearby, to say nothing of the large number of trade establishments, will give those who attend plenty to do.

The Grand Central Palace will be the scene of the convention and the headquarters for the trade.

FIRST DAY, TUESDAY, AUGUST 21.

Opening Session.

2:00 P. M.—Opening exercises in Convention Hall.
Convention called to Order by George E. M. Stumpp, president of the New York Florists' Club.
Address of Welcome by Vice-President A. L. Miller.
Address of Welcome by Hon. John Purroy Mitchel, Mayor of New York.
Response, Robert Craig.
President R. C. Kerr's Address.
Reading of Minutes of Executive Board.
Report of Secretary, John Young, of New York.
Report of Treasurer, J. J. Hess, of Omaha, Neb.
Report of Washington Representative, W. F. Gude.
Reports of State Vice-Presidents.
Reports of Standing Committees.
Reports of Special Committees.
Discussion of Amendments to be voted on at evening session.
Miscellaneous Business.
Judging of Trade Exhibits.
Consideration of place of meeting for 1919.

Evening Session.

8:30 P. M.—President's reception in Convention Hall, Grand Central Palace. President Kerr wishes it distinctly understood that the reception will be informal and that the most comfortable clothing will be the most appropriate.
Amendments to Constitution and By-Laws to be voted on:
To amend Article II, Section 2 (a):
"Section 2. Elections and Appointments—
"(a) The president, first vice-president, secretary and treasurer shall be elected by ballot at the annual meeting of the Society, and their term of office shall begin with the first day of January next succeeding the election," by striking out the word "secretary" and adding: "The secretary shall be elected by the directors at the annual mid-Lent meeting and shall serve for one year." (If amendment is approved, the secretary elected at the next mid-Lent meeting of the Board of Directors shall assume office January 1, 1919.)
To amend Article III (b):
"Government, Executive Board—
"Between the sessions of the Society its government shall be vested in an Executive Board, consisting of the president, junior vice-president, secretary, treasurer and the board of directors. A regular meeting of the board shall be held each year about mid-Lent, at the call of the secretary, upon such date as the president may direct, etc.," by striking out the word "secretary" in the third line, after "vice-president" and before "treasurer."
Balloting on meeting place for 1919.
Polls open from 8:30 P. M. to 9:30 P. M.

SECOND DAY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 22.

Morning Session.

10:30 A. M.—Nominations of officers for 1918.
Report of Committee on President's Address.
Report of Committee on Storm Damage Insurance, by A. Rasmussen, chairman. E. G. Hill, J. F. Ammann, Special Committee.

Afternoon Session.

2:00 P. M.—Report of Committee on Publicity, by W. F. Therkildson, chairman.
3:30 P. M.—"The Florists' Business in Its Relation to War Times." A discussion on this important subject will be opened by Robert Craig, Philadelphia.
Judging exhibits, Convention Garden.

THIRD DAY, THURSDAY, AUGUST 23.

Morning Session.

10:00 A. M.—Election of Officers for 1918. Polls open 10 A. M. to 11 A. M., or until all in line have voted. Voting will be done under a new system. There will be four voting places, "A" to "D" inclusive; "E" to "K" inclusive; "L" to "R" inclusive; "S" to "Z" inclusive. Please vote promptly.
Question Box.
Deferred Business.
Report of Judges of Trade Exhibition.
Report of Judges of Convention Garden.

Afternoon Session.

2:00 P. M.—Report of Committee on National Credits and Collections Bureau, by Patrick Welch, chairman.
Discussion.
3:30 P. M.—Report of Committee on Convention Garden, by Theodore Wirth, chairman.
4:00 P. M.—Report of National Flower Show Committee, by George Asmus, chairman.
Discussion.

SPECIAL MEETINGS.

First Day, Tuesday, August 21.

9:30 A. M.—Meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association in Convention Hall, Grand Central Palace.

Second Day, Wednesday, August 22.

9:00 A. M.—Meeting of the Board of Directors of the American Carnation Society in Convention Hall, Grand Central Palace.
4:30 P. M.—Meeting of the American Carnation Society, Convention Hall. All visitors invited.

Third Day, Thursday, August 23.

11:00 A. M.—Meeting of the American Rose Society, Convention Hall. All visitors invited.

LADIES' SOCIETY, S. A. F.

The headquarters of the secretary, Mrs. Charles H. Maynard, will be located near S. A. F. Secretary Young's office in the Grand Central Palace and will be open from 10:30 A. M. until 4 P. M. for the purpose of registration and payment of dues. Annual meeting at 10 A. M. August 22. Adjourned meeting August 23.

FROM FIELD TO BENCH.

Position of Different Varieties.

On account of the abnormally cool weather this summer, carnations have kept up in quality unusually well, and many growers have been slower than usual to throw out the old stock to make room for the new. There has been a good profit in the blooms, too, for the season, and that has added to the inclination to hold on. Not much more time should be lost now, however, in getting ready for the new stock; otherwise the new plants will be late in getting into form next fall, and the grower may lose more than he gained by holding the old plants. As stated in previous notes, there is nothing gained by dilly-dallying along with the bench filling, and the later it becomes the truer this is. Put on every man you can and rush it through.

You should give a little thought to the placing of your varieties. Every greenhouse range has portions that run warmer during the firing season than others, and by planting the stiffer-stemmed sorts in the warmer locations you will have less trouble with weak stems next winter. We find that Mrs. Ward will stand three or four degrees more of warmth than White Wonder, without affecting the stem. All the Enchantress varieties like a cool temperature, while Beacon and St. Nicholas will thrive in the warmer end. Yellow Prince, too, will stand 54 degrees without complaining. The same is true of Merry Christmas.

Shade, Soil and Watering.

The abundant rainfall has kept the field soil in splendid condition for digging. Never before have the plants come up with such a fine root system as this year, and this should be of great assistance to the plants in becoming reestablished in the benches. So far we have added but little to the shade which was on the glass before the old plants were taken out, merely touching up the light spots where the rain had washed off part of the shading. We find that the less shade we can get along with, the better it is for the plants. It requires closer attention during the first three or four days, but the plants come through the ordeal in better condition.

Be sure the soil is in a proper state of moisture before you begin planting. It should, of course, not be wet enough to pack unduly when the planting is done, but it should be moist enough not to draw the moisture from the roots of the plants between the time of planting and the first watering. After setting a few hundred plants, turn the water on slowly and water each plant in well. Of late years we have watered more heavily at the first watering than we formerly did, when we applied more shade to the glass. We find that under the increased light the soil keeps in better condition, even with the heavier watering, and the young rootlets take hold much more quickly, too. After the first watering, little more is applied to the soil, aside from that which drops at the time of spraying overhead. This, too, is gauged by the condition of the plants and is diminished as rapidly as the plants will allow. We do, however, keep the walks flooded well for about ten days and find it a great help in preventing flagging.

Spacing and Depth of Planting.

The distance between your plants in the benches will be gauged by the varieties and the size of your plants. Such varieties as Victory and Gloriosa do not need so much room per plant as Beacon, White Wonder and the Enchantress varieties. You may either plant the former varieties singly, and plant more closely, or you may put two or three plants together and set them at the regular distances. We plant seven plants across a 5-foot bench and set the rows not less than ten, nor more than twelve, inches apart, for the average run of varieties. Be careful about getting your rows straight, for the sake of the supporting later on.

Much has been said in the past about deep and shallow planting. In my opinion both can be overdone. By planting too deeply you will encourage stem-rot, especially if the plants are branched rather low. If you plant too shallowly, the plants will not stand up, and you will have trouble with your supports. We try to set every plant just deep enough so that it will stand up after the soil has been pressed around the roots, and that should be just about as deep as they were set in the field. There should be no need to mention that the plants should be out of the soil as short a time as possible. Keep the digging and the planting going at about the same gait. A. F. J. Baur.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—The Gardiner Floral Co. has purchased the retail store of Herman Bros. at 10 Pearl street and announces that it will continue the business at that address. The company is composed of John S. Gardiner, Louise Herman and Pauline Herman.

Mechanicsburg, O.—The newspapers hereabouts have a style all their own in boosting the local industries. The "personal" items in one of them, for instance, are charged with the power of publicity, C. M. Jack, the local florist, recently making the column in this manner: "C. M. Jack, the greenhouseman, has a fine batch of sturdy plants that so far have dodged the 'high cost,' and the good man is doing his best to anchor fair prices, while everyone else is skylarking with the consumers' cash." Hurrah for the power of the press!

Centerdale, R. I.—Mrs. Ruth A. Mowry has purchased a greenhouse of W. Ritchie, of the Lincoln Park Greenhouses, Hillsgrove, and has been busy putting out bedding stock.

Springfield, Mass.—L. D. Robinson has several thousand bulbs saved, so he will be in fair shape for next season. Large cuts of outdoor blooms are being received at the store from the nursery.

Brockton, Mass.—According to the sign, they are the Central Greenhouses, but an inquiry for the boss will bring out none other than A. L. Lothrop, whose activities have been recorded at other times at other places.

Framingham, Mass.—James Butterworth has something interesting in orchids at all seasons. The stock is in its usual vigorous condition, with promise of abundant blooms later on, when the market will be in a more appreciative condition.

Springfield, Mass.—William Schlatter & Son are remodeling their store. They are stimulating summer business in decorative stock by making special offers in palms. It is a good idea, for it cleans out the old stock and makes room for a new line.

Westerly, R. I.—Conrad Schultz was in Providence and Boston last week on business. Mr. Schultz is making a drive on cyrtomium ferns.

Peabody, Mass.—J. M. Ward & Co. expressed themselves well pleased with business. Cyclamens, always good sellers with them, are doing splendidly.

Pittsfield, Mass.—The new seed store of Frank Howard is conceded to be an ornament to the town. It is both handsome in appearance and complete in arrangement.

Westerly, R. I.—Mark A. Cassidy, superintendent of school garden work, who was seriously injured about a month ago by the overturning of an automobile, returned to his duties last week.

Northampton, Mass. — The regular meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held July 10 at Smith College Botanic Garden, with a good number of members in attendance. The hardy perennial garden was the most attractive feature on this occasion, there being nearly 100 different varieties in flowers. D. J. Gallivan read a paper on table decorations. The only exhibit was well grown Japanese iris in variety from Gallivan Bros.

How R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., Beat the High Cost of Labor in Planting Acres of Dahlias.

PLANTING OUT BY MACHINERY.

Because of the scarcity and increased cost of labor, machines are taking the places of men on the R. Vincent, J r., & Sons Co. place at White Marsh, Md. Plowing is done by tractor, while a planting machine is used to plant out in the field. The tractor and planting machine in operation are shown in the accompanying illustrations.

It was to meet the labor conditions that the Vincent company experimented with the machines. It was discovered that with the tractor one man can do the work of three men and ten horses. Three men and the planting machine can accomplish as much in a day as six or seven men.

The soil is prepared for planting by disk harrows drawn by the tractor. The planter is of the same type that is used for planting out vegetables, tobacco and other plants with the exception that for the plants named there is a barrel of water carried and a little is dropped at the root of each plant. For flower plants, the barrel is removed and a platform installed. "We can plant with this machine about 20,000 2-inch pot dahlia plants and the same quantity of 3-inch pot canna plants," declares Mr. Vincent.

THRIPS IN HOUSE AND FIELD.

I am having trouble with thrips on gladioli outdoors and in two houses, one used for sweet peas and the other for carnations. I am anxious to get the pests cleaned out before the new crop of peas is planted. I do not know whether these are like the thrips in the east. The young ones are straw-colored and cannot jump far. The mature insects are black and about one-eighth of an inch long, and can jump fast. I have two beds of Bonnaffon mums in the sweet pea house and these insects are on them also. I am spraying with Nico-Fume twice a week, syringing with strong pressure twice a day and keeping the ground stirred. This does not seem to help. Will Paris green or arsenate of lead help and at what strength is it safe to use these indoors? Will fumigating with tobacco stems help? The thrips are much worse outdoors than in the houses.

V. G.—Mo.

Try spraying with a mixture of one pound of Paris green, 100 gallons of water and twenty pounds of brown sugar. I have found this quite effective. Do not use Paris green alone. It will not kill the pests and will probably burn the foliage. Neither will arsenate of lead prove effective in itself and it disfigures foliage badly. Tobacco stem fumigation I have little faith in.

C. W.

A FAILURE WITH BEGONIAS.

I have had a failure with tuberous begonias and should like to get some suggestions as to the probable cause. The tubers were started in flats in February and made a fine growth at first, but since they were moved from 4-inch pots into 5-inch and 6-inch pots to flower they have been going down steadily. The root action is poor. The flowers wither as soon as they open and the plants have a sickly apeparance, with sometimes a branch or leaf-stem rotting. The soil used was such as we grow coleus in, consisting of one part leaf-mold, one part rotted manure and three parts old compost from the sweet pea beds. The soil is clay. Was this too light and rich for the final potting? The plants are in a shaded house. The ventilation is not first-class and the temperature runs from 90 to 100 degrees in the daytime, with about 60 degrees at night. Would a cooler house suit them better and should they be carried wet or on the dry side? Does wetting the foliage on bright days harm them? V. G.—Mo.

Your soil was not of the best for tuberous begonias. If you would leave out the leaf-mold at the last potting and use one part old, decayed cow or horse manure and three parts well rotted and broken up sod, with some coarse sand and broken charcoal added where the loam is of a clayey, retentive nature, your plants would do much better. However, I think you have grown them much too warm and close. These begonias need some shade and should not be syringed overhead at all. They want a cool and well ventilated house and the shade must not be heavy. Allow them to dry out fairly well between the waterings, but never let them become anything like dust-dry. Feed well with liquid manure when the pots are well filled with roots. C. W.

PLANTS FOR CHRISTMAS BLOOMS.

I would like to have some plants in bloom at Christmas and want to know when to plant and when to expect blooms of the flowers: Godetias, browallias, lavateras, Scilla sibirica, puschkinias, Anemone Giant St. Brigid, Allium neapolitanum grandiflorum.

L. A. W.—Miss.

You cannot flower Scilla sibirica, Puschkinia libanotica, Anemone St. Brigid, Allium neapolitanum and lavateras for Christmas. Browallias, if sown now, can be flowered at that time, and godetias sown early in August and grown as cool as possible can be flowered for the holidays. None of the plants you name will prove of much value for the holidays. Godetias, even if you can flower them, are likely to be in poor condition during the darkest period of the year. C. W.

SMILAX THE THIRD YEAR.

Will smilax plants do well the third year, providing they are cleaned and transplanted into new soil? The plants are doing splendidly, sending up a fine batch of new shoots. C. A.—Pa.

Smilax may be grown for three years in the same bed if the plants remain in good condition, and probably will give better results without replanting. Remove the rubbish from the surface of the bed and the dead growth from the plants; then give the plants a good top-dressing, with the compost consisting of one part soil and one part cow manure.

Syringe the plants regularly and water them moderately until the growth gets a start. After this season it would be safer to dig out the bed, refill it with new soil and plant with strong, young plants from 3-inch pots. W. H. T.

OLEANDER FOLIAGE BURNED.

I am enclosing some oleander leaves and would like to have you tell me the cause of their condition.

C. E. W.—N. J.

This condition may be due to the plants having been kept too dry while in winter storage. If you water the plants abundantly, feed them with liquid manure or top-dress them and syringe them freely, they will soon make abundant new growth. C. W.

Peoria, Ill.—The continued advance of prices of materials has caused the florists of Peoria to form an organization for the purpose of pooling their purchases in the future. Plans for the coöperative buying were completed at a meeting last week at the Siebenthal & Nelson store.

FROM FIELD TO BENCH.

Position of Different Varieties.

On account of the abnormally cool weather this summer, carnations have kept up in quality unusually well, and many growers have been slower than usual to throw out the old stock to make room for the new. There has been a good profit in the blooms, too, for the season, and that has added to the inclination to hold on. Not much more time should be lost now, however, in getting ready for the new stock; otherwise the new plants will be late in getting into form next fall, and the grower may lose more than he gained by holding the old plants. As stated in previous notes, there is nothing gained by dilly-dallying along with the bench filling, and the later it becomes the truer this is. Put on every man you can and rush it through.

You should give a little thought to the placing of your varieties. Every greenhouse range has portions that run warmer during the firing season than others, and by planting the stiffer-stemmed sorts in the warmer locations you will have less trouble with weak stems next winter. We find that Mrs. Ward will stand three or four degrees more of warmth than White Wonder, without affecting the stem. All the Enchantress varieties like a cool temperature, while Beacon and St. Nicholas will thrive in the warmer end. Yellow Prince, too, will stand 54 degrees without complaining. The same is true of Merry Christmas.

Shade, Soil and Watering.

The abundant rainfall has kept the field soil in splendid condition for digging. Never before have the plants come up with such a fine root system as this year, and this should be of great assistance to the plants in becoming reestablished in the benches. So far we have added but little to the shade which was on the glass before the old plants were taken out, merely touching up the light spots where the rain had washed off part of the shading. We find that the less shade we can get along with, the better it is for the plants. It requires closer attention during the first three or four days, but the plants come through the ordeal in better condition.

Be sure the soil is in a proper state of moisture before you begin planting. It should, of course, not be wet enough to pack unduly when the planting is done, but it should be moist enough not to draw the moisture from the roots of the plants between the time of planting and the first watering. After setting a few hundred plants, turn the water on slowly and water each plant in well. Of late years we have watered more heavily at the first watering than we formerly did, when we applied more shade to the glass. We find that under the increased light the soil keeps in better condition, even with the heavier watering, and the young rootlets take hold much more quickly, too. After the first watering, little more is applied to the soil, aside from that which drops at the time of spraying overhead. This, too, is gauged by the condition of the plants and is diminished as rapidly as the plants will allow. We do, however, keep the walks flooded well for about ten days and find it a great help in preventing flagging.

Spacing and Depth of Planting.

The distance between your plants in the benches will be gauged by the varieties and the size of your plants. Such varieties as Victory and Gloriosa do not need so much room per plant as Beacon, White Wonder and the Enchantress varieties. You may either plant the former varieties singly, and plant more closely, or you may put two or three plants together and set them at the regular distances. We plant seven plants across a 5-foot bench and set the rows not less than ten, nor more than twelve, inches apart, for the average run of varieties. Be careful about getting your rows straight, for the sake of the supporting later on.

Much has been said in the past about deep and shallow planting. In my opinion both can be overdone. By planting too deeply you will encourage stem-rot, especially if the plants are branched rather low. If you plant too shallowly the plants will not stand up, and you will have trouble with your supports. We try to set every plant just deep enough so that it will stand up after the soil has been pressed around the roots, and that should be just about as deep as they were set in the field. There should be no need to mention that the plants should be out of the soil as short a time as possible. Keep the digging and the planting going at about the same gait.

A. F. J. Baur.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—The Gardiner Floral Co. has purchased the retail store of Herman Bros. at 10 Pearl street and announces that it will continue the business at that address. The company is composed of John S. Gardiner, Louise Herman and Pauline Herman.

Mechanicsburg, O.—The newspapers hereabouts have a style all their own in boosting the local industries. The "personal" items in one of them, for instance, are charged with the power of publicity, C. M. Jack, the local florist, recently making the column in this manner: "C. M. Jack, the greenhouseman, has a fine batch of sturdy plants that so far have dodged the 'high cost,' and the good man is doing his best to anchor fair prices, while everyone else is skylarking with the consumers' cash." Hurrah for the power of the press!

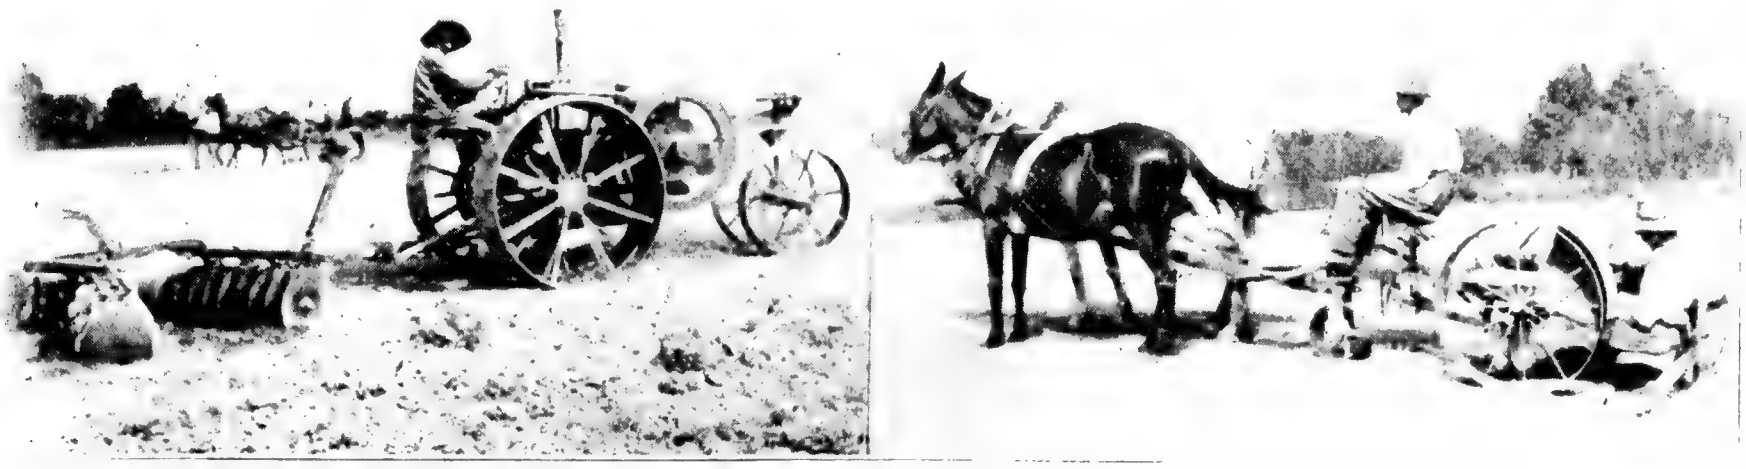
Centerdale, R. I.—Mrs. Ruth A. Mowry has purchased a greenhouse of W. Ritchie, of the Lincoln Park Greenhouses, Hillsgrove, and has been busy putting out bedding stock.

Springfield, Mass.—L. D. Robinson has several thousand bulbs saved, so he will be in fair shape for next season. Large cuts of outdoor blooms are being received at the store from the nursery.

Brockton, Mass.—According to the sign, they are the Central Greenhouses, but an inquiry for the boss will bring out none other than A. L. Lothrop, whose activities have been recorded at other times at other places.

Framingham, Mass.—James Butterworth has something interesting in orchids at all seasons. The stock is in its usual vigorous condition, with promise of abundant blooms later on, when the market will be in a more appreciative condition.

Springfield, Mass.—William Schlatter & Son are remodeling their store. They are stimulating summer business in decorative stock by making special offers in palms. It is a good idea, for it cleans out the old stock and makes room for a new line.



Westerly, R. I.—Conrad Schultz was in Providence and Boston last week on business. Mr. Schultz is making a drive on cyrtomium ferns.

Peabody, Mass.—J. M. Ward & Co. expressed themselves well pleased with business. Cyclamens, always good sellers with them, are doing splendidly.

Pittsfield, Mass.—The new seed store of Frank Howard is conceded to be an ornament to the town. It is both handsome in appearance and complete in arrangement.

Westerly, R. I.—Mark A. Cassidy, superintendent of school garden work, who was seriously injured about a month ago by the overturning of an automobile, returned to his duties last week.

Northampton, Mass.—The regular meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held July 10 at Smith College Botanic Garden, with a good number of members in attendance. The hardy perennial garden was the most attractive feature on this occasion, there being nearly 100 different varieties in flowers. D. J. Gallivan read a paper on table decorations. The only exhibit was well grown Japanese iris in variety from Gallivan Bros.

How R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., Beat the High Cost of Labor in Planting Acres of Dahlias.

PLANTING OUT BY MACHINERY.

Because of the scarcity and increased cost of labor, machines are taking the places of men on the R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. place at White Marsh, Md. Plowing is done by tractor, while a planting machine is used to plant out in the field. The tractor and planting machine in operation are shown in the accompanying illustrations.

It was to meet the labor conditions that the Vincent company experimented with the machines. It was discovered that with the tractor one man can do the work of three men and ten horses. Three men and the planting machine can accomplish as much in a day as six or seven men.

The soil is prepared for planting by disk harrows drawn by the tractor. The planter is of the same type that is used for planting out vegetables, tobacco and other plants with the exception that for the plants named there is a barrel of water carried and a little is dropped at the root of each plant. For flower plants, the barrel is removed and a platform installed. "We can plant with this machine about 20,000 2-inch pot dahlia plants and the same quantity of 4-inch pot canna plants," declares Mr. Vincent.

THRIPS IN HOUSE AND FIELD.

I am having trouble with thrips on gladioli outdoors and in two houses, one used for sweet peas and the other for carnations. I am anxious to get the pests cleaned out before the new crop of peas is planted. I do not know whether these are like the thrips in the east. The young ones are straw-colored and cannot jump far. The mature insects are black and about one-eighth of an inch long, and can jump fast. I have two beds of Bonaffon mums in the sweet pea house and these insects are on them also. I am spraying with Nico-Fume twice a week, syringing with strong pressure twice a day and keeping the ground stirred. This does not seem to help. Will Paris green or arsenate of lead help and at what strength is it safe to use these indoors? Will fumigating with tobacco stems help? The thrips are much worse outdoors than in the houses.

V. G.—Mo.

Try spraying with a mixture of one pound of Paris green, 100 gallons of water and twenty pounds of brown sugar. I have found this quite effective. Do not use Paris green alone. It will not kill the pests and will probably burn the foliage. Neither will arsenate of lead prove effective in itself and it disfigures foliage badly. Tobacco stem fumigation I have little faith in.

C. W.

A FAILURE WITH BEGONIAS.

I have had a failure with tuberous begonias and should like to get some suggestions as to the probable cause. The tubers were started in flats in February and made a fine growth at first, but since they were moved from 4-inch pots into 5-inch and 6-inch pots to flower they have been going down steadily. The root action is poor. The flowers wither as soon as they open and the plants have a sickly apeparance, with sometimes a branch or leaf-stem rotting. The soil used was such as we grow coleus in, consisting of one part leaf-mold, one part rotted manure and three parts old compost from the sweet pea beds. The soil is clay. Was this too light and rich for the final potting? The plants are in a shaded house. The ventilation is not first-class and the temperature runs from 90 to 100 degrees in the daytime, with about 60 degrees at night. Would a cooler house suit them better and should they be carried wet or on the dry side? Does wetting the foliage on bright days harm them?

V. G.—Mo.

Your soil was not of the best for tuberous begonias. If you would leave out the leaf-mold at the last potting and use one part old, decayed cow or horse manure and three parts well rotted and broken up sod, with some coarse sand and broken charcoal added where the loam is of a clayey, retentive nature, your plants would do much better. However, I think you have grown them much too warm and close. These begonias need some shade and should not be syringed overhead at all. They want a cool and well ventilated house and the shade must not be heavy. Allow them to dry out fairly well between the waterings, but never let them become anything like dust-dry. Feed well with liquid manure when the pots are well filled with roots.

C. W.

PLANTS FOR CHRISTMAS BLOOMS.

I would like to have some plants in bloom at Christmas and want to know when to plant and when to expect blooms of the flowers: Godetias, browallias, lavateras, Scilla sibirica, puschkinias, Anemone Giant St. Brigid, Allium neapolitanum grandiflorum.

L. A. W.—Miss.

You cannot flower Scilla sibirica, Puschkinia libanotica, Anemone St. Brigid, Allium neapolitanum and lavateras for Christmas. Browallias, if sown now, can be flowered at that time, and godetias sown early in August and grown as cool as possible can be flowered for the holidays. None of the plants you name will prove of much value for the holidays. Godetias, even if you can flower them, are likely to be in poor condition during the darkest period of the year.

C. W.

SMILAX THE THIRD YEAR.

Will smilax plants do well the third year, providing they are cleaned and transplanted into new soil? The plants are doing splendidly, sending up a fine batch of new shoots.

C. A.—Pa.

Smilax may be grown for three years in the same bed if the plants remain in good condition, and probably will give better results without replanting. Remove the rubbish from the surface of the bed and the dead growth from the plants; then give the plants a good top-dressing, with the compost consisting of one part soil and one part cow manure. Syringe the plants regularly and water them moderately until the growth gets a start. After this season it would be safer to dig out the bed, refill it with new soil and plant with strong, young plants from 3-inch pots.

W. H. T.

OLEANDER FOLIAGE BURNED.

I am enclosing some oleander leaves and would like to have you tell me the cause of their condition.

C. E. W.—N. J.

This condition may be due to the plants having been kept too dry while in winter storage. If you water the plants abundantly, feed them with liquid manure or top-dress them and syringe them freely, they will soon make abundant new growth.

C. W.

Peoria, Ill.—The continued advance of prices of materials has caused the florists of Peoria to form an organization for the purpose of pooling their purchases in the future. Plans for the coöperative buying were completed at a meeting last week at the Siebenthal & Nelson store.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

BLOSSOM-END ROT.

Will you tell me what causes tomatoes under glass to be affected with a hard rot on the under side?

T. H. G.—N. Y.

This is usually caused by a deficiency of moisture in the benches when the plants are setting. Air freely and keep the soil somewhat more moist. Also cut away all needless shoots and shorten back any leaves which cover the bunches too much. C. W.

ONIONS UNDER GLASS.

Can onions be grown from seed under glass? If so, what strain of seed should be used and about what time should a crop, from seed sown now, be ready for the market? What kind of fertilizer is best for them? With what vegetables would a florist be likely to have the best success under glass?

T. H. G.—N. Y.

Onions can be grown under glass, but would hardly prove to be a paying crop and certainly not at this hot season. They start best in cool weather. They need a strong soil, containing plenty of well rotted manure. The best time for you to start these for an early crop would be in December or January, and for an indoor crop yellow sets would prove much more satisfactory than seeds, as the sets make bulbs more quickly.

As a summer crop, tomatoes and cucumbers are the most profitable to grow, while in winter lettuces have first call, with a demand toward spring for radishes, beets and carrots. C. W.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

Real summer weather during the last week brought real summer business, consisting mostly of funeral orders. Wholesalers and retailers are having a quiet time and appear glad of a rest after a strenuous season. There has been no scarcity of any kind of stock.

Various Notes.

Members of the trade in Pittsburgh, or a majority of those who were eligible for draft, had numbers which were drawn toward the end and in consequence will not be among the first to be called into service.

The florists and gardeners still are talking about the automobile outing of the Pittsburgh Florists' Club July 18. More than 100 enjoyed the luncheon served by Mrs. C. A. Armstrong in the garage at her place. Wives of gardeners assisted the commissary committee. At the Allegheny cemetery, Mr. and Mrs. William Falconer had lemonade and cakes for the tourists. These refreshments had just been finished when a storm drove everyone to shelter. It was one of the most enjoyable days the florists of Pittsburgh ever have experienced.

Albert F. Vick, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., is spending his vacation at Buffalo and nearby points in Canada.

W. H. KNULL GOES TO WAR.

When President Wilson issued his call for young men to come forward for service during the war, one of the first in the florists' trade to respond was William H. Knull, of the Knull Floral Co., Tampa, Fla., who enlisted in the army medical corps. As can plainly be seen by the accompanying portrait, Mr. Knull is of the type of young Americans who are certain to give a good account of themselves in the service.

Mr. Knull is of the third generation of the family in the florists' business. His father, F. A. Knull, was one of the pioneers in the business in Tampa and his grandfather is William Terrell, of William Terrell & Son, owners of a greenhouse range at Warsaw, Ind.

The Knull Floral Co. has a range of greenhouses at Twenty-seventh and Nebraska avenues, Tampa, and a retail store at 406 Tampa street. Young Mr. Knull was manager of the latter during the two years previous to his enlistment.

William H. Knull.

As The Review has pointed out, the war is certain to take many young men from the florists' trade. So that the other members of the trade may be kept informed about them, The Review will be glad to publish their names. Send them in.

Chicopee Falls, Mass.—Frank Burfitt is touching up his snug range, doing what many overlook; namely, painting up before planting. The man wielding the brush should not be compelled to "watch his step" among the plants.

Salem, Mass.—W. T. Walke says no grower, either of plants or cut flowers, will have a walkover next season. He sees the small grower squeezed tighter and the stronger one making stronger bids for business. A batch of cyclamens in 5-inch pots, in perfect health, was noted; also the absence of the usual house of begonias. The idea seems to be to grow stock that will thrive in a low temperature.

HAIL HAVOC

North Vernon, Ind.—The second hail storm in two months struck the greenhouse range of Warren Huckleberry July 13. Mr. Huckleberry lost 2,800 feet of glass. May 26 hail destroyed 5,000 feet of glass on the same range.

Waukegan, Ill.—A hail storm July 13 broke 800 panes of glass and destroyed $100 worth of cannas on the place of Theodore Meyer and did considerable damage to the greenhouses of M. P. Dilger. No hail fell in the vicinity of the L. Potter & Son place.

HAIL AT ANDERSON, IND.

Anderson was visited by a hail storm July 13. Hundreds of panes of glass in greenhouses were destroyed and much damage was done to stock in the fields. Those who suffered were B. H. Klus & Son, J. S. Stuart & Son, W. W. Leatherman and Williams & Matthews. The Farmer range, used by Klus & Son, also was severely damaged.

Williams & Matthews lost about 2,000 panes of glass; Klus & Son and the Farmer range about 4,000; Stuart & Son about 1,200 and D. W. Leatherman about 1,000. Glass on the south side of the Williams & Matthews houses was undamaged, not a single pane being broken. Mr. Leatherman's money loss was estimated at $300 on his range and $20 on his dwelling. Stuart & Son's loss was estimated at about the same amount. Crops in many places north and south of Anderson were ruined.

Only a small part of the loss was covered by insurance.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The Market.

Much heat, much rain and some hail have played havoc with outdoor stock, bringing ruin to many of the sweet peas, delphiniums and other flowers. Business is quiet, with funeral work the mainstay. There is an abundance of Easter lilies, and as a result the quotations are as low as $4 and $5. They move well, however, principally in funeral work. Outdoor flowers are plentiful, but serve their purpose well in decorations. Good roses arrive from the east, including American Beauties and Russells of the finest quality, while the local growers are strong on valuable short-stemmed blooms, such as Kaiserin, Ward and Maryland.

Various Notes.

Things have been quiet at the Whitted Floral Co. stores, as is to be expected, although funeral work has kept the force occupied.

Fine gladioli, sweet peas, daisies and gypsophilas are being brought to the market from the Franklin Nursery.

William F. Holmes is particularly proud of a fine batch of pandanus.

Some of the finest short-stemmed roses seen in the city are the product of the Minneapolis Floral Co. E. M. P.

Worcester, Mass.—The Ross Bros. Co. has had a banner seed and implement business.

OBITUARY

Mrs. D. Hannah.

Mrs. Dundel Hannah, wife of H. O. Hannah, of Sherman, Tex., died July 9, 1917. The decedent was a practical florist and during the last ten years specialized in decorative work, in which her skill was second to none. She was in charge of the cut flower department of the Sherman Greenhouses & Garden, H. O. Hannah & Son, proprietors, and as such built up a large patronage.

Mrs. Hannah had many friends, although her home and her family were her all. She is survived by her husband and two sons.

H. B. Buck.

H. B. Buck, of W. E. Marshall & Co., the New York seedsmen, died Saturday, July 21. Mr. Buck was well known in the trade and had many friends in the eastern cities. Interment was at Kensico cemetery, New York, July 24.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

A week of intense heat, with occasional showers, added to the dullness of the market. Shipments of nearly everything were light. As a result prices were steady. Asters arrived in considerable quantities and the usual flood of them is expected soon. Gladiolus shipments are increasing daily. The quality is excellent. The price July 21 ranged from 50 cents to $1 per dozen.

There was a good supply of American Beauties. The quality is better. Top prices were $25 per hundred. There are enough hybrid tea roses in many varieties for the demand. The best sell at $5 per hundred, while the others range down to 50 cents per hundred. The market is well supplied with orchids, good gigas bringing 60 cents each, cattleyas 30 to 50 cents and others as low as $20 to $25 per hundred.

The supply of valley is limited and $6 per hundred was asked July 21. Lilies have risen to $5 per hundred for the selects, with no surplus. Rubrums sell at $3 per hundred, as do the inferior longiflorums. Continued shipments of carnations have caused surprise. Some selected flowers sold last week as high as $2 per hundred. Most of the arrivals, however, brought 50 cents per hundred.

Some fine delphiniums are arriving daily. Sweet peas and daisies are abundant. Feverfew has been supplanted by candytuft. There are quantities of coreopsis, antirrhinum and gaillardia. The rambler rose season is over.

Various Notes.

Entries for the convention bowling contest may be sent to Joseph Fenrich, 51 West Twenty-eighth street. The New York Club still is the recognized champion of the S. A. F. bowling clubs. Philadelphia has entered its protest and challenge.

Walter Mott was in the city July 21. He was on his way to Beacon, N. Y., after a trip through the New England states for Benjamin F. Hammond. Mr. Mott attended the luncheon to the Kilties and Highlanders while here. He will have charge of the Hammond exhibit at the convention.

W. Kenney, of the P. J. Smith force, spent his vacation camping at Croton on Hudson. John Einsel and N. F. Raible, Jr., of the same store, have adopted the vacation plan of a day off alternately during July, as have the employees of several other wholesale houses.

Walter Siebrecht and Clarence Slinn were at Salt Lake City, Utah, en route to California by automobile, when last heard from. They expect to reach the coast by August 1. They will visit San Francisco, Los Angeles, Pasadena and San Diego before returning.

William Iler, of the Edward C. Horan force, is in the mountains for his vacation.

C. H. Totty has had an enjoyable holiday at Atlantic City.

R. J. Irwin leaves next week for Montreal to attend the convention of Canadian florists. J. Austin Shaw.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

The supply of stock shortened last week and with the exception of lilies and Shasta daisies there is not an overabundance. Gladioli are coming in good shape and meet a demand. Asters are not in big supply and the quality is poor. Outside sweet peas clear easily at 40 and 50 cents per hundred. Snapdragons still are in good demand and quality. Garden flowers are abundant. Green is in fair supply. Funeral work has been the principal business and creates a demand for lilies.

Various Notes.

Henry Elsner is in St. Louis on a vacation.

Albert Kempe has a new automobile.

William Ross recently was struck by an interurban car and last reports said his condition was critical.

Those in the trade who were among the first to be drafted were Henry Bohne, John Chisholm, Walter Hansen, Harry Bohne, Edwin Nelson, Edwin Temperley, Charles Pahud, Otto Lawrence, Fred Stolte, Roy Cleavenger and De Witt Mosey.

Harry Pahud has gone to Rochester, Ind., for a short vacation.

Irwin Bertermann is spending his vacation on a motor trip to Chicago.

Paul Janisch, of the Broad Ripple Floral Co., has been twice arrested for speeding and twice has been forced by a policeman to move his car because it had been parked more than the allotted time.

Albert Stanley has a large field of Shasta daisies and is cutting some fine flowers for the local market.

Baur & Steinkamp are shipping large orders of mums and poinsettias. Four of the firm's force were taken by the draft. E. E. T.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

R. S. Carey, of South Hadley Falls, Mass., remarked that it took considerable suasion to combat the nearly general abandonment of the use of flowers at school commencements, but his best stock was cleared, nevertheless.

Chatterton Warburton, of Fall River, Mass., is picking some extra fine sweet peas, in lavender and pink. He mentioned that his grower had ordered from a well known seed house one pound of a standard white, a named kind, and one can imagine his chagrin when the supposed white bloomed pink. "There's the rub," said Mr. Warburton, "but what can we do about it? Shall we be forced to seek the protection of the government, as is now done with insecticides?"

Caryopteris Mastacanthus is making a fine showing at Newport, R. I. It makes an excellent hedge of medium height.

Journeying from Lynn to Salem, Mass., in fact all along the rugged coast of New England, as far as the eye can see, there is the native yellow antirrhinum, or "butter and eggs" as it is known locally, in one solid mass of blooms. All nature is reveling at this time, and it should not be a source of disappointment to the florist if there is not much call for the greenhouse flowers, which are all the more appreciated when nature resigns to him later on. In the meantime the florist should plan to have nature continued indoors, rotary fashion.

Thomas Clark, of New London, Conn., has it figured out that it will pay the owner of a range of glass operated to supply the downtown store to close down next winter, but open up early in spring, with a new stock supplied by the large growers who are equipped for such a purpose. This is the more easy if one can rely on a good grower or wholesaler, as can Mr. Clark, who believes others will adopt this plan if present conditions continue. Business generally has kept up well.

Richard Higgins, of Providence, has been able to strike the happy medium—enough funeral work to keep busy when outside orders are quiet. A new salesroom is planned for next season.

The rose garden at Roger Williams park, Providence, R. I., is not extensive, but it contains the best well known roses, which are now at their best. The ramblers, trained up the electric light poles and elsewhere, are gorgeous. The collection of conifers embraces every variety that will thrive here. The moist season, now warmer, is ideal for all outdoor vegetation, and Superintendent Fred Green is justly proud of his magnificent park.

The W. E. Barrett Co., of Providence, reports a phenomenal seed season. "Bugs?" ejaculated Manager Williams. "The famous fifty-seven varieties are not in it when compared with the stories some of our patrons pour into our ears, but we always have a remedy handy." W. M.

The Review brings results.

THERE seems to be small chance of azaleas reaching this country in any quantity this autumn.

SALES made today sometimes may be at the expense of the future, but the reverse rarely is true: A sale lost by a florist is not easily recovered.

CAMOUFLAGE is the art of making oneself inconspicuous amid one's surroundings. The armies are studying it, but many florists are past masters through long practice.

THERE is a place for Pink Ophelia. The color is more nearly the true pink than in any other rose on the market, and it should prove to be an easy doer, making it useful both to retailers and growers.

WHOLESALERS say collections in the trade have been slower than usual this spring and summer. It is felt that the reason is seen in the florists' higher costs of doing business not compensated for by better selling prices.

THERE has been a big business in chrysanthemum plants this month, the demand coming later than usual because the bedding plant business was late and the benches were occupied longer than usual by the spring crop.

MANY growers talk of dropping geraniums because of the surplus of the last two seasons, and because of the low prices, considered unprofitable under present conditions. But the surpluses last year were local only and this year were due to war and weather. At the same time production increased. It is not fair to blame the geranium.

IN the country towns, as a rule, the spring season figures up a specially good one; it seems to have been in the cities the uncertainties had most effect.

REACHING THE TRADE.

Of no issue of The Review in 1917 have less than 12,000 copies been ordered; for most of the time the press-room order has stood to print 12,500 copies of each issue.

How many florists do you think there are who do not read The Review?

HAS YOUR COAL COST BEEN CUT?

The Review has received the following letter from F. S. Peabody, Washington, D. C., chairman of the Committee on Coal Production of the Council of National Defense:

I have just read with considerable interest your article (in The Review of July 5) on coal prices. Feeling that it was written without a full understanding of the action taken at the convention of coal operators, the latter part of June, I am therefore sending you a copy of the proceedings of that convention.

The enclosure was the statement given the press under date of June 28, which was widely quoted in the daily papers as bringing a material reduction in the price of coal.

The Review replied to Mr. Peabody as follows:

Your letter of July 16, 1917, with enclosure, came safely and has been read with interest.
For your information, so far as we have been able to ascertain, the convention of coal operators has made no reduction in the cost of fuel to anyone in the trade our journal represents, neither to those who buy on contract, by the carload, or at retail. If anything, the action of the operators' convention has had the effect of affirming previously existing high prices.

If any florist has been able to buy coal any cheaper in July than June by reason of the widely heralded "reduction" in prices, The Review will be pleased to learn of the fact and will gladly tell the trade about it.

HERE'S THE GOOD WORD.

What a pleasure it is to meet Mr. Smiley Glad, the apostle of good cheer, who says, "We had the largest and finest stock of chrysanthemum plants this year we ever had and one more insertion of the ad in The Review will clean them up nicely. The call for mums this year was the latest we have ever known, due no doubt to the late season, the heaviest demand coming in the last part of June and first part of July." It is from N. E. Beck Floral Co., Massillon, O., and the writer adds:

"Prices have been advanced on nearly everything here and business is fine, with a good outlook for next season. Bedding plants cleaned up well around here, good 4-inch geraniums retailing at from $2 to $2.40 per dozen. If coal is high 'we should worry,' as everyone expects to pay a high price. We have just finished cutting a fine crop of wheat on our two farms and expect to plant about seventy-five acres to wheat this fall. We sold our last year's crop of 1,800 bushels this spring when the price was up."

There is an old saying that "nothing succeeds like success" and certainly the successful man is far more pleasant company than the chronic complainer.

APPRECIATION.

One of the greatest pleasures in life is knowing that the results of your efforts find favor with those you are seeking to serve. Many, many times your efforts are appreciated and are not in vain, but many times that little pat on the back that sends a thrill through you is withheld. That is why, when letters containing such sentiments come to The Review, the editor and his assistants dig in with renewed vigor and try to more fully merit such approbation as their readers may feel.

The above was caused by that which follows:

Please find enclosed check for $1.50 for another year's subscription to The Review, which we find indispensable, not having missed a single copy for seventeen years.—Knull Floral Co., Tampa, Fla., July 14, 1917.

The Review has many subscribers who have been receiving the paper since the first issue, nearly twenty years.

THE DRAFT.

No man is drafted until an exemption board has passed on his fitness to be a soldier, but the effect on the trade will be apparent by a perusal of the newsletters in this issue of The Review. The already existing shortage of experienced help will be accentuated with each call to the colors.

The draft was a lottery and contained a sporting element which seems to have appealed to the people, but now that chance has played its part it is seen that inequalities have resulted. From certain establishments a number of men are called up for examination, while competitors are not called on to make any present contribution from their staff.

The government expects one-half the men examined will be exempted, but the proportion passed among florists no doubt will be higher than the average, as florists as a class are physically fit and the industry is not an essential one from the military point of view.

There will be several ways in which the effect of the draft will be noted—the scarcity of experienced helpers will lead to the employment of untrained people, especially women; the necessity for a redistribution of the skilled workers will result in advancing wages, slowly, perhaps, but surely; the increasing difficulties of production will result in one or another of two things, lower quality or decreased production.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Although there is no extraordinary business being done in the wholesale cut flower market, the feeling on the whole is one of satisfaction with the way in which the market is holding up. There has been some hot weather in the last few days and with a few more similar ones stock will undoubtedly shorten rapidly.

The quality of the stock which arrives for the greater part is poor and good stock may be said to be scarce. Garden flowers hold an important place on the list. The demand for them is good and much stock is arriving. Carnations play but a slight role, only a small amount of good stock coming in.

There is a fair supply of American Beauties and for this season they are of good quality. The demand is active enough to clear the stock that arrives. While there are many poor quality roses arriving, not much good stock is to be had. Russell continues as the leader. Red roses are probably in next active demand. As Richmonds are scarce and of poor quality, this need is met by Milady, which is in fair supply. Killarney and White Killarney are both scarce. Ophelia is plentiful, sells well and comes in for a good portion of the unsupplied orders for white. Sunburst also is plentiful. Roses cut from young plants are on the increase and a large supply of this class of stock is in early prospect.

Although there still are quite a number of carnations for this season of the year, they are mostly of poor quality. Good stock arriving, however, moves fairly well.

Valley is a little scarce, due to the fact that growers are holding pips back for next season because of the uncertainty of obtaining any more. Orchids are in supply just sufficient to meet the demand. There are enough lilies. Some outdoor sweet peas are arriving and sell cheaply. Peonies are beginning to shorten. Gladioli are quite scarce. There have been fewer gladioli in the market so far this year than in any recent summer. Shasta daisies are plentiful, but there are not one-half so many to be seen as at this time last year. Asters still are scarce. The demand for them is good. An abundance of gypsophila may be seen. It sells well. Centaureas also are in good supply and fairly active demand. Some outdoor stocks are beginning to come in. Pond lilies are plentiful and sell fairly well.

Greens generally are in good supply, but a slight shortage of smilax was to be noted last week.

Express Companies to Curtail Pickups.

Wholesale houses have received notice from the express companies that after August 1 there will be no pickup service after 5 p. m. It is explained that this is to insure full cars on the earlier trains, to relieve the evening congestion and insure each day's shipments getting out that day.

Until October 1 the change will not affect the flower market, because the wholesale houses are closing at 5 p. m., but between October 1 and June 30 probably ninety per cent of the cut flower shipments have gone out after 5 p. m.

The action of the express companies will mean that customers must get their orders in earlier, that growers must get their afternoon shipments into the wholesale houses earlier and that the wholesalers must have the boxes ready at 5 p. m. instead of letting things drag along for an hour or more, as has been done in previous seasons. Either that or hire a wagon for the late orders, which will not pay.

The Draft.

The trade suffered a severe attack of arithmomania last week, when the draft numbers came out. No large number of those in business on their own account were registered, but many had sons on the lists and of the employees in retail stores, in wholesale houses and in the greenhouses fully half are of military age. The marvel, then, is that so few of the trade found their numbers among those to be called for immediate examination.

The first well known trade name to appear on the local lists was that of E. F. Winterson, Jr. His was the one hundred eighth number drawn. Sidney Buchbinder held the one hundred tenth number. Each is married.

A. Miller, president of the American Bulb Co., held the number in the seven hundred fortieth capsule drawn at Washington, 343. He has had four years' training in a military school and will make no claim to exemption. He married after registering.

Here is an incomplete list of the employees of Chicago wholesale florists who held numbers low enough to bring them up with the first call for examination:

A. Lange has been a heavy furnisher of men for the service. Tom White, James Perkins, Walter Sampson and E. "Red" Gannon, who looks after the American Express interests on the Chicago market, holds one of the numbers drawn early.

Grant's Coal Plan.

John Grant, of the Warren Park Floral Co., Cicero, lost most of his profit last season because he had no contract for coal. As prices are just as high now, or higher, he has been looking around for a way to protect his profits. He thinks he has found the way and invites any interested florist to investigate the proposition.

With a friend, he has secured an option on a coal mine not at present being worked at Roseville, O., near Columbus. To buy the mine will cost $50,000 and $25,000 is needed for working capital. There is a million tons of coal in sight, on the surface. The idea is to organize a coöperative company among consumers, each stockholder being entitled to coal at cost of production, approximately $1 per ton; freight rate to Chicago, $1.55. If the stockholders do not need it all, the surplus output to be sold at the market price, fixed at $2.75. Mr. Grant says the mine can be started in thirty days.

Florists approached have been interested, but have felt themselves so ignorant of the subject of coal mining that they did not like to touch it. Mr. Grant wants several to get together and make a quick but thorough investigation.

Various Notes.

Bohumir E. Velisek, formerly financial secretary of the Bohemian National cemetery, has embarked in the retail business and August 1 will open a store at 3511 West Twenty-sixth street. He is equipping his store with a Randall refrigerator.

There are few growers more resourceful or more successful than Henry E. Youngquist, on Foster avenue. When he finds a change in the demand he is quick to get on it and he does not hesitate to plunge. Last season he made a quick switch from carnations to vegetables in a part of his range and cleaned up a neat profit. A year or two ago he found a few vincas along the edges of the carnation benches brought a neat sum of extra money, so he increased on vincas until, it is said, this season he produced 60,000. They did not all sell and the average price was low, but they paid him well.

At the J. A. Budlong establishment Lady Alice Stanley is pointed to as an especially good summer rose. It is equally good in winter, but does not bloom fast enough to suit most growers who have tried it.

Returning from a trip to Buffalo with the Packard, visiting Detroit, Toledo and Cleveland en route, E. C. Amling and family report it one of the pleasantest vacations imaginable. The Ford factory interested Mr. Amling as much as anything he saw.

Walter Adams does not open his new north side store on Sunday during July and August. There are only a few flower stores, even in the loop district, that are not open some portion of every Sabbath.

Mrs. H. N. Bruns and family are summering at Lakeside, Mich. Mr. Bruns and Herman, Jr., go over for the week ends.

Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, recently threw out a house of Wards from which a cut had been taken every day for five years. Probably it is a record.

The Market.

The market has been glutted with all kinds of outdoor stock, which has sold at low prices. Prices, however, have little effect on moving the stock and but a small proportion sells. Heavy rains have hurt sweet peas and other outdoor stock and little that reaches the market is salable.

Gladioli are just coming in and are showing excellent spikes. Loads of helianthus and gaillardias are seen. There is also an abundance of coreopsis, Japanese irises, bachelor's buttons and Dorothy Perkins and Crimson Rambler roses. Most of this stock is of poor quality. Easter lilies are plentiful. The cut of outdoor roses is diminishing and indoor stock is prominent. The latter moved a little more freely at the end of last week. Prima Donna is the favorite, with Ophelia and Sunburst close seconds. Shasta daisies, candytuft and sweet williams are plentiful. The supply of greens is in excess of the demand.

Various Notes.

N. A. Hallauer, of Ontario, was a visitor last week. He is growing some fine gladioli and expects to cut 100,000 spikes.

C. W. Curtis, of Irondequoit, is installing a new Lord & Burnham Co. boiler. This is the third boiler the same company has installed for Mr. Curtis, who says all have given satisfaction. At the local Lord & Burnham Co. office it is said there have been many inquiries concerning the new boiler.

Malcombe White, foreman of the H. E. Wilson greenhouses, is on a 10-day automobile trip through the Adirondack mountains. Mr. Wilson has some excellent Easter lilies in his houses. They find a ready sale.

Visitors to the trade last week included Irving Goldstein, of Goldstein & Futterman, wholesale florists, New York city; L. E. Miller, of the Fort Wayne Box Co., Fort Wayne, Ind., and H. G. Hall, of the Raedlein Basket Co., Chicago, Ill.
